JEWELS MAY BE FINGER MARKED FOR IDENTIFICATION

Identification of diamonds, pearls and precious stones along similar lines as fingerprinting for the detection of criminals is the latest development in jewellery circles for the protection of owners of fine stones. In fact the matter has progressed to the extent that laboratories are now established in London, Berlin, Vienna, Rome, Brussels, The Hague and New York, at which certificates are issued which will serve to identify any particular stone as a protection to the owner and an aid to the police in case it is lost or stolen.

The identification of jewels is based on the fact that the interior formations (mineral particles or liquids which are found within precious stones and diamonds) and the surface particularities of pearls are just as characteristic of a stone or a pearl as fingerprints are of human beings.

On the identification card, the impression of the fingerprint is replaced by microphotographs of the interior formations (microphotographs which can be enlarged from 6 to 2,000 times the size required).

The interior formations chosen are preferably those which are situated nearest the centre of the stone, in such a manner that, even if the stone be re-cut in order to make it unrecognisable by changing its exterior shape, it can still be identified.

Supposing a stone is stolen, the various laboratories are telegraphically advised and they in turn distribute copies of the identification paper among all jewellers and judicial authorities. Within 24 hours the stolen stone has been rendered unsaleable throughout the entire world.

It is expected that this service will serve to stimulate the wearing of valuable pewels which has been discouraged of recent years by the activities of hold-up men. Difficulty in disposing of a precious stone will certainly tend to render the activities of jewel thieves much less attractive.

PRINCE'S NEW CAR

LONDON, July 31. (British United Press)—A huge black and red automobile of the latest streamline model, will shortly be used by the Prince of Wales to carry him on long journeys about the country. The designer of thsi new car is Sir Dennis Burney, who also designed the R-100.

The car has a strange animal-like appearance, the two headlights looking like gigantic eyes set in the sloping front. The roof of the car runs in a semi-circle from the extreme front of the chassis to the end of the tail. Almost the whole top of the automobile is made of glass. The engine is at the rear of the chassis, and this permits the wheel lock to be of the same pattern as that on a London taxi-cab, giving a remarkably narrow turning circle.

YARDS IDLE FOR FIRST TIME

ESSEX, Mass., Aug. 1 (U. P.)—For the first time in three centuries, no ship is under construction in this famous ship-building villege. The men ordinarily employed in the industry are busing themselves with farming, clamdigging and home renovations.

ENTRIES FOR TOURNAMENT

The following is the list of entries in the open Provincial Championship Tournament to be played at the Charlottetown Club Grounds beginning Wednesday morning next. Those who are interested in Tennis in the Province will have the opportunity of seeing matches such as has never before been played here. Mr. Rennis, Toronto, was 5th ranking Canadian player in 1926 and 1927. He and his partner, Mr. Little are present Nova Scotia doubles champions. Messrs Condon and Leclerc are high ranking Ontario players. Mr. Piers is an outstanding Nova Scotia player and 1930 runner-up for Nova Scotia singles championship. Lucas and Longley are well known Halifax stars. In lady events, Mrs. Woodbury and Currie are former Maritime champions and high ranking Canadian players. They will arrive here direct from the Canadian Championship Tournament completed on Saturday last at Vancouver, B.C. Miss Henderson, Rothesay, is a former New Brunswick champion. Apart from visiting stars our own local players such as Miss E. Bourke and Messrs. Dickson, Houston, White and Stewart, besides a strong Summerside contingent including Miss Z. WHY NOT LIVE TO 100 YEARS

Some interesting facts are brought out through the persual of the Eight Annual Report of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa. One of particular interest is the fact that in 1928 there were 79 death of reputed Centenarians, 35 of whom were males and 44 females. The ages as given in death certificates ranged from 100 to 108 years.

Each province of Canada was represented in this loss. Ontario having 28 and Manitoba and Alberta two each, the others being distributed between these figures.

That living for a century or over is not uncommon as may be supposed is evidence by the following record of deaths of centenarians during recent years in Canada.

1921—72 deaths.
1922—63 deaths.
1923—65 deaths.
1924—39 deaths, (12 males, 17 females, frmo 100 to 113 yrs.)
1926—91 deaths, (34 males, 57 females, from 100 to 113 yrs.)
1927—80 deaths, (34 males, 46 females, from 100 to 113 yrs.)
