Summerside

Island - born Man killed in Train, car crash

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Dalton, Summerside, have received word of the safe arrival in England of their daughter, Andrea, who is a Nursing Sister with the Canadian Forces. Miss Dalton is a graduate of St. Martha's Hospital, Antigonish.

SOURIS, Man, Nov. 29 — Four persons are dead and another was in critical condition as the result of a collision between an automobile and a Winnipeg express train on the Canadian Pacific railway crossing at Newstead, five miles east of here, at 1:55 p. m. Friday.

Dead are: Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ronaghan, Mrs. Margaret Charles, a widow and Aldor DeVries, farmer, all of the Napinka district. Injured was a leading aircraftman R.C.A.F. believed to be stationed at No. 12 S.F.T.S., Brandon. His identity will not be revealed until next-of-kin have been notified all were occupants of the auto.

According to R. C. M. P. reports, Mr. Ronaghan was driving the car when it struck the train. The group was going to Brandon from Napinka.

In this area the highway runs parallel with the railway for a short distance and then makes a sharp-angled turn at the crossing. Mr. Ronaghan was a prominent figure in provincial curling circles, having represented Napinka in the annual Winnipeg, Brandon and Melita bonspiels from 1921 until three years ago. For the past three years an ailment had forced him to refrain from taking an active part. He won countless trophies, medals and prizes in the "spels and won the J. P. Robertson Memorial trophy in the Winnipeg bonspiel of 1921. He was also much interested in hunting.

At the time of his death, he was an agent for the North American Insurance Company. He also operated a barber shop in Napinka.

Had Served as Mayor

Born in Charlottetown, P.E.I., 55 years ago, he came to Napinka at the age of 16. He served alternately as the mayor and a councillor for many years.

Mr. Ronaghan married Miss Maude Menzies of Napinka, at Grande-Clairiere, Man., in 1910. They are survived by three daughters, Mrs. G. L. Corke, Orissa and Madeline, all of Winnipeg, and one son, Leading Aircraftman Jack Ronaghan, M.C.A.F., McLeod, Alta.

Mrs. Charles had no family and had resided in Napinka for more than 35 years.

DeVries had farmed just south of Napinka for the last four years. (The William Ronaghan referred to above is a son of Mr. John Ronaghan of this city, where several sisters and brothers at present reside. He visited his former home here about four years ago.)

Apple pie might be our national dessert, but not every cook knows how to make it. So here are some tips to help you make perfect apple pie.

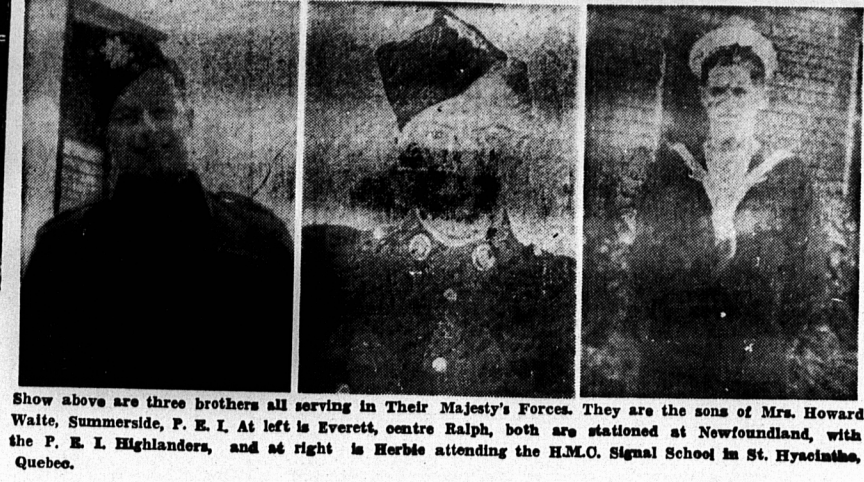

Peel the apples just before you use them—to keep them from turning brown. Some people put apple slices in water to keep them white, but water is absorbed by the apples and will make the crust soggy.

You'll save time in preparing your apples if you peel them by hand. Then slice from the side of the apple, parallel to the core. Cut these large slices in half.

Perhaps your pies lack the true apple flavor because they're too sweet—scientific tests have shown that half a cup of sugar is enough for most pies and 3-4 of a cup for sour apples.

Mix the sugar and the cinnamon with the apple slices before you put the slices in the pie. This not only makes the flavor better, but preserves the color.

LONDON—(CP)—Airmen and WAAFS quartered at a distance from their airbases will be given bicycles in an experiment to save gasoline and mechanical transport.

Show above are three brothers all serving in Their Majesty's Forces. They are the sons of Mrs. Howard Waite, Summerside, P. E. I. At left is Everett, centre Ralph, both are stationed at Newfoundland, with the P. E. I. Highlanders, and at right is Herbie attending the H.M.C. Signal School in St. Hyacinthe, Quebec.

Arthur Meighen Is A Gifted Man

HE POSSESSES A RICHLY STORED AND BROAD HORIZON APITUDE FOR HIGHER MATHEMATICS

(By Hector Charlesworth in Hamilton Spectator)

The return of the Right Honourable Arthur Meighen to the leadership of the Conservative Party, after 15 years, is clear proof that you can not keep a good man down.

In a long newspaper experience, I have never known a public man who has done less (or even so little) to promote personal publicity for himself. Yet even in the span of nearly six years, between 1928 and 1932, when he was a private citizen in Toronto with no voice in the councils of the nation, what- ever he said was considered important by news editors.

Though raised on a farm in Perth county, he has a large family connection scattered over various sections of Canada. The most widely known is the Montreal family of Sir John A. Macdonald, it is by the late A. Dickson Patterson, R. C. A.; and when it came on the market some years ago it was purchased by General Meighen as a gift for his relative, I knew well another of Mr. Meighen's connections, a Mr. Clark, for many years tax collector for the Township of York on the outskirts of Toronto.

Mr. Clark was a fine old gentleman, very kindly in his dealings with taxpayers who had encumbered themselves with vacant lots in outlying subdivisions. He saw much of young Meighen when the latter was an undergraduate at the University of Toronto in the nineties. I once asked him what the future statesman was like as a lad. The reply was direct: "Why talk the ear off you! Had his own opinions, but he was a clever, clever boy, and good company, too. But he'd talk the ear off you trying to make you agree with him!"

Student Days

Of Mr. Meighen's student days others have memories also. He was in his final year when the famous university strike against the administration of President James Loudon occurred early in 1895, led by Thomas Harmer (now Viscount Greenwood), William Lyon Mackenzie King and the late James A. Tuckey, afterwards an assistant editor of Saturday Night. Only about a dozen students, mostly young women stuck to the lecture rooms, and one of them was Arthur Meighen. He did not know him then, but he evidently had the views of one of the girls, who said she was not going to drop her work "just because Tom Greenwood is making speeches." The divergence of views between Meighen and Harmer began as long ago as that.

Among the few survivors of the faculty of those days is Prof. Alfred T. DeLury, formerly Dean of Arts at University College, and a student of Meighen's in the first year. He has often said that the thousands of students he has taught, the two with most aptitude for the mysteries of the trigonometry were Arthur Meighen and J. Stanley MacLean, the present head of Canada Packers, and chairman of the board of Massey Music Hall. Singularly enough, they were classmates, and though DeLury was young, he never encountered students of his brilliance in more than forty years of subsequent teaching. The mathematical curriculum at that time was so difficult that it was later in view to modify it, because so few students could master it.

Teacher and pupil have retained an affection for each other through the years, though the Irish to the core, has always been the reverse of a Tory. When, in 1927, Mr. Meighen came to live in Toronto as a private citizen, almost a stranger in a social sense, he was obviously not only a brilliant speaker in his political career, but during this period he told me that he had been in Ottawa on private business the day before, and that it had him with sadness to find himself to a literary discourse, but I don't think any intelligent listener turned his dial. Few Broadacres have ever met with such favourable fan mail. Not since the days of D'Arcy McGee has Canada had a public man capable of such a feat.

The singular fact about Mr. Meighen's enthusiasm for the "Swan of Avon" is that he feels that Shakespeare is for the study and not the stage. He cannot endure theatrical presentations of the tragedies; they merely make him restless. I do not subscribe to this view myself. I am convinced that the best way to understand Shakespeare's plays is to see them acted. But differences of opinion make the world go round.

QUEEN'S CANADIAN FUND DONATIONS

Repeated bombing raids on British port areas and the industrial midlands has attracted fresh attention to the frightful suffering of the many thousands of civilians in Great Britain who are harried from shelter to shelter and finally driven into the open country by successive raids. Eventually places are found for them all places of relative security, but their belongings of all kinds are destroyed. The task of emergency services is difficult. The task of setting up one more more with some quantity of clothing and bedding is much more difficult.

To meet these enormous needs, funds have been started in various parts of the world. Her Majesty use of her name in connection with the Dominion campaign, which is officially known as "The Queen's Canadian Fund for Air Raid Victims."

Every dollar contributed to the Queen's Canadian Fund goes without deduction to the Lord Mayor of London for distribution to the homeless and needy.

Contributions from this Province should be forwarded to the Royal Trust Company, Charlottetown, which reports the following receipts to date:

Received yesterday:—
Mrs. W. T. White, Charlottetown, $5.00.
St. Mary's Women's Institute, New Glasgow, $3.00.
Total to date $5,128.49.

A New Caste System?

(From The Toronto Globe and Mail)

Finance Minister Isley's statement that the Government's order freezing wartime salaries is a logical and necessary extension of the principle of stabilization of prices and wages will be accepted generally, in our opinion. But granting an exemption to Dominion Provincial and municipal employees, perhaps a circular around a large and growing proportion of the population, in effect setting it apart as a preferred class, and this, instead of being logical and necessary, is an unjust distinction unlikely to meet with approval.

Mr. Isley said Dominion Government employees had felt the effect of salary limitations since early in the war, and persons involved had additional work. It good politics to have as many Government employees as a circle to hold them. Nevertheless, it is Government taking authority to deal with exceptions everywhere, which ought to be sufficient for dealing with exceptions in its own household.

This is not the real point, however. The inclusion of Provincial and municipal employees makes the motive for drawing a line of implication is that a new financial caste system is being established, placing the people who pay the taxes on the employing public in a less favored position financially than those they pay. The freezing orders suggest that, as less Government employees receive their salaries in less profit and import duties, arbitrarily restricted incomes may be squeezed harder for the means with which to pay public employees on whom public are not fixed. Past experience in matters of this sort leave little room for expecting this manoeuvre to terminate with the war. Governments never relinquish revenue or organizational control, and the public is to be pauperized the general public for Government agrandizement over this cover story. It is a reality if the policy is followed of setting up Government employees as a financial hierarchy distinct friendly and so free from any thought of political effect.

Shakespearean Student

Higher mathematics and the poetry of Dante are not Mr. Meighen's only intellectual hobbies. —Shakespeare is his chief recreation. I take some pride in the fact that I suggested he give a public discourse on the poet some years ago. As it turned out, it was his first Shakespearean address. He made in Australia after he became a Senator. Later, during my association with national broadcasting, I invited him to speak on Shakespeare over the transcontinental network. I decided to allot an hour to it, against the advice of some of the staff who felt sure the public would never listen that long to a literary discourse. But I don't think any intelligent listener turned his dial. Few Broadacres have ever met with such favourable fan mail. Not since the days of D'Arcy McGee has Canada had a public man capable of such a feat.

The singular fact about Mr. Meighen's enthusiasm for the "Swan of Avon" is that he feels that Shakespeare is for the study and not the stage. He cannot endure theatrical presentations of the tragedies; they merely make him restless. I do not subscribe to this view myself. I am convinced that the best way to understand Shakespeare's plays is to see them acted. But differences of opinion make the world go round.

executive committee of the National War Labor Board, it was recommended that all employers of labor, regardless of the number of their employees, should be covered by the order.

"This recommendation was further supported by so many requests from employers, trade unions and employers that the government immediately accepted this amendment to the order.

"Since provincial staffs will be used for inspection, and in the view of the greater volume of work that will develop upon them because of the extension of the order to substantially all employers, the government also accepted the conference recommendation that there should be a separate regional war labor board for each province.

"Accordingly, there will be nine provincial regional boards, instead of five with the provincial ministers of labor as chairmen."

A further amendment to the original order-in-council provides that no employer may decrease the basic wage rates paid by him on Nov. 15 without official permission.

"Any such decreases already adopted since the passing of the order are to be cancelled," the statement said.

Mr. McLarty said the amendment would "remove a possible area of conflict and prevent overlapping between the Dominion order and provincial minimum wage laws."

He said the National War Labor Board, which administers the order jointly with the regional boards, is expected shortly to release interpretations of the new regulations.

AN UGLY VIEW

If one of your windows has an ugly view something definite can be done about it in these modern times. Have the plain glass replaced with a glass-block panel. You will have as much light as before minus the offending view. Glass shelves to hold small flower pots and ornaments may be added if you would further beautify the window.

The colors produced by hydrangeas can be traced to the acidity of alkalinity of the soil. An acid soil, unfortunately, changes the color of any pink hydrangeas to blue and alkaline soil will change that color back to pink. Gardeners have at their hands a perfect means for controlling the colors of hydrangeas.
