FIRST NORMAN ABBEY A RECENT DISCOVERY
(Canadian Press)
LONDON, March 23.—The church built at Westminster by Edward the Confessor, who died in 1066, was the first in the Norman style to be erected in England, and recent excavations in the neighborhood of the Unknown Warrior's tomb have brought interesting fragments of it to light. These consist of the plinth course of the south arcade of the Norman nave which was pulled down about 1375 when the existing fabric was begun. The discoveries include the lower courses of the great north-east pier of the Norman south-west tower, and as the position of the old transept is already established, the old problem of the length of the earlier nave is solved; it was about 214 feet. So far the remains of one double bay have been found, and they comprise the tower pier, a smaller intermediate pillar, and a big composite pier, slightly less, of course, than that of the tower.
Two further excavations are intended, one to the east of the work already opened in the hope of discovering another bay, and the second near the present west wall on the chance of finding the north-east corner of the tower. Unsuccessful efforts have been made to find traces of the old north arcade, and it seems almost certain that this must have occupied the line of the existing arches.
When the explorations have been completed it is proposed clearly to mark on the present pavement the form and position of the Norman work, and a detailed plan is being drafted by the surveyor of the Abbey. Photographic records are also being made. It is interesting to observe that the axis of the Norman church diverges slightly from that of the present building. Nothing is known of the small Saxon church which preceded the Confessor's building beyond that it was a sad state of dilapidation.
Edward the Confessor, King of the English, was so called on account of his reputation for sanctity.

DOG SENDS OUT OWN SOS FOR ASSISTANCE
WEATHERLY, Pa., March 20.—A canine "SOS," broadcast steadily on a nearby mountain for several days and nights, was effective in freeing a hunting dog trapped when his chain caught between two rocks.
William Miller lost a valued hunting dog during a walk through the woods. Several days later a farmer informed him that a dog's cries could be heard steadily from some part of the mountain.

OLD STAGE HAD UNIQUE "CLASS" FARE SYSTEM
DENVER, Colo., March 23. (U. P.)—The old stage coach line which ran between Georgetown and Denver in the gold rush days has probably the most unique "three class" fare system ever known.
First class fare was $7; second class was $3; and third class was $1.50.
All classes occupied the same seats—2+2.
When the stage came to a steep hill, the driver shouted:
"First class passengers, keep your seats, second class passengers, get out and walk. Third class passengers, get out and push."

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, March 19—Gold production in the British Empire in 1930 reached a total of approximately $309,500,000, according to the London correspondent of THE CAPE ARGUS. The last occasion on which it rose above $300,000,000 was in 1915, when the total was $303,000,000, and since then it has been as low as $223,010,000 in 1922. These figures have been compiled by experts. It is stated that the Empire production of gold last year compared with $298,500,000 in the previous year, the increase being due chiefly to an expansion of $7,000,000 in the Transvaal production, which for the seventh successive year established a fresh record. Canada also contributed to the increase, her output by $3,500,000 to $44,500,000.
Thanks mainly to the larger production in the British Empire the world's gold production is $13,500,000 larger, the total being $427,500,000. This, however, shows a reduction of $58,000,000 compared with 1915, when the world's output reached the record figure of $485,500,000. Since then the output of gold by foreign countries has declined by $62,500,000, while that of the British Empire has increased by $6,500,000.

CAT AND WHITE RAT ARE STAUNCH FRIENDS
SAN BENITO, March 23. (U. P.)—Strange friendship of a cat and a white rat who live at the home of Mrs. J. R. Collins here is causing a great deal of comment.
The animals are on the best of terms and frequently curl up together to sleep.
But when tabby gets hungry she scours the neighborhood industriously and usually returns with prey—large rat.
