

The House And the Owner

Are told of a house which was continuously insured against fire for thirty years. Yet fire never touched it. During the thirty years, however, no less than seven people died in that same dwelling. This case shows the difference between life insurance and all other forms.

Fire may come, but death must come. If fire insurance is a necessity, and we think it is, then life insurance is very much more necessary. If a possible danger should be guarded against, how much more an inevitable one. Your family can be protected against the inevitable by a policy in

NARROW ESCAPE

Mr. Dennis Rooney, and Mr. Charles McKenna, Cherry Valley, had a rather unpleasant experience a few days ago. They had been visiting relatives in Cape Traverse, and when about to return home, their host asked if they would care to view the Car Ferry pier at both Carleton Point and Cape Tormentine. They gratefully accepted the kind offer and one morning set out in a 30 foot launch, towing a small dory behind. The pier at the island side was examined and the launch was then started upon the immense structure. They then crossed over to the New Brunswick side, anchored the boat at some distance from the shore and put out in the dory. The pier and breakwater were duly inspected, permission having been granted to go over them. After spending some time chatting with the foreman they returned to the dory and launched it. By this time a heavy gale had sprung up. The waves rose high into the air and broke thunderingly upon the beach. Unaware of the grave danger they were in, the launch drifted out close to the launch and attempted to drift down to it. The dory instantly swamped and the three occupants struggled in the cold water. None could swim. It appeared as if their doom was sealed, but Dennis, clinging to the upturned dory, and supported courageously recovered the oars and slipped them beneath the arms of his fast falling companions. This prompt action undoubtedly saved their lives. A strong current turned them shorewards. At last, when giving up in despair and about to lose their support which their numbing hands could scarcely hold, bottom was reached. Scarcely exhausted they fell upon the sands. Chilled to the marrow and terror stricken at such a narrow escape from death the bedraggled men applied for admission at several New Brunswick coast farm houses, but the doors were closed against them. The occupants evidently imagined they were German spies in disguise. Weakened from the severe cold they had to travel three miles before a suitable shelter was reached. Mr. Rooney and McKenna passed through the city yesterday and when interviewed gave a thrilling account of their desperate struggle against heavy odds. Their escape was almost miraculous as they were burdened with heavy fall clothing and high sea boots.

LOYAL CANADIAN READY TO FIGHT AND RETURN

The following letter has been received from Robert McPhee formerly of Iris, P. E. I., who during the first few months after war was declared was employed on a British Transport until last March when he joined the British Army and has since been training in England but expects soon to be sent to the trenches.

Essex, England,
Oct. 16, 1915.
Dear Cousin Will:—I will now answer your welcome letter which I received sometime ago. I was glad to hear that you were all well as this leaves me at present. I was very much surprised to hear about cousin Robert's death. It was very sudden indeed. He and I went out west together last year and had a fine trip. I can't tell you a great deal about my experience since I broke out but I can say that I was in Scotland last New Year and certainly heard them talk Scotch. I have also been in the land where the Shamrock grows and I have been in France where I could not understand anyone but myself. I would like to write you a letter but it will be to the front but that may not be for a little while yet. I have been training now for eight months and was away last week for a course in rough-riding. I like the army fine, it is a good life, there is lots of sport such as football and things like that. I guess the war won't last forever and when it is over I will go back to my "aue" country the land of the Maple Leaf. I often see Zeppelins and lots of other kinds of war-machines flying over head. I never was much good at writing but I will try to write you a longer letter the next time. I suppose Uncle Jim is still at the Savoy House. Remember me to him and all enquiring friends.
Your cousin,
ROBERT MCPHEE.

Interesting Details Of Life in the Trenches

Private George A. Bears, formerly of Peter's Road, Lot 63, has written an interesting letter to his mother, from which the following notes are taken:
Somewhere in France,
Oct. 17, 1915.
Dear mother,—I am well hoping these few lines will find you all the same. I received Jennie's, Lulu's and your letters while I was in the trenches. The shells were flying pretty good when I was reading it. I did not get your tobacco yet. It's pretty hard to get what you want here. Some can understand English, the most of them can't; the only thing and the best way I can get along is take the things I want and give them what I think it is. I tell you what we slaughtered some Germans the last time we were in, about 500 killed in front of us, besides the wounded. We fired some smoke bombs out of our trenches towards them, you ought to see them get out of their trenches and run. They thought it was gas. I am in a Belgium house writing this letter, and after trying to talk Belgian for 10 or 15 minutes I got a pen and ink from her and some paper on which I am writing to you. After the heavy shell fire for over a week we are glad to get out for a rest. The boys are all well, and getting along fine. We had some nice fine weather the last week or ten days and hope it will continue although it don't look much like it to-night.
Well, this is Sunday. We held service this morning in a cow pasture. I would like to be home to go to church with you to hear Rev. Ewen McDougall. It won't be long, though, till we will be home for good. I did not see Lewis yet as he is in 12 miles from where I am. It's pretty hard for me to get there to see him, but I may run across him some time or other. Well, mother, as my company is on duty this afternoon I did not feel like going, so my Lieutenant excused me from going as I was exerting him around to different places, since we came out of the trenches when the rest were resting. There are four or five Belgians gabbering away alongside of me, so it is hard for me to write. We will be used to the like of that by the time the war is over. Well, mother, the lady has just given me a cup of good coffee and bread and butter. I tell you what it goes right to the place. Well, I must close and get back to my billets but before the company gets back. Will fore the company gets back. Give my love to papa. So good-bye; from your ever loving son,
GEORGE.

GREECE IS WITH ALLIES.

PARIS, November 11.—The French Government received today from Premier Skoulioudis, head of the new Greek cabinet, formal assurance of "neutrality with the Entente powers," and his personal assurance of "neutrality with the Entente powers." Premier Skoulioudis expressed the hope that the feelings of the Entente Powers towards Greece would not be influenced by attempts to impair their friendly relations. The communique also stated that the Greek premier to Athos Romanos, Greek minister at Paris, which the minister delivered to Jules Cambon, general secretary of the Foreign Ministry. The telegram follows: "Athens, November 3.—Please give to the President of the Council the most formal assurance on my part of our firm resolution to continue our neutrality, with the character of the sincerest benevolence towards the Entente Powers."

"Please add that the new cabinet accept as its own the declaration of former Premier Zaimier regarding the friendly attitude of the Royal Government as to the allied troops at Salonika. It is too conscious of the real interests of the country and of what it owes to the powers which are protecting Greece to swerve from this line of conduct. It hopes that the friendly feelings of these powers for Greece will not for a moment be influenced by malicious and misleading news purposely circulated with the main object of changing the good relations that exist between the Entente and Greece."

On Monday evening Nov. 8th, a large number of guests assembled at the home of Bert Paquet, Souris, to celebrate the golden wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Angus MacCormack the parents of Mrs. Paquet. The night was spent in dancing, while selections from the piano, interspersed with vocal solos and duets whirled the time pleasantly away for those who were not disciples of Terpsichore.
