Rotarians Addressed By Mrs. Allison MacMillan

Mrs. Allison MacMillan, Fairview, National President, Women's Institutes was guest speaker at Rotary yesterday. The text of her address follows:

"It is a great pleasure and privilege for me to come here and as National President to bring greetings and good wishes from the F.W.I.C., an organization which I believe has similar aims and objectives to your own. We feel as never before a new life is stirring not only in this Province but in every province to strengthen community effort and to promote not only better understanding, but to work for the common good of all and this is clearly demonstrated in your club especially by the assistance you have given handicapped and crippled children in this province. Improved health services as well as better educational opportunities, economic security, etc. are only a small part of rural-urban responsibilities or in other words, the ethical concern of one man for the well being of his neighbour

"In this small province where we have no large industries, where our resources are mainly Agriculture and Fishing, whether we live in the city or in the country, we are more or less depending on one another and we have many common problems Citizenship touches every part of our fibre — but too often we demand our rights as citizens, and are forgetful of our duties and obligations. We are willing to take something, but are we ready to make a just contribution and if not then we have failed in our duty as Canadians."

"What you have in the city and what we have in the country is the sum total of the contribution of years. Our traditions, customs, laws, institutions and cultures have been the development of mankind down through the ages They do not appear in the same form as they did two thousand years ago, but as time moves on, each generation must accept the responsibility of absorbing, revising or even rejecting that something called civilization, which moves on to tomorrow. May we as citizens be worthy of our heritage and do something in this generation constructive and of lasting value.

Mrs. Allison MacMillan

Knowledge Necessary

"Knowledge of the past should make us better builders of today but we all know the old proverb, "He who knows ONLY today knows NOT today" The well informed citizen knows that certain changes and reforms are inevitable, and will be alert to guide these changes into the proper channels, and that should be the endeavour of each and every one wherever he lives or whatever his vocation or profession. We know these changes are necessary for the mutual benefit of all, but we must not be misled or misguided by small things, but look above and beyond and have a vision of greater things for all concerned.

"It is utter nonsense for example to say we must have Composite High Schools for one part of the province, and not to see that the privilege is made available to every child on P.E.I. We know too it is not always easy to bring about these needed reforms.

"Age is inclined to hang on to old traditions and customs "what is good enough for me", while youth would literally tear everything to pieces. However I believe the experience of age coupled with the eagerness of youth, these reforms could be brought about in an orderly manner.

Must Be Informed

"We must be well informed in provincial requirements and we must keep abreast of the times so that when an opportunity presents itself for the mutual benefit of all, we can grasp it wholeheartedly and make the best use of it. Rights and duties are closely interwoven it is your right to make laws, it is our duty to obey these laws, but too many people are ignorant of the law regarding small things, things that perhaps amount to a row of pins but may cause bitterness and ill feeling. In the words of our W.I. creed, "It is the little things that create differences in the big things of life we are one."

"The press wields a tremendous influence in moulding public opinion and promoting mutual understanding. I do not believe there is any other such single agent that has such an influence and in that respect we are most fortunate for the press always works in the best interests of city and country.

"You will agree with me, when the country prospers the city prospers but we must all have a mutual understanding of the inconveniences of rural life and I believe we should bring pressure to bear upon the proper authorities to see that as far as possible those inconveniences are eliminated.

"If we are to have our young people stay on the farm, we must bring the conveniences of the city to the country — for example there is rural electrification, it covers only a small part of P.E.I. This is a problem not for only rural P.E.I. but for the whole of the province.

"We need more sports between city and country. I was greatly impressed the evening of the Patriot road race to hear the names called over the loud speaker — boys from the different sections — Milton, Winsloe, etc. competing with city boys in good clean sport—a splendid opportunity for rural-urban relations.

"Then our young boys and girls come to Charlottetown to take Grade XI and XII and what an opportunity to build up good relations, and see the necessity for all working together. I am one hundred per cent behind a residence for students attending P.W.C. Our children, and they are only children need supervised study and guidance that they do not get in a boarding house — but they will be all rural and I do not believe they will have the opportunity to mingle with and have the same good fellowship they had in a boarding house—while I believe it is very necessary and should under proper management in time be self liquidating and self sustaining, I believe it has that one disadvantage.

"In a Province of ninety thousand people, practically all speaking the same language, so many common problems and interests, there must be and should be the greatest opportunity for mutual understanding and benefits. Our problems are social and economic security, improved health service, better educational opportunities with accent on youth. They are our greatest responsibility

Rotarians Jim Harris and Bill Reid were co-chairmen at yesterday's luncheon.

The followng guests were welcomed — Mrs. Florence M. Gillis, New Bedford Mass., Miss Mary MacDonald and Miss May J. MacDonald, Belmont, Mass., Mrs. M.J. In Memoriam

In loving memory of my dear husband,
CAPTAIN ALFRED MacLEOD,
who passed away July 29th, 1944.

And the stately ships go on
To the haven under the hill;
But oh for the touch of a vanished hand
And the sound of a voice that is still.

At the foot of thy crags, oh sea
But the tender grace of a day that is dead
Will never come back to me.

Fondly remembered by his wife,
Mrs. Alfred MacLeod.

Little Attention Given Nfld. Defence In Talks

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL

OTTAWA, July 28—(CP) — Discussions between Canada and Newfoundland on the possibility of the island's entry into confederation have not gone into detail on questions of defence, it was learned today.

A source in close touch with the discussions said both parties realized that if Newfoundland became a 10th province all matters of the island's defence would become a federal concern. This was made clear in documents outlining the functions of the National Defence Department.

The question was left there and the source believed that nothing further would be said until the confederation issue is settled.

Meantime, at a meeting today, a sub-committee from the seven-man Newfoundland delegation gave federal officials information on the island's $78,000,000 public debt.

Joseph Smallwood of Gander, Nfld., secretary of the delegation and member of the sub committee, said the information was given to officials of the Bank of Canada and of the Departments of Finance and External Affairs. He said the question of whether or not Canada would take over the debt in the event of union was not broached.

Declines Comment

He said the sub-committee was appointed simply to provide and obtain facts which would be reported to plenary sessions. A plenary session likely would be held tomorrow or Wednesday and the terms under which Canada might take over the debt possibly would come up for discussion.

Mr. Smallwood declined to comment on the question of defence, saying simply that the British North America Act made it clear that the Federal Government was responsible for the defence of the country.

However, it is known that Canada is vitally interested in the island's defence. It is understood some Canadian officials have studied what the position would be with respect to the three major American bases on the island in the event of union.

The United States was given 99-year leases early in the war to a military base at St. John's, a navy base at Argentina and an air base at Stephensville. The leases, which gave Americans sovereignty over the land where the bases are located, still have 92 years to run.

If the island entered confederation Canada would be in the position of having United States holding sovereignty over Canadian territory. This is a position which the Dominion has continually sought to avoid in dealings with the United States.

Feeling among some Canadian authorities is that the United States would not relinquish the bases without positive assurances that Canada would adequately man and maintain them for use in the event of another war. This would involve considerable expenditures.

Besides it is believed that the American Government would want repayment of at least some of the more than $250,000,000 spent in the construction of the bases

Not Immediate Problem

However, the Canadian officials are not looking at the question as an immediate problem. The Newfoundland people still have to decide whether they want to enter confederation and the decision may not be known until late this year or in 1948.

The discussions now are aimed at uncovering basis on which union of the two countries would be mutually satisfactory. The visiting delegation will report back to the 45-man Newfoundland national convention elected last year to recommend a future form or forms of government for the island.

After hearing the report of the delegation the convention will decide whether union with Canada should be placed on the ballot when the Newfoundland people are asked to decide their future form of government.

While both Canadian and Newfoundland officials have expressed satisfaction with the progress of the discussions here, members of the delegation have given no indication yet as to what type of report will be made to the convention.

In Memoriam

MRS. DOUGLAS CROSSMAN

The sudden death of Mrs. Douglas Crossman, age 25 years, following a brief illness, occurred at her home in Albany on June 24th and came as a great shock to the citizens of this vicinity as well as to a wide circle of relatives and friends throughout the Province. Highly esteemed, Mrs. Crossman had won the respect and love of all, through her bright and cheery disposition. The deceased, the former Reta Mabel MacWilliams, was born at Cape Traverse in 1922, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon MacWilliams.

Death is very sad at any time but when it comes to one so young and beautiful how forcible we feel the exclamation of the Apostle to us it seems that life had just begun, but her work was already done and God in His infinite love and wisdom called her to that everlasting home prepared for those who love Christ and keeps His commandments.

Yes it is true we shall not see her any more in this world, but the last lingering look at that clear white face as she lay in that white bed surrounded with beautiful flowers shall remain in the memory of many until we see it among the angels in heaven animated with the glory of Jesus Christ.

Her immediate survivors are her husband, mother and father and one brother, Lloyd, and grandmother, Mrs. J. W Howatt. Her sister Marion predeceased her nine years ago. The funeral which was held at her home in Albany, was one of the largest for some time, which testified to her high esteem.

Rev. Harvey Bishop conducted the service based on several beautiful chapters of Scripture, assisted by Rev. Mr Baxter and Rev. Mr. Hicks. The hymns sung were 23rd Psalm, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus", and "Abide With Me", assisted by the United and Baptist choirs.

The pallbearers were: Messrs. Wendell MacWilliams, Wallace Muttart, Morley Muttart, Layton Green, Stanley Delaney, Michael Delaney, close relatives and friends of the deceased.

N. B. Hay Crop Reported Good

FREDERICTON, N.B., July 28—(CP)—With the haying season now in full swing, the farmers in New Brunswick are looking forward to a better than average hay crop. Earlier productions of light crop the same as last year have been shattered by the improved growing weather the past few weeks.

While some parts of the Province specially in that section where they make marsh hay, report a light crop and other sections report a spotty crop, the overall picture points to a better than average production.

Last year the hay crop was light with slightly more than a ton yield per acre and there was an estimated production of 711,000 tons from 646,000 acres.

Lumber Production Increased In May

OTTAWA, July 28 —(CP)—Timbe-r-r! that crashing sound is Canadian lumber, production of which increased in May to 415,331,000 board feet compared with 351,945,000 feet in May, 1946.

Rushing to meet heavy domestic and export demands, Canada produced 1,970,934,000 feet of sawn lumber during the first five months of this year compared with 1,773,811,000 feet in the same period of last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

British Columbia output, really rolling during May, was largely responsible for the increased output. It jumped 115 per cent over last year, to 210,851,000 feet from 97,914,000 in May, 1946.

May production east of the Rockies by provinces in thousands of feet, with last year's May totals bracketed: Prince Edward Island, 1,573 (1,346); Nova Scotia, 30,216 (30,240); New Brunswick, 21,701 (29,317); Quebec, 71,725 (111,260); Ontario, 64,033 (93,282); Manitoba 562 (2,690); Saskatchewan 3,019 (7,634); Alberta, 11,651 (9,527.)

ELLEN'S DIARY

Summer lovely but fleeting. Then one evening, chancing to come to our bridge when bewitching shadows interlaced the silver there along the pond and a pretty ripple patterned its surface in response to a vagrant wind from the West, and the moon was a small crescent new-set above a hill and a silver birch bent over fetchingly to whisper a Summer secret to the water.

There is, I fancy, an affinity between silver birches and moon or sun light. And so, as we paused there to admire the night setting, I suggested: "Why couldn't we use birch saplings to fashion rails for here?" The idea pleased James, and last week, when he and Jamie and our young lady guest were along the fields in a farm cart on some mission in connection with the farming, he fetched home two long, slender, silver birches he found growing on the steep bank of the stream. From these two, then, our bridge rails were made last evening, and according to a design of James.

Slight womanly touches added, to his mind, did nothing to enhance it. The bases of the saplings, were firmly imbedded in clay, on either side and then bent to form a low arch by way of rails and the smaller ends spiked down securely. What a feat of strength that bending was! Stays were added, but sparingly, and in a fashion truly rustic. "Looks as though some one was living here now" I observed blithely, as I gathered up the chips and my share of the tools — the crosscut saw and an axe and prepared to follow the men up the lane to the house. "It might hold a car in an icy time" James said, turning to regard the finished work "but those crazy ends you had us nail on, would have been as well left off, Ellen—looks like a lot of kids' stuff to me!"

And the sun beamed down on the new rails today and a wind, which the men declared "might have been a lot better" scattered yesterday's dampness, and made it possible for them to abandon the second hoeing of turnips to go again to the haying. The hay that had lain in swath since the last of the week was raked then and put in coils. And just now with a noisy clatter the hay loader was fetched from its storage at the other farm, behind Rob's truck in anticipation of a great day tomorrow, when hay will be saved to the barns.

Until tomorrow — Diary —Goodnight.
