Noisy Session of Hungarian House

BUDAPEST, Hungary, June 18.—(AP) The vice president of the Anti-Communist Freedom Party, shouting about the din of an uproarious session of Parliament, declared today that Ferenc Nagy was forced out as premier because he opposed measures which "would end private enterprise in Hungary."

Vince Nagy, the Freedom vice president, declared that if "constitutional procedure" has been followed, Lajos Dinnyes, pro-Communist member of the Small Holders Party, never would have been chosen as Hungary's new premier. Vince Nagy is not related to Ferenc Nagy.

Communist reaction to his speech was even more violent than last week, when Suloyk delivered his stinging denunciation. The leftists heckled and boomed, but some Small Holders deputies applauded.

Reports circulated, meanwhile that the Grand Executive Committee of Parliament will meet soon, in defiance of Communist wishes, to discuss the coup.

Interesting History Sparks Circus was founded way back in the year of 1890 by the late John H. Sparks and on its initial tour was titled "John H. Sparks' Old Virginia Shows". Early in his career it transported on wagons, hauled by teams of horses over the dirt roads. Later it grew in size until it became a large railroad circus. Always it enjoyed the distinction of being a clean show, worthy of the patronage of the discriminating class of circus patrons. Today it is larger, finer, and greater than ever, "The Circus Beautiful", with all new streamlined equipment, presented by a galaxy of international arena and circus stars, under a mammoth flame and waterproof "Big Top" in three rings and a large menagerie of wild animals, the famous Sparks herd of performing

Sparks Circus to Return Here July 5 After Long Absence

The announcement of the forthcoming engagement of the Sparks Circus is like the return of an old friend. For many years the Sparks Circus itinerary included the Maritime Provinces and the appearance in the many cities throughout the Maritimes was looked forward to as one of the season's big holidays. The Sparks circus has not been here since 1928 and everyone will welcome it back again. The circus will give four performances on the Island, two in Summerside on Friday, July 4th and two in Charlottetown on Saturday July 5th.

New Owner

During the fall of 1929 the circus was sold by the Sparks family and the new owners operated it for the next few years, then came the war and it was found impossible to give the high standard of performance Sparks had always presented, in-as-much as this could not be done the show was removed from touring during the war years and remained off until last year when Jimmy Edgar purchased the show and put it back on the road. James Edgar is the youngest circus owner-manager in North America. During his four years with the U.S.A. air force he dreamed that he would return to fill a childhood ambition of owning a circus and today he is presenting the Sparks circus under the same high standard that it was presented for over fifty years.

elephants, trained horses, dogs, ponies and goats. This year's Sparks Circus is transported from town to town on its own special railroad train of double length all steel cars. Among the many outstanding feature circus acts on this year's all feature program will be the initial appearance of the famous Joe Hodgkin troupe of whirlwind bareback riders; the celebrated Acevedo troupe of Mexican high wire artists; jugglers, and acrobats; John White's troupe of leaping greyhounds; the Flying Meteors, and many other renowned stars of Circusdom.

ELLEN'S DIARY

LITERATURE AND LIFE

THE SCHOOL

Next to the Church the school is the most important institution in the community. The one which I attended as a lad had some sixty pupils ranged all the way from grade one to eleven; now there are about a dozen and a half. The year was divided into two terms, beginning in May and November. Holidays of two weeks were given in midsummer. Besides, we had the 24th of May, when we went fishing and when the school inspectors came we always expected a half holiday.

I recalled one inspector who did some inspecting; for instance, he ordered cobwebs cleared off a part of the wall, and sent one boy out to wash his face in the brook close by.

The school day was begun by devotions—reading the Bible in rotation, prayer, sometimes the Lord's prayer in unison, and sometimes a prayer improvised by the teacher. I recall that a favourite hymn with one teacher was, "Let the lower lights be burning." So we were introduced in school not only to ordinary history but to the greatest literature of the world.

Most of the teachers were male, and often a lad from the country was inspired to go to college because he had actually seen a youth who had been there as himself. In such a school all subjects from the alphabet up to grade eleven were taught.

There were two features at least in that school which were good; one was "places on the map." A pupil would take the teacher's pointer and stand before the map and try to meet the challenge of pupils in their seats to find any place named—river, lake, city—anything whatever that had to do with geography. If the pupil failed to find it the place was taken by the one who asked the questions, who in turn was subjected to the same test.

The other feature was recitation day—usually Friday. I recall a group of about a dozen who recited Gray's Elegy in a country churchyard. Here emphasis was laid on the expression and the interpretation.

Playing ball was the prevailing exercise of the recess, of which there were two periods in the day and there were deft batsmen and fleet footed runners then.

Pupils from a distance took a lunch and each had a bottle of milk—usually a flask which was put in a cold spring to see how much cream would be on it at noon.

Discipline varied with the teacher, but sometimes the rod was in evidence. Of course, some teachers found it harder to get along with the scholars than did others. Teachers varied too in worth as teachers for attending a Normal School—did not inevitably make a teacher. Oftentimes a little slip of a girl kept better order. Dr. George Stewart of New York testified to the worth of such a teacher at Malaga when he was a lad. He was getting his LL. D. at Dalhousie and took us back to the little school in that community which he said was the scene of the greatest intellectual influence in his life. A young girl was the teacher. I fancy there are others who can say the same thing.

Salaries were small, but teachers were plentiful—usually more than enough. What has happened? Two hundred dollars would pay all expenses of a college term—fees, board, and other necessities of student life. Dollars are just what they will buy. Probably less emphasis was laid on dollars then, and children had not as much money to spend as they have now. Perhaps that was better.

Cowper wrote a poem called "Troicium, a review of schools" in which are these lines: "Be it a weakness, it deserves some praise. We love the playplace of our early days; The scene is touching, and the heart is stone. That feels not at that sight."

Here is a sonnet written many years ago about such a place: "Here thou remainest as in days of yore, Where traffic drives her team, and the highway Skirts the green fields—across a patch of gray. To some, but I have looked thee o'er and o'er In memory's golden frame since by the door Of this plain porch of truth I used to play; And voices find me from the far away, So for the time I am a child once more. Out by that road we went, and waved adieu To thee, thou kindly nurse, and one by one Our place we took in life's far sterner game. Where thoughts of thee should keep our lives from blame; For at each worthy deed dauntlessly done, Thine unforgetten lists thou dost review."

NO PAINT FOR BRIDGE WHILE INDIA HUNGRY

SYDNEY, Australia, June 10 — (CP) — Hunger in India will probably stop the painting of the Sydney harbor bridge.

Starving Indians are eating linseed, hence Australia is not getting linseed oil for paint. Local production has been cut to one-sixth and may stop.

Reserves are gone and every major manufacturing industry is threatened.
