Dorothy Dix Says—

WIFE'S SLACKS DISRUPT HOME AS GRANDMA'S HOOKS AND EYES

Girl Should Not Be Forced Into Marriage Against Her Will By Soldier Or Mother

DEAR MISS DIX—Because our grandparents and our great-grandparents stayed married when once they took each other for better or worse, we imagine that marriage must have been a much more satisfactory institution then, with fewer disillusionments in it than it has nowadays, and that Grandma and Grandpa came nearer to being each other's heart's desire.

Apparently such was not the case. Evidently husbands in the past got on their wives' nerves even as they do today, as is proven by the following letter which was written a couple of weeks ago to a Western editor, and in which a disgruntled wife unobscured her wrongs as follows:

"I married my husband eight years ago, at which time my gowns were fastened in the back by eight hooks and eyes. Now, sir, you will readily conceive that when she is in a hurry to get ready for the day, she has to have the hook-and-eye herself. Whilst a spinster she obtains the aid of her sister, mother, cousin, or Betty, the maid. When she becomes a married woman, the hook-and-eye duty naturally devolves upon the husband.

"For the first year of my marriage, like an affectionate mate, my husband hooked-and-eyed the whole eight. The second year he somewhat peevishly resented his attention to seven; the third year he only hooked six; the fourth five; the fifth four, and so on decreasing until this morning—the anniversary of our eighth wedding day—he dropped another hook and eye, intimating to me that for the term of his natural life he should restrict himself to the one at the top.

A READER.

SLACKS AGGRAVATING AS HOOKS AND EYES

ANSWER—This piteous letter shows that marriage and husbands and wives have not basically changed in the past century, for while we have a situation of the zipper for the hook and eye, we have devised other sources of discord which are just as good for a domestic brawl.

It is true that husbands do not nowadays have to fasten up their everloving wives, as Mr. Runyan would say, in the back of a morning when they are in a hurry to swallow their coffee and catch the eight o'clock train, but they have to look at their wives coming down to breakfast in slacks, which is not only a spectacle calculated to take any man's appetite, but is often made the worse, when the lady is slim, by her having on her own pet pants. No married man now has any clothes that he can call his own. And to this day, the husband is expected to do the ironing on his own pet pants. No married man now has any clothes that he can call his own. And to this day, the husband is expected to do the ironing on his own pet pants.

DEAR MISS DIX—I have been engaged to a lieutenant in the Air Corps for over a year, but I have not seen him for eleven months. He is coming home for a few days the first of next month and insists that I marry him as he is going over soon. I do not want to marry him, but my mother goes into a fit every time I object to it and goes on with her ranting and raving that if I don't marry him she will hate me for the balance of my life.

Now I am fond of this boy and he says that unless I marry him he will get a divorce and marry another girl. I don't want to get married now, and I think it is far wiser to wait until after the war. I am 19 and have a fairly good position. What shall I do? OLIVIA.

ONLY LOVE JUSTIFIES FURLOUGH MARRIAGE

ANSWER—Your mother seems to be more in love with the boy than you are, which is something that not infrequently happens. I have known more than one case where a mother forced her daughter to marry a youth for whom she had conceived a middle-aged passion. In order to keep him near her, but the plan never works out satisfactorily. Being a pet son-in-law doesn't seem to appeal to the bridegrooms for long, and it all ends up in a nice family row.

Nothing can justify a hurry-up furlough wedding except the young couple being so much in love that they are willing to gamble with Fate and risk a lot of subsequent disillusion and regret for a few days' happiness. You evidently are only mildly fond of the boy, for his sake and your own refuse to let your mother force you into marrying him. Pay no attention to her threat that she will always hate you. She doesn't mean it. Neither does the boy mean what he says when he tells you that if you don't marry him he will be reconciled to death. He would call for the doctor in a hurry if he even got a scratch.

I think both he and your mother are taking a very unfair advantage of you in appealing to your sympathies. Refuse to be a victim, and keep hold of your good common sense and refuse to become their victim.

NEVER INTERFERE WITH OTHER'S HOME LIFE

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I have a very close friend of whom I am very fond. About five years ago she married a man in his middle forties. At that time she was a business woman, a widow with children whom she had reared to be fine boys and girls.

This second marriage has turned out very badly for, although her husband gives her a lovely home, she is nothing more than a housekeeper around with other women. When my friend married this man, she knew all about him and her one thought was to reform him, but she has failed, and what I can't understand is why this fine person still lives with him and tolerates him.

I feel so sorry for my friend, and I think she ought to divorce him. She would not be on the mercy of anyone if she left him as she has a daughter she could go to live with. Do not tell me to let her make the decision. But tell me why he wants her when he is not even kind to her? Why he married her when he is the best he is? And do you really think she could have a spark of love for the fellow? MARM MOTHEE.

ANSWER—Listen, lady, don't you know that interfering between a husband and wife is the most dangerous pastime in which you can engage? If you try to save your friend from her husband, the chances are she will get in your hair and pull out every strand of your permanent.

As for why a man marries a woman when he doesn't even mean to be faithful to her one moment. Nor does anyone know why a middle-aged business woman, who old enough to know better, marries a man to reform him. But they do, and nobody can help them, or save them from the consequences of their folly.

But it is hands off for your friends.

IDLE CARS
This winter many Canadian motorists are putting the family car in the garage and locking the door until spring. By doing this they will save gasoline for more important jobs and keep the tires in better shape for the spring and summer months. Many people forget that all batteries in cars standing idle will slowly discharge. Consumer information service points out that in time serious injury will result if batteries remain in that condition, and it is not practical to keep a battery charged by running the engine when the car is not being used. Just as the car should be put upon blocks to save the tires, the battery should be removed from the car, and charged at the service station on an auxiliary charge so that it will be ready for use when needed.

"What's in this bottle?" asked the customs officer.
"It's only ammonia," stammered the passenger.
"Oh—!" sneered the customs officer, removing the cork and taking a long sniff.
"It was!"
HE SHOULD BE
The colonel of a battalion billeted in the country was invited to a neighboring farm for lunch. He astonished the farmer by eating two small roast fowls. Later, while walking in the farmyard, he noticed a cock strutting about, and remarked:
"By gad, that's a proud bird."
"So he should be," answered the farmer. "He has two sons in the army now."
