ISLAND RETAKEN (Continued from page 1.) It was in strange contrast to death. It was in strange contrast to death. It was in strange contrast to death.

Actual, from a purely military standpoint, from a purely military standpoint, from a purely military standpoint.

For months the American public clamored for the Japs to be tossed out. The reply of the United States navy always was that Kiska, and Attu could be recaptured anytime an amphibious force could be spared for the task.

The fact that the job has been done is a clear indication of the trained and equipped manpower available to the United States in the Pacific—and a warning to the Japanese in the South Pacific and Burma.

Tubercular Pig By Human Contact D. J. Bonnell, chairman Citizens' Sanatorium Extension Committee is receiving many testimonials and resolutions from farmer's organizations in all parts of the province re serious tuberculosis situation.

They point to the menace of having such cases cared for in private families without proper treatment and lacking even reasonable precaution.

One Farmer's Institute Official refers to a case where a farmer died of tuberculosis, and at the subsequent sale of his estate a pig was purchased by one of the deceased man's neighbors, who later shipped same to a packing plant.

In place of cash remittance received a report showing the animal to be tubercular, presumably from human infection.

Previously there was a notable S. doubleless one of many, where a valuable dairy cow became infected by tubercular human contact.

This situation calls for immediate and urgent attention of all individuals and organizations having the welfare of the people of Prince Edward Island at heart.

Further, it was announced in London that Eduard Benes, Pro-Chief of the Czechoslovak Government, will leave shortly for Moscow to conclude a Soviet-Czech treaty of alliance similar to the 1935 pact between Moscow and Prague which was vitiated by the Munich Agreement of 1938.

The new pact, it was reported, will provide Soviet guarantees for the integrity of the Czechoslovakian and one clause implies a common land frontier—meaning recognition of the 1940 frontiers of Russia in Poland. The Russians will support a return to Czechoslovakia of Teschen, annexed by Poland after Munich, it was reported.

Benes' trip to Moscow had been delayed because the Polish Government objects to the treaty he is going to sign, and the British Government has adopted the attitude that Benes should do nothing now affecting frontier problems.

Questions are to be submitted to the House of Commons when it reassembles regarding reports that Whitehall is sending a special trip because of Poland's anxiety. The separate peace idea received scant acceptance, not only because the British-Soviet Treaty bars such a step, but also because Stalin presumably is convinced that someone must smash Hitler if the Soviet is to exist.

It is sumably believed that if Russia withdrew from the war and western powers failed to carry through the job of beating Hitler, the Red Army again would have to take up the task without allies. And if the democracies won in the face of a Russian withdrawal, he would have forfeited all chance for friendship and co-operation with them.

Some such idea seemed to be the German reaction. A Berlin broadcast, while gloating that "the latent row in the Allies camp thus again has become acute," soberly declared "this domestic row makes no sense. Roosevelt, Churchill nor Stalin any less hostile toward national Socialism and they are now, as before, agreed that it must be fought to the end."

Our editorial summed it up thus: "Stalin does not want promises but action."

JAP ACTION (Continued from page 1.) ...Canadian Press War Correspondent Herb Jones travelled with the Canadian invasion force from a west coast port and landed on the Aleutian Island Sunday, Aug. 15, where he is his story of why Canadian and Americans found on Kiska, deserted by the Japanese.

By HERB JONES (Canadian Press War Correspondent) KISKA ISLAND, Aug. 17—(Delayed)—(CP)—Kiska is ours without firing a shot.

It is now more than 56 hours since the first units of our combined American-Canadian force, the biggest Pacific invasion force since Guadalcanal, set foot on this North Pacific island early Sunday (Aug. 15) from the Bering Sea side, but not a single Japanese has been encountered.

Our commanders believe the Japanese pulled out, just how no one is sure, a short time before our arrival.

They left behind crude mines made of dynamite and marmalade tins buried on beaches. Digout mines are still being found. Our placements still had their ammunition and guns.

Our advance reconnaissance units found Kiska harbor, believed the most heavily fortified of the Japanese emplacements theirs for the taking.

Pte. F. Brownlee of Denver, Colo., one of the first to enter Kiska harbor camp, told me buildings there were intact and had been occupied as recently as a week or two ago. A 700-foot flying strip was built with our bomb holes from recent air attacks.

Some Canadians in the advance party to reach this spot where resistance was expected threw a light in dugouts but there was no sign of life.

Despite the lack of life we are digging in on the island.

Except for a very few, Chinese civilians lead as hard a life as the soldiers of their country—and the Chinese soldier it is said: "He should have the eyes of a cat, because Japanese air activity forces advance at night; feet of rubber, because Chinese soldiers often have no shoes; a stomach of steel, because there is sometimes no food to eat; and the strength of the ox, because nature must frequently be the only cure for illness and wounds."

More than 95 per cent of the middle and lower classes in occupied China are living under distressing conditions. Japanese bombing has caused terrible hardships to the civilian populace. Last year drought in Honan Province and the Yellow River's flooding took the main source of food from five million people and made five hundred thousand homeless.

War, and these calamities, add up to create a situation which makes it imperative that the Chinese War Relief Fund reach its objective of $1,000,000 in its current appeal to the people of Canada. If your heart is stirred with sympathy for a suffering nation, tell your hand to reach in your pocket—and not come out empty.
