BERLINER GRAMOPHONE.

The greatest invention of the age. The cheapest music known. It will play all kinds of music and last a life time. Think of hearing one of the world's greatest singers, sing you a song for LESS than the fifth of a cent. The voice is plain and clear, as though the singer were in the room. Bag pipe tunes that will make a Highlander's blood tingle and Dialogues that will make the children laugh for days after they have heard them.

Only the famous maroon records used; they require no care. A child who can wind a clock can run it. Nothing to go astray. Every instrument guaranteed for five years. Records exchanged free providing you order and pay for two new records for each one you return for exchange. Write or call at Central Music Store.

THE GUARDIAN SHORT STORY

ENDERBY'S WAY

By SIDNEY H. COLE

Copyright, 1904, by T. C. McClure

THE AGENT ROSE FROM THE GRAVEL, SPUTTERING PROFANE INVECTIVE.

It was eminently characteristic of Enderby. He had known Miss Carmichael scarcely three months, but to Enderby's mind time was not always measured by the clock.

They were walking homeward from the opera. Miss Carmichael had insisted that they walk. It was a perfect night, and the distance home was short. When they entered the quiet street where Miss Carmichael lived Enderby fell into a brown study. The girl beside him was talking in sprightly fashion of Nibelungen and Rhine maidens, all of which was lost to Enderby's ears. They had reached the substantial Carmichael residence when Enderby came suddenly from his reticent silence—so suddenly, indeed, that he interrupted the girl in the middle of a sentence.

"Look here," said he, "I'm a pretty steady going sort. I've a fair income and a steadily growing clientage. I want an establishment of my own. Why wouldn't it be a good idea for us to marry?"

Miss Carmichael was so thoroughly astounded that she found no reply until they had reached the top step and Enderby was struggling with the latchkey.

"Good gracious!" was all she managed to gasp even then.

"I mean it," said Enderby. "Think it over if you like. I don't necessarily expect my answer right now."

"Good night, Mr. Enderby," she said rather coolly, and the door swung shut behind her.

Enderby strode down the street toward the club with never a qualm in his mind and never a tremor beneath his immaculate shirt front, but that was Enderby's way.

After that he saw Miss Carmichael as usual and for several weeks made no allusion to the matter. At first the girl was furtively uneasy in his presence, but as the weeks went by and he said nothing more she regained her usual composure.

One late March evening as they sat before a blazing fire in the big hall Enderby suddenly took up the conversation where it had ended weeks before.

"Have you thought it over?" said he.

Now, this question was entirely irrelevant to the talk of the moment.

"Have I thought what over?" Miss Carmichael asked.

"Marrying me," said Enderby tersely. "I'm a very practical man, not romantic and that sort of thing, you know. Still, I flatter myself I'd make a fairly good husband. You'd have a house and servants very much like this establishment here."

Miss Carmichael's eyes opened wide. Was ever a girl wooed in such cold blooded fashion? she wondered. She spoke calmly, yet her voice was not as firm as she intended.

"Mr. Enderby, I thoroughly respect you, but as for marrying you"—

She paused, and Enderby went on.

"Perhaps you want to think it over a little longer. That will be all right. I'm not one of the impatient sort. Good night."

He slipped on his overcoat, took his hat and stick and departed, leaving the girl divided between amazement and wrath.

Spring was well advanced before Enderby broached the subject again. It was one evening just as he was about to depart from the Carmichaels, and it was with the usual abruptness.

"Have you decided to marry me yet?" said he.

Miss Carmichael looked at him steadily, and this time her voice was very firm.

"No, Mr. Enderby, I have not. Nor do I think I ever shall decide to marry you."

"That's all right," said he.

At the door he turned.

"If you should change your mind let me know."

To this day Miss Carmichael is undecided whether the tears she shed were of mirth or of anger. She felt certain this was the end of it. But Enderby came as heretofore to take her driving or to the theater or to vespers on a pleasant Sunday. His manner was quite unchanged. It was as if nothing whatever had happened.

Summer came, and the Carmichaels left the city for their pretty country place in a quiet village. Every second Saturday Enderby came down to dine with them. The portly head of the house of Carmichael entertained a genuine and outspoken liking for the reserved young man, and Mrs. Carmichael was voluble in his praises.

Miss Carmichael said nothing, but she recognized some potent fascination about this strange, reticent man and his stranger method of wooing. Sometimes it amused her. Sometimes it angered her. And yet his plain words and his frank strength appealed to her more strongly than she cared to admit. What manner of man was this? she asked herself countless times, and each time a definite answer was wanting.

* * * * * * *

That Saturday afternoon Miss Carmichael was alone in the house. At 4 o'clock a tree agent came to the door and by persistent efforts to sell his goods was making himself very obnoxious. At that juncture Enderby came up the walk. He heard the voices in the hall and took in the situation at a glance. He laid a hand none too gentle on the agent's shoulder.

"You're annoying the lady," said Enderby severely.

"Is that any of your business?" said the man, with heated insolence.

"None at all," said Enderby cheerfully, whereupon he took the man by the collar, marched him to the porch and helped his undignified retreat to the gravel walk.

The agent rose from the gravel, sputtering profane invective. Enderby started down the steps.

"Haven't had enough, eh?" said he, and something in his tone and expression forced upon the irate agent's understanding a realization of the better part of valor. He fled the field in inglorious haste. Enderby returned to the hall.

"Oh," said Miss Carmichael in tones of relief, "he was positively insulting! I'm so glad you came."

"That's all right," said Enderby.

And then—perhaps something in her voice suggested the course—Enderby tempted fate once more.

"Going to marry me?" he said.

Miss Carmichael laughed hysterically.

"Of course I am, you funny man," she said. "How on earth can I help myself?"

Enderby looked puzzled.

"You're quite sure you want to?" he asked doubtfully.

"Very, very sure, dear," said Miss Carmichael gravely.

"Good!" Good enough!" said Enderby, with hearty satisfaction. It was Enderby's way.

A CHAMPION PORKER.

Our Victoria correspondent writes that George Holm, veterinary surgeon of that village recently killed a pig six and a half months old that tipped the scales when dressed at 385 lbs. George has fed many good ones, but this his last effort beats the record. The breed was a cross, Chester and York. Mr. Callbeck and Mr. Connolly will have to look after their laurels

The firms of Wright Bros, Victoria, and McLean & Cameron, Crapaud, have loaded quite a number of schooners with produce recently for Nova Scotia ports The following cleared last week.

FERROZONE SAVED HIS LIFE!

After reading the following letter from Mr H. A. Thurston, of 228 Vermont street east, Indianapolis, Ind., no one will ever doubt the merit of Ferrozone:

"A year ago I took the grippe.
"I was as weak as a child.
"I was no longer able to eat.
"My blood was thin. My cheeks were white and hollow.
"Doctors gave me all kinds of medicine, but none of them brought me strength.
"My friends said I was wasting away with some slow disease, and I bid them good-bye.
"Then I heard of the wonderful Ferrozone.
"After three days it gave me an appetite. I gained strength and became cheerful. Under Ferrozone I improved steadily. I am well today. I weigh fifteen pounds heavier than ever before, and feel like a new man.
(Signed) "H. A. Thurston."

The secret of growing strong is solved by Ferrozone. It supplies actual nourishment. It braces you up quick, supplies new energy, brings back the snap and fire of youth.
