SELF EDUCATION

In one sense there is no other kind of education for there is no operation by means of which learning may be transmitted to a young mind.

We have schools and libraries, and many of the best books are available in the "Everyman's Library". Sometimes schools and universities seem to kill originality.

One of the best read men I have ever known left school at the age of ten. He used to cry when he saw other boys going off with their satchels and books.

He learned the trade of a blacksmith, but took advantage of night school. To indicate the kind of mental world in which he lived, I mention some of the books which were his life-long friends.

He knew Epictetus, Marcus Aurelius, Emerson, Carlyle, Browning and Matthew Arnold. He liked that rare literary treat - the sonnets of Shakespeare.

What I recall of his trade I recall what I was told of another man who not only made sparks fly from his anvil, but often on a Monday morning would leave his work uncompleted while he talked with three clergymen who found that he knew what he was doing.

Oppenheim, who died not long ago, was self educated. We are told, for a time he wrought at ordinary work in a factory.

He was a self-educator. He was a self-educator. He was a self-educator. He was a self-educator.

He was a self-educator. He was a self-educator. He was a self-educator. He was a self-educator.

In Memoriam

MRS. LOUIS BOYLE

There passed away suddenly at Conway on January 14th, 1947, Mrs. Louis Boyle. She was in her eighty-ninth year.

Her daughter Annie, who preceded her less than a month ago, was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Morrison of Granville and was a woman of exemplary Christian character.

We remember her persistent cheerfulness though it was her lot to know many changes and not a few sorrows. She had a keen sense of humor seeing the inner side of the clouds bright and shining.

Although many of her family are living abroad and have risen to prominent and responsible positions they were all present to honour her memory as she was laid to rest.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. A. Young, Tyne Valley at her residence and Freehold Presbyterian Church and the committal service in the adjoining cemetery in the family plot.

Her husband, Rev. W. A. Young, Tyne Valley at her residence and Freehold Presbyterian Church and the committal service in the adjoining cemetery in the family plot.
