SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON VII. — AUGUST 19.
THE GULER'S DAUGHTER.
Mark 5: 21-43.
GOLDEN TEXT.
"And taking the child by the hand, he saith unto her, Talitha cumi; which is, being interpreted, Damsel, I say unto thee, arise."—Mark 5: 41.
POINTED SUGGESTIONS.

By Rev. D. W. Snider.

The cry of need has right of utterance above the acclaim of the admiring and curious. Jesus always gives it the right of way. Little does He heed the babble of the crowd, but the beseeching voice of burdened prayer never fails to reach His ears or to commend His healing compassion.

And those who, under ordinary circumstances, cannot picture themselves as making an exhibition of their need before the gazing eyes of the world are indifferent to any manner of surroundings when love is in pain and urgent. The one who truly feels his need of Jesus will seek Him openly in any throng.

Possibly no deeper love-note is ever struck than that of parental love. No greater depth of anguish is ever reached in the human spirit than that which springs from concern for the welfare of a child. Children may fail to appreciate what parents fully understand what was burning in the heart of Jairus when, falling at the feet of Jesus, he besought Him much.

Of course, the multitude was touched by the scene, but the merciful throng is ever ready to be touched. It is ready for the new sensation, whether it means laughter or tears. The thing to be remembered is this: What lonesome and tragic things are happening in the heart of a crowd. The poor woman had nothing of the mood of the crowd upon her as she pressed her suffering way to Jesus that she might touch but a tassel of His garment.

But Jesus meets the faith-crier and the faith-touch by His divine sympathy and healing power. The desperate need of the ruler of the synagogue is not forgotten while he stays a moment to bless the woman whose trouble had been made worse by professional incapacity for nearly a score of years.

Those brief minutes, however, to the heart-broken father, were long as her score of years. Would Jesus never come? And while he is in agony over the delay the word he feared to hear has been spoken. But Jesus heard it also. A message for the ages has come out of that fact. Listen: "Fear not, only believe." May we not guess that Jesus placed His hand upon the shoulder of the sorrow-stricken father when He said it. Jesus is the Comforter!

The merely curious and the scornfully unteachable deprive themselves of all opportunity to witness the working of the power of God. They are put forth from the place of divine and beneficent operation. There are none who so blind themselves to the sight of the highest and holiest things as the world's smart Alects.

Jesus was pained at the funeral customs of His day. A portion of the lesson might well be spent in a canvass of such customs today. Are not some of them pagan still?

The Master has instruction for the men of faith. Bless God for what was taught in the home of Jairus concerning death. Is it not time to take the view which Jesus has of it and to accept His mastery over it? "The child is not dead, but sleeping." "Damsel, I say unto thee, arise."
