THE MORNING GUARDIAN

TUESDAY, JUNE 14, 1904.

HOW TO DEAL WITH THEM.

Everyone is conscious of the weakness of our present system of dealing with the unfortunates who through their appetite for drink are overpowered, fall into the hands of the police and are fined or sent to jail. Sometimes it is the bread-winner of a family who is thus dealt with and the burden of paying the fine, or of losing the offender's earnings during the term of his imprisonment, falls with crushing weight upon these innocent ones. It is very sad and pitiful, and could we know at what cost of privation of food or fuel a police court fine is sometimes paid, the circumstances would seem tragic.

Thoughtful men have striven hard to find a better way, but so far the success has not been great, and so many dollars or so many days is still the rule of punishment here and elsewhere in Canada.

A thoughtful temperance worker has directed our attention to a method adopted by Police Justice Folland of St. Louis, who gives to such prisoners as are brought before him the option of swearing off or going to jail. He has a form of oath to meet the case. Say the defendant's name is John Jones, and he has been convicted of disturbing the peace of Mehitabel Jones, and the judge has fined him $50. The court says: "Mr. Jones, I appreciate the fact that it would be a hardship on your family for you to pay this fine or go to the workhouse, yet I feel that you deserve to be punished. It appears clear to my mind that you have violated the law, because you were drunk. Your being drunk was a result of your fondness for intoxicating liquors. The proper punishment for you, therefore, is to enforce your abstinence for a certain period. Are you willing to quit drinking for a specified term of your own accord or would you prefer to go to the workhouse?"

workhouse and quit because you cannot get it?"

The prisoner naturally feels that he would rather go without his glass and be free than be a prisoner and abstain. He takes the pledge to abstain, and his family have the benefit of his earnings while his employer gets the benefit of his perhaps greatly needed services. Our Canadian laws do not permit of the administration of an oath under such circumstances but a solemn affirmation might prove quite as effective. It may be feared that some even when thus pledged would be tempted and fall again. But is it not also to be hoped that some would abandon the drinking habit altogether as a result? The experiment seems well worth a trial.

Pennsburg, Ohio, is pointed out as a model town of 1500 inhabitants, with a death rate last year of 12 persons—less than one per cent, one of these being due to old age and three to infant disorders. The town had not a single unemployed person, no strikes, lower taxes than ever before, no arrests, no lawsuits, and no scandals. The cause of this is plain. There are no saloons. But the town has three churches, a public, high and private schools, three newspapers, many small factories, street lights, and a water plant. Every resident is a church member and almost everybody lives in his own house.

A movement is afoot among the clerks of the boot and shoe stores to get a weekly half holiday during the fine summer months. They quite naturally want to wear a pair of the firm's boots or shoes in the open air during one afternoon of the week—to go fishing, boating, bicycling, ball playing or whatever may be most healthful and attractive. They propose Monday afternoons as interfering least with business. The Guardian would be pleased if all the foot wear firms could agree to make this concession to their employees. All work and no play is not good for either the uppers or the soles of the shoe business.
