Montague News

A new beginning has been made in Scouting in Montague. Carl Douglas Nicholson, a tried Scout, is to be Troop Leader and Harold Landry is to be assistant Scout Master. Malcolm Beck and Arnold Lane are assisting the leaders for the summer months. The Scout committee is presided over by Mr. Donald Samson. The committee includes: Mr. A. G. Parks, Rev. A. S. Adams, Rev. B. Crawford, Rev. W. Maclean, Rev. P. Richardson, Father Owen Egan, Mrs. St. Claire Trainor and Mrs. Elmer Dunning. Every effort should be made by the parents to support this movement. Scouting has been exceedingly beneficial to our youth in the past and should be so in the near and distant future.

The Bergmann Construction Company have 1600 cords of "mills" in Georgetown, awaiting shipment. A ship is due about July 15th. Two other ships are scheduled for later dates.

The first game in the King's County Softball League was played in Montague Tuesday evening between Peake Station and Montague. Time was called at the end of the seventh because of darkness. The score at that time was Montague 16, Peake Station 15. An additional inning and a half were played under protest from the Montague team. A committee consisting of two members from each team decides all controversial issues.

Score by Innings

Montague	0	15	24	3
Peake Station	0	23	0	15	24	3

RUB OUT THAT COLD WITH—MINARD'S LINIMENT

Fortunately she had matches in her pocket. She struck one, and by its flickering light saw an electric light switch in the far corner of the little, bee-hive shaped hut. She pressed it down and then looked around her.

The place was sparsely furnished. There was a bed, a chair, and a screen which served as a wardrobe. Under the bed was a basket containing a few articles of clothing. She looked at the bed and saw

RACING DRIVER

By Alexander Campbell

"Here we sit," she remarked brightly, "remarkably like birds in the wilderness—while our men folk go hunting old bones! It's rather an idiotic situation, really!"

Sully guided the dredge into the steeple bridge on the river to let the vessel down stream. It is understood the dredge will work here all summer. Two scows have been added this year and this will let digging go on all the time without having to empty scows as in other years.

She urged the girls to lie down, and nobly set an example, though she knew that it was fantastic to think of sleep.

The girls reluctantly agreed. But a few minutes later Florence found herself standing at the window, gazing up at the mountain.

Rupert was out there. She had a sudden swift premonition of danger. He was so eager to get to the scene of his great discovery, he might hurry on ahead of the others, go off the path in the darkness, perhaps fall.

She had not left the hostel undisturbed, as she had hoped. Dorothy also had been unable to rest. Crossing to the window she had fancied she had seen lights above the mountain far above.

This would be the little party. Then another light, this time close at hand. As she watched it, the light went out. Dorothy saw a figure steal rather furtively away from the hostel. It wore a man's coat and hat, but it was unmistakably a woman.

The height told her that it could not be Christine.

For a moment she thought of rousing Christine. Then she realized that by the time she did so, Florence would be well on her way.

She must act at once.

She ran out of the house and after some difficulty found the path. But the figure had vanished. She peered ahead into the darkness. She saw nothing. There was no sound but the angry murmur of the swollen stream.

She hesitated for a second. Then she went on along the path after Florence.

RUPERT SHOWS HIS SPIRIT!

"The storm is passing away!" There was jubilation in Frank Carter's voice.

"We'll make it!" he said.

The three men toiled up the steep path that led to the top of the mountain. Rupert was in the lead, and professor came next, and Frank brought up the rear.

Professor Ellington breathed somewhat heavily.

"A good thing that I got plenty of exercise on board ship!" he panted. "If my muscles hadn't been limbered up, I should have been having considerable difficulty by now! Even as it is—"
