Major Bartlett's lecture on Edinburgh given in Grace Church last evening was one of rare interest throughout. As an historical review of the beginning and development of that famous Scotch capital, the stirring events and scenes which have marked its history, the magnificent streets with its castles and other noticeable buildings so vividly illustrated by the splendid views and the speaker's attractive and pleasing delivery made the lecture both interesting and delightful from start to finish. The vote of thanks was moved by Colonel F. S. Moore and supported by W. K. C., Walter Bourke operated the lantern most efficiently.

The Columbian Society of St Dunstan's College fully sustained the traditions of the organization last evening when they celebrated the anniversary of the birth of Washington. The strong patriotic spirit of the American, which is peculiar to the sons of the United States, found expression in musical melody and stirring speech. The great name of Washington thrilled the hearts of those who assembled in St Dunstan's Hall to commemorate in a fitting manner the life of this great and noble statesman. The address of the President, Russel Smith, set forth in dignified language the merits of the great American, the prominent features of his character and the magnitude of his success in the face of dreadful hardships. The address was an inspiration to those who heard it, and will be an effective stimulus to the students to aspire to higher ideals. An orchestra, consisting of several instruments, and under the direction of Rev Theodore Gallant, discoursed sweet music during the intervals. Mr Cheverie's piano solo was a musical treat and elicited hearty applause. Readings by Messrs Bowen and Fisher, songs by Messrs Parley and John F. McDonald were attractive features of a good program ending with God Save the King.
