Parliamentarians On Tour Of Halifax

HALIFAX, July 6 — (CP) — Touring parliamentarians from Britain and Bermuda today saw Canada's young navymen in training for the grim Atlantic battle as they inspected H.M.C. Dockyard and H.M.C.S. Stadacona on the heels of a harbour tour that made them miss by scant minutes the worst harbour collision in the history of the port of Halifax

This morning, the motor launch bearing the group of delegates passed the scene of the sinking of the Halifax shipyards tug Erg only half an hour after the little vessel was run over by an Allied freighter with the loss of 19 of the 24 aboard.

Later they inspected the shipyards plant and repair facilities, while the other employees were still stunned by the loss of their comrades, who had set out for work on a freighter in Bedford Basin.

After luncheon with Rear Admiral L. W. Murray, Commander-in Chief of the Canadian Northwest Atlantic, the group of parliamentarians made a thorough inspection of the Stadacona Training establishment.

There they saw young ratings and officers in training learning the tricks of casting, machining, drafting, engineering and the dozen and one things that go into the successful operation and maintenance of a fighting navy.

They also inspected training processes and devices that must for the present remain secret, and saw mock battle conditions reproduced for young officers still to savor the thrill of their first sea command.

From there they went to historic government house, where they were received by Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. H. E. Kendall and other government and civic officials.

Later they visited three representative service hostels in the city, and were entertained by the army at dinner. Tomorrow they visit the Dartmouth Operational R.C.A.F. station, and military establishments to wind up their visit here.

Engine-less Craft Flown 3,200 Miles by R.A.F. Part Of Cargo For Russia

A revolutionary world's flight record was established recently when an R.A.F. Transport Command plane towed a glider loaded with freight across the Atlantic from Canada to England. The first air train to span the Atlantic or any other ocean, the glider and its tow plane flew 3,200 miles in 28 hours.

With a full crew the glider carried a maximum load of war freight, including approximately a ton of vaccine for Russia, crates of aircraft, radio sets and spare parts for tanks.

Crew of the towing plane were R.A.F. pilot, Flight Lieut. W. S. Longhurst of Montreal; co-pilot and navigator, Flight Lieut. C. W. H. Thompson, R.A.F., of Tauranga, New Zealand; Pilot Officer R. W. Wormington, R.A.F., flight engineer of Stone, Staffordshire England; Radio Officer H. Gordon Wightman, R A F Transport Command, of Vancouver, B. C. Wing Commander H. Furrer, R A F., engineering officer of the Atlantic Group of the Transport Command travelling in the plane in a supervisory capacity.

Crew of the glider were S Ldr. R. G Seys, D.F.C., R.A.F., pilot of Montreal; S Ldr. F. M. Gobeil, R C A F., co-pilot of Ottawa and Montreal.

The flight was made to obtain information on which the technical research and development branch of the R.A.F. Transport Command can proceed with its investigation of the possibilities of ultimate military or commercial air train service over the Atlantic.

Experiments leading up to the flight began in Canada about five months ago. The glider used for the experiments and the flight was an 84 foot wing span type C.G. 4A designed by an aircraft firm and built by a plano manufacturer. The towing plane was a twin-engined Douglas D.C. 3.

The tow rope used between the glider and the plane was made of 100 yards of nylon with a 7,000 pound breaking strength. It cost $400.

Flights in Canada were made in some of the worst weather known in [illegible] for [illegible] years and [illegible] flying experiments were carried out.
