Conley, wholesale commission-dealer in fresh and frozen fish, Long Wharf, Boston, has been soliciting consignments from Island fishermen and is this season again to the fore, being better able than ever to handle consignments. This week happens to be the anniversary week of the sailing of the brig Fanny from Charlottetown for California in the year 1849, to search for gold. The account of this adventurous voyage has been recently told at length in the Magazine Guardian through the publication of the diary of the late E. Love. But the recurrence of the anniversary will make an interesting reading of an article, from the pen of Archibald McKay of Moncton, which will appear in Saturday's Guardian.

SHIPPERS of fresh and salt fish can find a ready market for their shipments by writing to Austin Haley, 176 Atlantic Avenue, Boston, who is soliciting large consignments this year. Mr. Haley has had much experience in the fish trade and makes prompt returns. Shippers desiring stenclis should write at once and also get from the firm full information as to the safest and quickest ways to make shipments; so that when fish arrive they will be in first class condition and ready for the market.

REFERENCE has from time to time been made in The Guardian to a famous old stove, now in the possession of Robert Muirart, Cape Traverse, with which is connected a great amount of historic lore. This stove was specially imported to heat the Presbyterian church in this Province. It however, though a very interesting piece of property did not give the congregation satisfaction, and was expelled. Any way the story, well told, will be given in full in the Magazine Guardian on Saturday. It is well worth looking for.

The attendance was very large at Stellarton the other day at the Welcome meeting to Colonel Gaskin, General Secretary of the Salvation Army in Canada, and Brigadier Turner, the new Provincial Officer on Saturday evening. Rev. Dr. Tuft presided over the meeting, and Rev. Donald Matheson gave an address. The addresses by Colonel Gaskin and Brigadier Turner were both interesting and instructive. And the officers in charge of the Salvation Army Barracks at Stellarton, Capt. McKim of St. John, and Capt. McLeod of Prince Edward Island, spoke in a pleasing manner. The Westville band were in attendance.

Not long ago the press of the Dominion contained mention of a trip made by Leslie Seller, a trooper of the Royal North West Mounted Police to Wager Bay, an inlet away up to the north of Hudson's Bay. The trip was for the purpose of collecting customs from a whaling ship which was trailing there and was for hundreds of miles over a barren land in stormy weather and was made with a dog team and an Esquimaux guide. Bitter privations and hardships were endured and the official report turned in to the department by Trooper Seller was thought to be of such interest that it was copied by the press. It is a matter of pride to be able to claim Trooper Seller among the Islanders, who bring credit upon their native home wherever their loyalties may be cast. He is a brother of Mrs. W. B. Prowse of this city. The Guardian has been so fortunate as to have been given the personal diary kept by Trooper Seller during his trip and also a fine lot of photographs taken during the journey. These furnish material for an illustrated article which will appear in the Magazine Guardian on Saturday.
