IN MEMORIAM

WALTER MCLELLAN

Again and still again are we reminded of that awful universal tragedy of 1914-1918. Frequently we meet heroes who show in death proof of the cruel wounds that they sustained while defending civilized humanity against educated barbarians. In this instance it is the death of Walter McLellan, Indian River, that awakens in our mind thoughts of that stupendous tragedy.

What, courageously facing the relentless foe, he was severely wounded. He received the best medical treatment and had the advantage of the most tender nursing, but could not say the relentless power of death, and he was forced to yield up the vivifying spirit at Campbell Hospital on October 5.

His funeral was held from his paternal home on Monday, October 10, and included a military service. High Mass of Requiem was celebrated by the Pastor, Rev. Reginald McDonald, St. Mary's, Indian River, assisted by Rev. W. B. McDonald, Hope River, Major Sinclair and John Burns who had helped to carry the wounded hero off the field at Arras, and part of the Summer-Rede Legion took part in the service.

The King's Vine

The King's famous vine in Windsor Great Park is a wonderful sight now.

It is bearing a thousand bunches of grapes, all in splendid condition, averaging two pounds each. Many turn the scale at two and a half pounds.

They will be cut in a week or two's time, and hundreds of bunches as well, as usual, be sent by the King and Queen to hospitals and other institutions.

The vine is one of the longest in the kingdom, but despite its great age it has put forth many new shoots during the year.

Mr. George Spring, the vine-keeper, says that expert gardeners who have seen it recently express surprise at its fine condition.

Some of the best bunches from it are sent to Buckingham Palace and other royal residences.

A VALUABLE SERVICE

The report of the Minister of Agriculture for Canada for the year ended March 31, 1932, contains an interesting summary of the work of the Publications Branch in the distribution of publications market reports and related services. It shows that during the fiscal year under review a total of 9,918,737 items of published material were distributed, an increase of 2,137,936 over the preceding year.

Cemeteries For Cats And Dogs

Dogs and cats get more decent burials in Great Britain than in almost any other country in the world.

Fifty years ago London had dog and cat cemeteries in almost every part of the city. They are all full today, so new ones have been opened recently after a concerted demand.

Almost within a stone's throw of Buckingham Palace is a cemetery that few Londoners know. It is where the royal pets of King Edward and Queen Alexandra are buried. Hidden by a neatly-trimmed hedge, it lies in the grounds of Marlborough House, within easy reach of the Hall. It is unused now, but is still cared for by gardeners.

Among the inscriptions on the headstones are:

"Joss, the favorite Japanese dog of the Prince of Wales, died July 10, 1884, aged two years."

"Muff, the favorite dog of the Prince of Wales, died May 14, 1885, aged two years."

"Tiny, the favorite dog of the Prince of Wales, died March 16, 1881, aged 13 months."

Even the princess's rabbit found a last resting place in the cemetery for one headstone is inscribed:

"Bunny, the favorite rabbit of the Princess of Wales died June 8, 1881."

King Edward's pet terrier, Caesar was one of the last dogs to be buried in the private cemetery. Some of the tombstones bear poetic eulogies to the dogs and cats.

This Is Service

Speaking of dogs, almost every dogowner has frequently wished for someone to exercise his pet at times when he is too busy.

In London the post office will exercise your dog for you. You merely go to the phone, ring the post office messenger service and in a few minutes a uniformed boy will call to escort Bosco on his morning walk in Hyde Park. The fee is nominal.

The post office also will do marketing for busy housewives. Their messengers are trained to know bargains in foodstuffs and the proper way to select a steak at the butcher's. They execute special orders with amazing efficiency.

London messenger boys also are a rodent to the mother who hasn't time to wheel little Junior around for the sunshine and air, and to nurses who want a day off. They can handle a perambulator with

"Maintain this Security"

CAN you think of any other investment which has stood by you like your Life Insurance?

In prosperous years, you perhaps did not pay much attention to it. But, in recent times, when other investments have slumped heavily—you know that your Life Insurance has never depreciated a dollar.

Life Insurance has stood by you and your family in the troublesome yesterdays—and it will continue to stand by you and yours in the unknown tomorrows.

Maintain this security of Life Insurance. Make sure of a guaranteed livelihood in later years when your earnings have ceased. Make sure that your wife and children will be safeguarded from want and privation, if you are not here to support them.

Statesmen—bankers—editors—all agree that the family watchword for today should be: "Hold Fast to your Life Insurance".

English Couple Build Their Home In 18 Months

Mr. Alan Peters and Miss Lois Wells are the proudest and happiest pair in England. They have just finished and furnished a perfect and unusual seven roomed bungalow in the country near Leatherhead, and are to be married.

After a two weeks honeymoon in Devon they will return to the home which they designed and built, and for which they made the furniture. The foundations and every brick were laid by their hands.

They have made a home worth $5,000 for about $1600.

It all happened because they wanted to be married and have a home of their own. They could not afford to have one built for them. "We will build ourselves one," they said. What could be simpler?

Mr. Peters owns a flower nursery which keeps him busy from early morning till six at night. Mrs. Wells is the efficient manageress of a baby linen shop in Leatherhead. But the fact that they already had full time jobs disturbed them not a whit.

For eighteen months, every night after six and over week ends they labored. It was really an odd little chair in the local movie house that gave them the courage to begin. It inspired Mr. Peters, who had never made anything in his life more intricate than a wooden box, to copy it. It was a great success. From that he went on to make a dining room suite.

This dream house which the pair have built round the furniture is called "Marita," after the horse that brought Alan Peters enough money to complete the ambitious scheme.

"Marita" was today unlocked for the Star's Correspondent's inspection. We entered a gate made from the stout back of an old church pew, picked up at an auction sale, walked through a garden that was a blazing mass of snapdragons on green lawns, into the most artistic hall, with a wide seat of oak, designed and made by Alan Peters.

Then Miss Wells showed me the dining room. "The leather of these dining chairs was cured skin when we bought it," she said. "Now look at it." The chairs were like the well upholstered pieces of an expensive dining room suite.

During the building operations Miss Wells acted as laborer, mixing the cement and carting bricks on wheelbarrows, but in the decorating she was the painter.

The only things not made by these two were the gas-piping and electric wiring. Even the drainage is their work.

GLENROY INSTITUTE

The monthly meeting of Glenroy Women's Institute was held Wednesday evening October 5th, at the home of Mrs. Jos. Egan, with nine members and five visitors. The meeting opened by singing the Institute Ode and the roll call was answered by riddles. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved and signed. It was resolved that the ice cream freezer be used only in the district hereafter. Reports of committees were then given. The program of the evening was, gramophone selection and step-dancing by Miss Helen Weir, and Miss Katie Hughes. The next place of meeting was not decided on.
