THE BOOK OF THE YEAR The GOLDEN FUTURE of PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Read What the Halifax Star Says:

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

The Charlottetown Guardian has recently issued a souvenir edition published in book-size form, with the optimistic title of "The Golden Future of Prince Edward Island."

It is an interesting edition. It is one that the native of Prince Edward Island, far from home, will read with a special glow of pleasure, for in poem, and story, in attractive illustration, and advertisement, it tells of the Island's glory, of its progress, and of its contribution to the life of this continent.

There are many excellent articles, but one of the best is the impression of an American journalist who visited the "Garden of the Gulf," and who tells vividly his impressions of its people, their traditions, the well kept homes, the splendid churches, and his amazement at the practical absence of divorce and crime.

His observations are worth noting. "This same little Province, which has no divorce problem, is also without a crime problem. Its crime rate, as indicated by convictions for serious offenses, is less than one-tenth the rate for Canada as a whole, and the Canadian rate is low. The Island hasn't had an execution in forty years!

"Unemployment? There isn't any on the Island. "Poverty? It is almost non-existent there.

"This Island has, per square mile, twice as many people, four times as many cattle, and eight times as much poultry, as any other Province of Canada. It has more railroads per square mile, more post offices, more telegraph lines, and more churches, and its people have more money in the savings banks, per capita, than have those of any other Canadian Province."

The publication is one worthy of that enterprising daily newspaper, The Charlottetown Guardian. Price 25 Cents.

SECOND TERM FOR HOOVER LOOKS SLIM

President No Longer Looked Upon as Superman.

WASHINGTON, November 17.—Last week's election was a knockout blow for President Hoover. True, he has two years in which to arise and pull himself together, but today his chances look slim for the final bout in 1932. Twenty years ago the Democrats carried the congressional elections in the middle of President Taft's administration, and they followed up this victory two years later by electing Woodrow Wilson President. Twenty years before that, the election of a Democratic Congress forecast President Harrison's defeat for re-election. That the Democrats may not have a clear majority in either House of the new Congress is immaterial. In the Senate and House alike they can rely upon help from Western Republican members who are utterly opposed to all the policies of the Hoover administration. The next Congress will have an anti-Hoover majority. Any well-informed schoolboy can name ten Republican Senators from Western States, who will be eager to combine with the Democrats to cripple and embarrass the Hoover administration.

Two years ago more than twenty million people voted to make Herbert Hoover their President. The bulk of them honestly believed that he was a superman. This belief was probably shared by many Democrats, who were constrained by party loyalty into voting against him. I think it quite probable that a large number of Canadians shared this belief. Certainly no man ever entered the White House amid such general acclamation. Today the Hoover myth has evaporated. This does not mean that the real Mr. Hoover is not very much alive and still a force in American politics. It merely means he has been shorn of his glamor and prestige, that the superman idea has gone into the scrap-heap, and that he will no longer be judged solely by past performances.

REASONS FOR DEFEAT

I doubt if the tariff had much to do with the result. A tariff is only unpopular when it increases the everyday cost of living to the everyday citizen. The Hawley-Smoot Tariff Act has not made prices higher; as a matter of fact, prices are lower now than they were a year ago. It may have caused some loss in foreign trade, but export trade was going down the toboggan months before the Tariff Bill had become a law. Hard times and unemployment undoubtedly helped the Democrats and hurt the Republicans, but still the Republicans had no trouble in holding their own in industrial states, like Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Rhode Island, and Michigan. If the situation created by the depression had been handled differently, the Administration might have got by.

The spectacular victories of Governor Roosevelt, in New York, and of J. Hamilton Lewis, in Illinois, had little to do with the unemployment situation. That situation helped, of course, but Roosevelt would have been elected in any event, and Lewis would have been elected in any event.

Ruth Hanna McCormick would have talked herself out of the senatorship without any outside assistance. The wet-and-dry issue undoubtedly helped the Democrats in Massachusetts, Ohio, Indiana, and probably Illinois, but the issue might have been avoided or minimized with proper management. This issue never embarrassed the Republican party while Mr. Coolidge was President. Mr. Coolidge did the best he could with prohibition enforcement, but kept himself in the background. It was Mr. Hoover who rushed into this hornet's nest, and bound the Republican party tight and fast to the chariot of prohibition. The Democrats would have been more than human if they had not seized the opportunity which President Hoover furnished them in the big industrial states of Massachusetts, Ohio and Illinois. When it comes to a presidential campaign the Democratic party will be as badly divided on the wet-and-dry issue as the Republican party. But meanwhile the Democrats have gotten possession of the State Government in a number of strong Republican States.

The Democrats had all the best of the publicity. They began last January preparing for the November elections, and every week delivered broadside attacks over a nation-wide radio hookup upon the policies of the Hoover administration. The tariff, the Federal Farm Board, the commercial depression and consequent unemployment, were continually under review. The Republicans seemed dazed and made no effort to strike back. The President and his Cabinet minimized the unemployment situation, and scarcely seemed to know that it existed until the election was upon them. The Republican national committee was in a state of coma between January and October, while the Democratic committee was working night and day. However, amid all the fault-finding that is bound to follow, we may be sure that the President, by almost common consent, will be cast in the role of the goat.

Mr. Hoover has had a great deal of hard luck, but he has also blundered egregiously. His Federal Farm Board was just socialistic enough to frighten the business of the country, but not socialistic enough to confer any benefit upon the farmers for whose relief it was created. The tariff did not differ greatly from the Republican high tariff of 1922, which it superseded, but during the seventeen months it hung in the balance, business was disturbed and the prevailing depression made more manifest. The prohibition law was pushed hard enough to cause irritation, but stopped far short of rigid enforcement. The five Southern States captured by the Republicans in 1928 were allowed to drift back into the Democratic fold, and now Senator Heflin of Alabama, the last surviving "Hoovercrat," disappears from public life. The Western Republicans, who required very careful handling, were driven into open revolt. The unemployment situation was so obviously under-rated, that the President did not appoint his committee to make a survey of the situation until about three weeks before the election. Never did a political party fight so faint-heartily as did the Republicans in the recent elections. Strangely enough, the Congress just chosen will not assemble until a year from next December. The coming session will be the final session of the old Congress, and it will contain a large number of lame ducks which will have to be taken care of by the Hoover administration.

"I say, Fader," said Isaac eagerly, "I made a pound profit today." "Did you my boy?" said his father with interest. Tell me how you did it." "Well," replied young Isaac, "I bought a guinea-pig for von shilling."

Motners, Mix This at Home for a Bad Cough

You'll be pleasantly surprised when you make up this simple home mixture and try it for a distressing cough or chest cold. It takes but a moment to mix and costs little, but it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

Get 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex from any drugist. Pour this into a 16 oz. bottle; Armitistice holiday with his parents, syrup or strained honey. The 16 ounces thus made costs no more than a small bottle of ready-made medicine, yet it is much more effective. It is pure, keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste. This simple remedy has a remarkable three-fold action. It goes right to the seat of the trouble, loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes away the inflammation. Part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly upon the bronchial tubes and thus helps to wardly to throw off the whole troubler with surprising ease. Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles. Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money returned.

The Indian River tea and bazaar, which was held in Indian River parish hall recently, was a splendid success. Notwithstanding the very disagreeable night, the hall was completely filled. The tables were splendidly arranged and looked very attractive.

Mr. J. C. Aitken and Miss Aitken

MALPEQUE

The memorial service in Princetown United Church on Sunday morning was very impressive, Rev. E. M. Aitken being the speaker. The subject was the message of a veteran warrior and the text was "Watch Ye, stand fast in the faith, quit ye like men be strong." 1 Col. 16-13. Beginning his remarks the speaker said: "This is a testing time, we are tested by our attitude to the past. To look back one sees only the mountain peaks, the hills and valleys which have been lost sight of. There are some peaks that will continue to be seen no matter how far we may wander. That part is not one of all sunshine. The good old days never existed. They were days when Luther cried out, 'I am sick of life,' when Calvin said, 'The future appals me.' We are the possessors of a rich inheritance, but the road of posterity is stained red with the blood of the sacrifices of the generations, our own being mingled with the others. The world is still blundering along. The same forces that put Jesus on the cross put our young boys beneath those little wooden crosses. We are now realizing that the causes of the Great War were quite different than those which we had been so ready to accept when the bugle call was sounded from ocean to ocean. The world is tired of war, it is discovering what Napoleon discovered, 'The more I study the world the more I am convinced of the utter inability of force to accomplish anything durable.' How avoid it? Not by hat ing it, or passing resolutions but by creating new hearts in men and women, by bringing our difficulties and laying them at the feet of Christ and like the inhabitants of Argentine and Chile, mould the metal we are now building into cannons into statues of the Christ to erect along the border-line between nations. We need to accept the challenge which comes out of the experience of an aged veteran, 'Watch ye, stand fast in the faith, quit ye like men be strong.' Nations can only do that as individuals are leading the way—we honor our beloved dead best not by singing their praises but by carrying on in the spirit which enabled them to make such sacrifice. After prayer the Young Peoples Group led by Mr. Aitken marched around the front of the church and two of the members, Miss Constance MacNutt and Thelma Woodside laid a wreath in front of the monument which stands on the church grounds. Mr. Aitken then offered a memorial prayer. The congregation then filed back to the church and the remaining exercises were completed. The evening text was 'What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits towards me.' Ps. 117-12 and 'Present your bodies a living sacrifice,' Romans 12-1. The Psalmist is here asking a question that is but a repetition of a question that has been asked by men in all ages. We see primitive man bearing before a crude altar in a sacred grove and on it a human sacrifice. We see Abraham ready to offer Isaac. The prophet caught a clearer glimpse of God. Then the peace offering and later the burnt offering. We hear Micah crying out, 'Will the Lord be pleased with ten thousand of rams?' What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, to love mercy and to walk humbly with thy God. Jesus gave the full answer to the question. Every day he answered some phase of it, 'I consecrate myself.' In writing to the Romans who had seen so many dead sacrifices, Paul exclaimed, Present your bodies a living sacrifice. We may glorify war and think of the young life slain in the battlefield as the highest sacrifice, but how much greater had the young life been brought to the feet of Christ with the same devotion and to give into the world to live a whole life as a living sacrifice.

Miss Anne F. Keir and her little niece, Miss Mary Keir left on Tuesday morning for Toronto, where Miss Keir will spend two months with her niece, Mrs. Clyde Auld. Later she purposes spending two months with relatives in Birmingham, Alabama.

IN MEMORIAM

FRANCIS X. McVARIEN

At Sour's Line Road, on the 21st Sept., Francis X. McVarish, aged 61 years. The deceased had received hospital treatment in Boston three years ago for stomach trouble, and had apparently completely recovered, when it recurred suddenly and after two weeks' illness, during which time he was frequently visited by his physician and pastors, hopes were entertained for his recovery, but God willed otherwise and fortified by the rites of the Holy Catholic Church, he passed to his reward. The deceased was a devout member of St. Mary's Church, Souris, and always ready to help all movements for the advancement of Church and State. Kind and obliging in manner, he will be much missed by his numerous friends and neighbors, but it is in the home that a kind husband and father will be most missed. He is survived by his wife and four sons, Wallace, section foreman, P. E. I. Railway; Hugh Earl, Medford, Mass.; Frank and Elaine, at home, and one daughter, Mrs. Joseph McVee, Roxbury, can see John made the supreme sacrifice in France in 1917.

The esteem in which he was held was amply testified by the large concourse of people which followed his remains to St. Mary's Church, Souris, on the 24th. After High Mass and the usual oblations, the remains were laid to rest in the adjoining cemetery. The pall bearers were Louis McDonald, Joseph A. McDonald, John Thompson, Philip McLaughlin, Stephen J. McAulay, Allan J. McCormack, The following gave Mass Cards:—Walle and Ade, C. Frank and Elaine, 2; Judith C. McAulay, 2; Stephen J.
