A WOMAN'S TESTIMONY

A Belgian Nurse Loui in Praise

OF BRITISH SOLDIERS

She is Determined to Tell the Truth in Spite of Attempts to Prevent it.

The London Times has the following:—The Brussels Reforme, with an impartiality to which we have not for some time past been accustomed in the Belgian press, publishes some interesting extras from the introduction to the volume which Mme. Bron, one of the Belgian nurses who went out to tend the Boer sick and wounded, is about to publish on her experiences in South Africa, both with the Boer forces and afterwards in the British camp when her ambulance fell into our hands at Jacobsdal. Mme. Bron says:—

"First of all, I wish to state that, having gone out to help the Boers, I continued to serve them in spite of my growing disgust, because they were the weak side as a nation, and the helpless side in regard to ambulance organization. But I wish also to declare at the outset that I protest with the utmost indignation and the utmost love of truth against the abominable falsehoods poured out against the English. Having been their prisoner for three weeks at Jacobsdal, and having served with them during that period, I imagine I am in a position to judge of them.

The Boer is not wicked, and he is fairly hospitable. He is a brute, or rather a stupid, overgrown child. He is obstinate and boastful. As for his honesty and morality, we had better not dwell on those points. His pride is beyond conception, and his power of lying. . . . As for his respect for women, I could relate details and furnish evidence, but it would be too nauseous. . . . It was amongst British soldiers—I say it and repeat it, and no power on earth will induce me to deny the truth—it was amongst them that I found myself once more at home, surrounded by that gratitude, that affection, to which the humble folk of my own country had accustomed me. How good it was to be treated like a fellow-creature after six weeks of cruel toll in a Boer hospital, full of typhoid patients, without ever a single word of kindness."

Mme. Bron then proceeds to discuss the courage of the Boers, and on this point she intends in her book to quote the dying testimony of Colonel de Villebois Mareuil, "whose despairing words will show that gallant soldier to have gone forth to his death as cruelly disillusioned as the humble nursing woman who has now returned to Europe." The Boers fought with the tenacity of farmers or peasants all over the world who had been told that the English were coming to take their farms away from them. Had they been satisfied that their lands would have remained untouched with a present of money thrown in they would never have fought at all. A Boer General had himself told her that it would be a blessing for the country if the English took possession of it, though he, nevertheless, went out and fought bravely against them, and did not give away strong positions as so many others did from obstinacy, pride, or, to put it mildly, indifference. Mme. Bron concludes her introductory chapter by repeating that attempts already made to terrorize her will not deter her from carrying out the truth, out of sheer disgust at the mendacious exaggerations which have held up the Boers as legendary heroes to the admiration of Europe, and the British soldiers to public opprobrium in the most outrageously calumnious light.
