

Old Dutch

Keeps everything in the bathroom spotless. Use it on walls, enamel tubs, basins, and nickel fixtures.

A little goes a long way

We Gave the Women the Vote and they unanimously elected

Our Chief

To represent them in the baking of the whitest and most wholesome bread made throughout P. E. Island. The women and McLeod's Flour are the mainstay of our country.

McLEOD'S MILLING COMPANY BRATFORD

Ask your grocer for "OUR CHIEF" and "McLEOD'S SPECIAL" The "Flours that satisfy"

Notice to Customers

Our Fall accounts are now ready and we request an early settlement.—Wright Bros, Victoria, 10116-11-18-19

NOTICE

Those who have not already settled their accounts, please do so at an early date. A.M. McDONALD Murray River, P. E. Island, 10775 13 61

NOTICE

All accounts due me not arranged for before Jan. 1, 1923, will be given in to solicitor's for collection. C. H. HICKEN, Sturgeon, P. E. Island

NOTICE

Having wound up by business at Uigg, I hereby give notice that all amounts due me by note or book accounts not settled by January 1st 1923 will be handed to my solicitor for collection. Payment before that date may be made to me at Charlottetown or at the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Victoria. M.H. CAMPBELL, 30738-13-41

Dressed Poultry WANTED

Until Dec. 15, 1922

Will receive well dressed Geese, Ducks, Chickens, Turkeys. Highest market prices for good stock.

Swift Canadian Co. 59 Water Street 10638-5-dtt.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RY

GOING WEST ?

Complete information as to rates—train service—connections, etc., etc.

FULL DETAILS

Furnished, and all arrangements completed for comfort and economy.

M. DAVISON, Local Agent, 30738-31st

A Sweetheart At Thirty

THE STORY OF A WOMAN'S TRANSFORMATION

By Marion Rubincam

A LONG DRIVE Chapter 108

As we slid away from the gate of my old home, I turned around for a last look. For it was almost that I should not see the place in Healy Falls for years. And when I did it would be as Mrs. Francis Meade, as the wife of a wealthy business man, as the mistress of a lovely home in the city, as the mother by adoption of my beloved Violet.

The farmhouse was not romantic to look at. It was the sort of a place one might be glad to leave. Farmhouses are supposed to be rather quaint and attractive, with long, low lines, thick walls and open fires. And some are—Francis has found one—but that does not belong to this part of the story.

Our farmhouse was built in the days when a narrow-chested style of architecture seemed to prevail. Its roof ran to too sharp a peak, it was not broad enough. The windows were too small, so in winter the rooms seemed dark and in summer they were not enough air.

I did not finish the sentence. The early winter evening had enveloped us, we had been running with our lights on for some miles. Francis pulled the car to the side of the road and stopped—we were going through a little woods and our lights cut the dusk. He leaned over and kissed me, only that, then started the car again. But it went through me, that kiss as few other caresses had done before.

And I did not believe then that as I still was only a habit. Perhaps love doesn't last—perhaps after years together it just becomes—

I did not finish the sentence. The early winter evening had enveloped us, we had been running with our lights on for some miles. Francis pulled the car to the side of the road and stopped—we were going through a little woods and our lights cut the dusk. He leaned over and kissed me, only that, then started the car again. But it went through me, that kiss as few other caresses had done before.

OUR DINNER Chapter 109

We turned finally into Fifth Avenue and started South. "Almost home!" I said happily. "Francis, go over to Broadway when we pass the Park, I want to see all the lights again."

"Will you ever get over your fondness for the gaudy lights of that terrible street?" he asked. "No, never," I answered. "They may be gaudy, but they are like a carnival that is always going on."

"Such sentimental ideas!" he scoffed, turning the car to the right. "Very well, I'll drive you through the romantic dimness of Central Park and bring you out in a blaze of glory at the Broadway entrance."

There now he announced as we turned into the brilliance of the theatre district. "Look as much as you can, for after we are married and go to Europe, you won't see this sort of thing for a long time not till we come back again."

"But you won't miss it," he went on. "There will be so many other things for you to grow excited about that a mere waste of valuable electricity to advertise garters and hairpins won't interest you at all."

"Oh, but it will!" I protested. "Look at the huge crowds, Francis. It's near time for the theatre isn't it? I always forget there are so many people in the world, until I come up here in the evening."

Francis laughed again. "The number of people walking along this particular street are going to delay your dinner half an hour," he told me. "We have to wait now at every crossing to let the traffic through."

"Dinner! What a materialist you are!" And again he laughed—the rich tones laugh that pleased me so much. "Materialist!" he echoed. "That's a new word. I never heard you use it before. Only don't think too harshly of me. I like to tease you. And even if these glaring gaudy signs annoy me, I like to have you like them."

This I didn't understand. Francis explained, as he started the car again after one of our many waits in the crowd of the cars and taxis: "I like your enthusiasm. It's as fresh as that of a young girl. It's a glorious quality to have, and you have so much of it. I hope you never lose it."

"It's such a glorious world," I answered. "How could I help but be enthusiastic? Besides think of all the lovely parts of it we're to see together."

And I turned to smile up at him. We had come finally to the end of the great jam, and we were able to run a little faster. I turned from the comparative darkness of Lower Broadway to look back, up the crooked twisting lane that blazed and sparkled and winked and glared with its ever moving lights and its restless ever-moving crowds. Then I settled back for the few minutes left of our drive. "Violet said she would have dinner ready for us. She thought you might be tired and prefer to dine at our place, instead of a restaurant," Francis said as we turned into our street.

TROUBLED WITH ECZEMA 2 YEARS

On Face and Arms. Lost Sleep. Cuticura Heals.

"I was troubled for about two years with eczema. It broke out on my face and arms in pimples and itched and burned so badly that I lost much sleep on account of it. My face and arms were covered with it, and I was ashamed to appear out of the house. I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and immediately found relief, and after using one cake of Soap and one box of Ointment I was healed." (Signed) Miss Helen Mark, 4259 Maryland St., San Diego, Calif., April 18, 1921.

Use Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Talcum exclusively for every-day toilet purposes.

Sample Each Free by Mail. Address: "Terman Institute," 544 St. Paul St., W. Montreal. Sold everywhere. Sensitive. Cuticura Soap shaves without razor.

I don't think she is in love with him, either—it's only a habit. Perhaps love doesn't last—perhaps after years together it just becomes—

I did not finish the sentence. The early winter evening had enveloped us, we had been running with our lights on for some miles. Francis pulled the car to the side of the road and stopped—we were going through a little woods and our lights cut the dusk. He leaned over and kissed me, only that, then started the car again. But it went through me, that kiss as few other caresses had done before.

And I did not believe then that as I still was only a habit. Perhaps love doesn't last—perhaps after years together it just becomes—

I did not finish the sentence. The early winter evening had enveloped us, we had been running with our lights on for some miles. Francis pulled the car to the side of the road and stopped—we were going through a little woods and our lights cut the dusk. He leaned over and kissed me, only that, then started the car again. But it went through me, that kiss as few other caresses had done before.

OUR DINNER Chapter 109

We turned finally into Fifth Avenue and started South. "Almost home!" I said happily. "Francis, go over to Broadway when we pass the Park, I want to see all the lights again."

"Will you ever get over your fondness for the gaudy lights of that terrible street?" he asked. "No, never," I answered. "They may be gaudy, but they are like a carnival that is always going on."

"Such sentimental ideas!" he scoffed, turning the car to the right. "Very well, I'll drive you through the romantic dimness of Central Park and bring you out in a blaze of glory at the Broadway entrance."

There now he announced as we turned into the brilliance of the theatre district. "Look as much as you can, for after we are married and go to Europe, you won't see this sort of thing for a long time not till we come back again."

"But you won't miss it," he went on. "There will be so many other things for you to grow excited about that a mere waste of valuable electricity to advertise garters and hairpins won't interest you at all."

"Oh, but it will!" I protested. "Look at the huge crowds, Francis. It's near time for the theatre isn't it? I always forget there are so many people in the world, until I come up here in the evening."

Francis laughed again. "The number of people walking along this particular street are going to delay your dinner half an hour," he told me. "We have to wait now at every crossing to let the traffic through."

"Dinner! What a materialist you are!" And again he laughed—the rich tones laugh that pleased me so much. "Materialist!" he echoed. "That's a new word. I never heard you use it before. Only don't think too harshly of me. I like to tease you. And even if these glaring gaudy signs annoy me, I like to have you like them."

This I didn't understand. Francis explained, as he started the car again after one of our many waits in the crowd of the cars and taxis: "I like your enthusiasm. It's as fresh as that of a young girl. It's a glorious quality to have, and you have so much of it. I hope you never lose it."

"It's such a glorious world," I answered. "How could I help but be enthusiastic? Besides think of all the lovely parts of it we're to see together."

And I turned to smile up at him. We had come finally to the end of the great jam, and we were able to run a little faster. I turned from the comparative darkness of Lower Broadway to look back, up the crooked twisting lane that blazed and sparkled and winked and glared with its ever moving lights and its restless ever-moving crowds. Then I settled back for the few minutes left of our drive.

"Violet said she would have dinner ready for us. She thought you might be tired and prefer to dine at our place, instead of a restaurant," Francis said as we turned into our street.

"I would," I said. "How sweet of her to bother about it. I suppose Bud will be there too." But Bud was not.

"How splendid of you to get a whole dinner by yourself!" I said after Vi and I had greeted each other enthusiastically. "But child you don't look well. Have you been studying too hard? No!" the girl answered pulling a big apron over her dress. But I'm going to win the prize in the medieval history test." She went on with details of the prize and its conditions, going back and forth from out tiny kitchen to the table set in the living room. Meanwhile, Francis and our lady's husband brought up my bags and the armload of evergreen boughs I had brought in from the country.

"Dinner wasn't much trouble," Vi announced as we gathered around the little table. "I brought over some things already cooked from Telem's restaurant, and did the rest myself." And, indeed, she served a delightfully dainty meal. "Helen has fallen in love, I think," she said as we sat with coffee cups before us, while Francis was smoking a cigarette. "With whom?" I asked excitedly.

"Toby Markham," she said her blue eyes dancing merrily. "You liked him, you know Aunt Enid. You were always delighted when I went out with him."

"That was because I thought Toby's presence was good for Bud," I said tactlessly. "Where is Bud, Vi?"

"I don't know she said quietly. But a little of the color ran out of her cheeks as she answered me. "Violet," I cried. "What do you mean by that tone of voice? Do you mean that it's his fault or yours that he isn't here?"

"M-m-m," said Vi, "I told him not to come."

THE PUZZLE Chapter 110

I dropped the subject after Violet's answer to my question about Bud. I did not want to force her confidence. If she wanted to tell me, she would in good time—perhaps after Francis had left.

"What do you think of our family, Uncle Francis?" the girl asked. "That's not a fair question to put it? For you would have to say something polite."

"No, for after all, you belong to my family now—as well as to that one," Francis answered, with that delightfully winning smile of his. "Yes, so I do. I can't get over it!" Violet's eyes were softening now, as she turned to Francis. The pink was running back to her cheeks, too—I was always amazed at the girls' sensitiveness. Every emotion showed on her face. I decided to keep the talk away from Bud.

"I think your family represents the great tragedy of neglected opportunity," Francis said finally. "And your brother James who is really most delightful, is the victim of the tragedy."

"Yes, poor James! Sometime I'll get him away from the farm and start him doing something he'll like—something he can make a career in." Violet said assuming suddenly a very grown up air. "He won't come. It's not there. I'm afraid," Francis said kindly. "I would help—well both help Violet—if your brother breaks away. But he won't do it. He hasn't the initiative for that one."

TUDHOPE - CANADA

and McLAUGHLIN SLEIGHS

McLAUGHLIN NO. 2 We have a large assortment of the above Sleights—Piano Boxes—Auto Seats—High Backs and Gentlemen's Drivers, with Cloth, Cord and Plush upholstery.

ALSO Pung Sleights—High Box Sleights and Wood Sleights, Sleigh Robes, Heavy Cloth and Fur Coats, Sleigh Bells, harness, Root Cutters, Grain Grinders, Cream Separators, Washing Machines and Clothes Wringers, all of which we are selling at factory prices to clear.

Don't fail to call and see our stock and get our prices before buying.

A. B. L. HORNE Mgr. Summerside Branch A. HORNE & CO. G. W. PROFITT Mgr. Kensington Branch

At this moment, Helen knook ed and came in. I was delighted much. We can't do it all—not for some day he'll get up the courage a boy. It wouldn't be good for him to break away." (Continued on Page 5.)

The Modern Woman

She is a business woman. She makes 80 per cent. of all purchases made in retail stores. She is an astute, clever buyer. She runs her household strictly on a business basis.

She is constantly in touch with the stores and their offerings. Through the advertising she knows the lowest prices, the best qualities and the newest commodities. Long before she leaves the house for a shopping trip, she knows exactly what she wants, where to get it and how much to pay.

She buys merchandise of established reputation. If it's clothing, she knows how well it should wear and what the style should be. If it's a musical instrument, she knows what to expect in tone and workmanship. If it's a vacuum cleaner, she knows what kind of service it should give.

Ask her and she will tell you it pays to read the advertisements.

It will pay you too. It will save your time, money and effort. It will help you dress better, eat better, sleep better and live better.

Your time will be well invested. Try reading the advertisements.

CHANGE OF TIME CHARLOTTETOWN ELMIRA

Effective December 13th, 1922, mixed train leaving Charlottetown at 5.30 A. M., arriving at Souris at 10.15 A. M. and Elmira at 12.40 P. M. will be discontinued, and commencing same date this train will leave Charlottetown at 6.20 A. M., arrive Souris at 1.25 A. M., leave Souris at 1.15 P. M. and arrive Charlottetown 5.50 P. M. Mon. Wed. and Friday, instead of Monday and Friday only, as shown on pages 4 and 5 of folder. Effective December 13th the motor car service between Elmira and Souris is cancelled and steam services will be resumed, leaving Elmira at 5.30 A. M. Arriving Souris at 6.30 A. M., returning leaving Souris at 6.20 P. M., arriving Elmira 7.20 P. M. daily Sundays excepted. All other trains will run as per schedule.

DISTRICT PASSENGER AGENT'S OFFICE, Charlottetown, P. E. I. December 13th, 1922. 10873-14-61

HORSES FOR SALE

Your choice of 20 good, sound, well broken horses, comprising the following:— 4 drivers, 8 low set plugs that are hard to beat; 8 general purpose, weighing from 12 to 13 hundred lbs., ages from 4 to 9 years. Every horse guaranteed. Terms to suit purchasers. A. K. McNEIL, Southport, 10761-13-71.

The Bankruptcy Act In the Supreme Court

In the Matter of the Estate of A. W. D. Wadman & Co. Limited, of Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, Authorized Assignors. TENDERS Sealed Tenders will be received by the undersigned, up to noon on Tuesday the 19th day of December, above mentioned Authorized Assignors. Tender No. 1. For the Stock of Merchandise consisting of Dry Goods, and Ladies' and Gents' Furnishings. These goods have all been inventoried at present day 10/15.

Tender No. 2. For the Book debts of the Estate of the above named Authorized Assignor. Tender No. 3. For the store fixtures of the above named Authorized Assignors. Tenders must be marked plainly on the outside with the number and name of the item tendered for.

A certified cheque for 20 per cent of the purchase price must accompany each Tender. The highest or any tender not necessarily accepted. A complete detailed inventory of the stock of Merchandise and Store Fixtures, and a list of the Book Debts will be examined at the offices of P. W. Turner & Co., and S. A. McDonald Charlottetown or in the office of the undersigned at Summerside.

"THE CANADIAN CREDIT MEN'S TRUST ASSOCIATION LTD." (Maritime Division) Per E.W. MANSON, Representative for Prince Edward Island, Authorized Trustee 10788-13-41.

The first and original Cold and Grip Tablet, the merit of which is recognized by all civilized nations.

Be sure you get BROMO Quinine

The box bears this signature E. W. Grove Price 30c Made in Canada