Much credit is due the Railway management of this City for a much needed improvement in the Baggage Room here. A corner has been partitioned off which serves as an office and in which the baggage master can keep his fingers warm enough to make plain figures. Although the partition is not to the ceiling yet it keeps the wind etc. from blowing the papers etc off the desk while the doors are open. Most stations of any size have a private office for the baggage master and Charlottetown is not below the mark.

At the close of the Prayer Service at the Baptist Church on Wednesday evening, J. K. Ross, on behalf of the congregation presented pastor G. R. and Mrs. White with a Xmas purse. The pastor was so taken by surprise that he could do but little more than express a warm, plain "thank you." But both the "purse" and the "thanks" were well received and much appreciated by pastor and people, who have now labored together in a growing fellowship for upwards of six years.

Thursday afternoon as the outward trains were leaving the City, a man partly intoxicated, was gingerly carrying a good sized parcel. By some unknown means to him the paper broke and smash went a good-sized bottle full of some liquid. More gingerly he tried to save the remainder when crash again went another. In his rage or disappointment he gave the remains a kick over the floor nearly doing damage to passersby. Still more gingerly he fingered the one remaining bottle and succeeded in getting it safely in his overcoat pocket with the neck of the bottle and the straw cask plainly visible to all and then boarded the eastern train. He missed his Xmas joy.
