Straw Hats that are Cool and Classy

If you want something smart and snappy in a cool and comfortable straw hat, well, that's the kind we have here—the kind we are going to tell about. We have all sizes in the popular sailor straws and tips, they are made from different quality materials and priced according to quality, but in every case you will find the price extremely low considering the quality of the hat.

Of course you want a straw hat for the warm weather, and it is only natural for us to assume that you want the best hat your money will buy, if we're correct, then we'll ask you to call and see our showing before making a selection.

Today is the day to call because some of the best values are here now, but we can't assure you that they'll be here but a very few days more—they're too good to last long.

Reuben Tuplin & Co. Kensington P. E. I.

—Immediately after the outbreak of war we read a good deal in German journals about the necessity of working out a scheme of fashions, male and female, which would be German in inception and execution, and would liberate the women from the thraldom of Paris, and the men from the yoke of London. It was an inherently absurd notion, and although numerous public meetings were held by both sexes and university professors lectured learnedly on the psychology of purely German fashions, the movement fizzled out and nothing more was heard of it.

But the fashion patriots have now resumed their agitation, and we have columns about their activities, and the success of their recruiting. They avoid as much as possible pinning themselves down to definite shape, and styles, and colors; all we know is that they must be German, and an outgrowth of the "folkpsyche" whatever that may mean.

Three articles of apparel for men are most in the minds of the committees for sartorial regeneration—hats, boots and coats; for women, hats and skirts. Meetings have been held, and one of them held at the Kaiserhof Hotel in Berlin congratulated itself that "German artists" had created a number of successful models, which had been much admired by foreign buyers. But not the faintest indication regarding the shape of these creations.

Paragraphs headed "War Kitchen" now occupy a prominent place in all German newspapers. The National Female Service Committee are responsible for most of these, and they consist for the greater part of men of the better classes, the middle classes and the poor. We give a week's bill of fare for the middle classes as follows:—

Monday—Midday: Roast sausage with beer sauce and potatoes in their jackets. Supper: Bread and red sausage (blood), with celery salad.

Tuesday—Midday: Mustard potatoes and red sausage. Supper: Bread and cured cheese.

Wednesday—Midday: Cutlets of crushed oats and potato salad. Supper: Potatoes, bacon and onions.

Thursday—Midday: White cabbage and beef with potatoes. Supper: Oat cocoa and sandwiches.

Friday—Midday: Soup from grated raw potatoes and cured pudding. Supper: Vegetable salad and fried potatoes.

Saturday—Midday: Green peas, carrots and potatoes. Supper: Bread and hashed herring and onions.

USE OF PERSONAL PRONOUN
All the uncultivated appear almost always to be talking about themselves but it is easy for a superficial observer to exaggerate the extent to which this is the case. For instance, if you discuss with a cultivated man a question of morals or the wisdom of a particular line of conduct, he will tell what he thinks right or what he thinks wrong, or what strikes him as wise or foolish, with very little use of the personal pronoun. He can see the situation from the outside. But if you discuss it with an uneducated man he is incapable of the detached attitude of mind. The uneducated man can only picture the circumstances to himself by picturing himself in the midst of them. What he thinks right and wise is, no doubt, often a great deal better and wiser than what he would actually have done. "Such and such was foolish. Now, had it been me, I should have done so and so." To the sophisticated listener he gives an expression of appalling self-righteousness, and even, perhaps, of hypocrisy; but the impression is a mistaken one. He argues in the vocative case, because it is the one in which he can most easily express himself.

attract confidences from those who have no weakness for making them. We are not alluding to these persons, who, by a method of deft cross-questioning, manage to abstract information from busy people. This latest invention is a device by which telephonic conversations are automatically recorded. It is a small instrument which may rest on the desk and is called the telescribe. While the telephone is being used this instrument, started by the pressing of a button is recording the conversation on a wax cylinder. A needle attached to a delegate diaphragm at the end of a receiver inscribes the vibrations upon a wax cylinder. When the conversation is finished the cylinder is sent to a typist and is run off like any other phonograph record—the typist describing the conversation on a sheet of paper. This may be kept for reference. If the speaker's voice is desired to be preserved, the wax record may be kept. Mr. Edison says that the instrument could be attached to any telephone and that it would record conversations with the speakers even 3,000 miles apart. In business houses the telescribe is expected to be of much value. When a person called for is out of his office the person calling him may speak his message and it will be recorded on the wax cylinder so he may read it when he returns. It will be valuable to newspaper reporters who obtain interviews or statements by phone, and to the persons interviewed, and it is expected to be of great service in court cases, where in the past it has been almost impossible to use telephone messages as evidence.

MET AT A FAIR.
Two Irish farmers who had not seen each other for quite a long time met at a fair, and, of course, they had heaps of things to tell each other. "Shure, it's married I am," said Murphy. "You don't tell me so," said McGinty. "Faix, yes," answered Murphy, "an' I've got a foine healthy boy which the neighbors say is the very picture of me." McGinty looked for a moment at Murphy, and then said, "Oh, well, what's the harum, so long as the bairn's healthy?"
