Wells' "Marriage" Is Acclaimed Great Drama

"Marriage", by H. G. Wells, opened at the Capitol Theatre yesterday and proved to be one of the most powerful dramas of the year. It was warmly received by initial audiences.

Fox Films, in being the first motion picture concern to bring the works of the noted English author to the screen, made a happy choice when they selected "Marriage" for picturization. For here is a story that pierces the mysterios of matrimony. A story that points out just why there is much unhappiness among those who should be happy.

"Marriage", in brief, tells the story of the clash of two temperaments. An idealistic young inventor marries a very materialistic young woman. But when financial difficulties arise, trouble looms. It is only after the wife arrives at the conclusion that unselfish love is a prime requisite to married life that the pair find real happiness.

The film drives home a great lesson without preaching. It's the kind of a picture that is going to be of direct benefit to all those who are married and to all those who contemplate marriage.

Beautiful Virginia Valli plays the part of the materialistic wife. She does so in fine fashion, giving a sterling performance. Allan Durant, a newcomer from Germany, appears as the young inventor and supplies a capable portrayal. Others in the excellent cast include such favorites as Lawford Davidson, James Marcus and Gladys McConnell.

The second of "The Collegian" series proved as interesting as the opening episode. This series is sure to be in great favor of the picture fans.

TYPHOID FEVER TAKES HEAVY TOLL.

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 16.— Though it is obviously impossible to calculate the total financial loss to the city through the outbreak of typhoid which raged here in 1927, figures given out by the comptroller's department at the City Hall show that one aspect of the epidemic cost a quarter of a million dollars.

This bill included the items spent directly for such things as emergency hospitals, transportation of cases, purchase of serum and other medical means of fighting the disease.

This, of course, does not take into consideration the economic losses suffered through the dislocation, the bills which private individuals paid for medical and nursing care or other indirect costs of the epidemic.

Out of a total of 5,000 cases, there were 500 deaths. No allowance is maid either, for the financial losses involved.

Aside from all this, the civic administration alone is called upon to foot a bill for $250,000.

So Fatally Pretty

(By British United Press)

BERLIN, January 16. — The capable stenographer was fatally pretty and she wanted a fur coat. Her employer, a business man, felt that she really ought to have that fur coat, but, times being what they are, he could not afford to buy one for her. So he stepped around to one of those convenient establishments where they treat one like a friend and let one pay gradually for their attractive goods.

He chose an electric seal cloak, $25 down and $75 on account, and sly fellow, said that he would bring his wife round to see whether she liked it.

He returned with the fatally pretty lady who was enchanted with the coat, and he paid the cash down and entered into a contract to meet the rest in instalments.

"The gracious lady must sign too," said the salesman. And the stenographer who had been given the tip on the way to the shop, scribbled the name of her kind employer's wife on that tiresome contract.

Times became worse and the business man could not pay the second instalment. The firm then applied to his wife. The effect was frightful. Not only was the domestic peace of the business man changed to a state of war, and but the proprietor of the fur shop also denounced his customers to the authorities as forgers.

The fatally pretty stenographer in tears took back the electric seal coat to the shop and pleaded for mercy, but she was told that the law was the law. And so she and her employer had to appear in a Berlin court.

The business man was sent to prison for two months and the fatally pretty one was fined.

CHILDREN'S DISEASES CAN BE EASILY WIPED OUT

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 16.— Childhood ailments such as diphtheria, smallpox and scarlet fever could be wiped out in five years by proper precautionary measures, Dr. M. Fraser of the Provincial Board of Health, told a convention of Manitoba teachers here. In that case, only the foolish need catch any of these diseases.
