LATE MR. W. P. HUNT

The Montreal Gazette, referring to the lamented death of Mr. W. P. Hunt, previously referred to in The Guardian, says in a recent issue: "Following an illness extending over several months, Mr. William P. Hunt, former manager of the Montreal branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, died on Wednesday. Six months ago Mr. Hunt suffered a stroke of paralysis and since then until his death he was in feeble health. Mr. Hunt, who was born in Summerside, P. E. I., fifty-six years ago, was connected with the Bank of Nova Scotia in several capacities, both in Canada and the West Indies for over thirty years, and his death is considered a loss not only to the banking fraternity, but the business community at large. Mr. Hunt, by those who knew him best, was credited with being a natural-born banker. Not only was he thoroughly posted on the resources of the British West Indies, having been manager of the Kingston, Jamaica, branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, but he visited the Western Canadian provinces from time to time and kept in touch with the immense resources and financial greatness of that portion of the Dominion. His banking knowledge was appreciated by the head officials of the institution with which he had been so long a prominent figure, he being in particularly close touch with the trade and commerce of the lower provinces. Mr. W. P. Hunt took a holiday almost every year, going south in winter and to his native Prince Edward Island in summer, but these outings were generally for the purpose of adding to his accumulated knowledge of business and finance. The customers of the Montreal branch of the bank realized the fact that while the manager was distinctly conservative in his view of financial operations, within his own jurisdiction, he might have been said to belong to the progressive element in the banking fraternity. He succeeded Mr. Pitblado as manager of the Montreal branch, and the successful beginning of the bank in this city was well advanced under Mr. Hunt's management, and more especially since moving into the splendid offices on the ground floor of the Canada Life Building. There were two distinct personalities in the make-up of Mr. Hunt, in club life and amongst his many personal friends his genial and even affectionate disposition made him one of the most popular amongst a large group, yet after crossing the threshold of his bank all personal relations were apparently severed, these characteristics giving place to the courteous man of affairs. It had frequently been remarked that Mr. Hunt, while familiar with the business of every banking institution in the Dominion, also kept in close touch with the financial resources of the country, studying in minute fashion the annual exposures of the Finance Minister and intelligently sizing up the situation both at Ottawa and Quebec. Mr. Hunt never married. He leaves one brother and four sisters to mourn the loss of one who was a decided credit to his native province down by the Gulf. His social attractions were chiefly confined to club life, taking an especial interest in St. James Club, where he was a well remembered figure at the close of business hours."

possible. If some of our books are not up to the standard required, it should be up to our Education Department to ask for a change. But the present government deserves credit for the system of handling them. Mr. Gallant agrees with me that the Education Tax is a delicate question but takes pleasure and pride in extolling the merits of great statesmen who in past years showed themselves equal to the task. This is pleasant to relate. But while "Lives of Great Men all remind us" we can make our lives sublime, yet when Hubert was asked by Prince John to shoot at the target, his recourse to the great achievements of his Grand Sire at Hastings did not help him to beat Locksley. So that Mr. Gallant should remember that the political fame of a party rises and falls, with the ability of its leaders. I am fully aware of my lack of politeness in not writing over my name. But there's all reasons. One of them is, I have not the choice of language, nor mature judgment of Mr. Gallant. Another of them is I am very moderate in my political convictions, and were I an extremist, I see no apparent reason why I should publicly make it known unless I had some personal aspirations. The elector goes to the poll, he gives his support to the man or the party in whom he has the greatest confidence. By marking his ballot he expresses his opinion and the public need not know it. I am Sir, etc.

AN INTERESTING FIND

BOX WITH THIRTEEN FRENCH BAYONETS AND FLINT STONES UNEARTHED AT ELDON
 While Mr. Alexander McMillan of Eldon was ploughing on his field there a few days ago he struck a most interesting find, when his plow came in contact with an old box which was found to contain thirteen old French bayonets and also a number of flint stones such as were used in old times for firing flint guns. The bayonets are about fifteen inches long with a furl on the end to enable them to be attached to the gun, much the same as the bayonet of today. The bayonets were all heavily coated in rust but considering the long time they have been in the ground are still in a fair state of preservation. It is interesting in this connection to note that Mr. McMillan's farm is the site of the remains of an old French fort and French burying ground and is an interesting historical spot also from the fact that it is the site of the landing place of the pioneers from the ship Polly which brought Lord Selkirk's colonists from Scotland in 1803. The place has been visited much the past by tourists and souvenir hunters who have dug holes in numerous places in quest of relics. A church stood alongside the burying ground and the remains of public roads were quite noticeable to the early Scotch settlers of the section. Some of the grounds are still in evidence, being marked by red sandstones bearing various inscriptions. One of the bayonets unearthed by Mr. McMillan and the flint stones are now on exhibition in the window of the McKinnon Drug Co.'s store.
