

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the cruelest pang of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

The person who is out looking for luck is not at home when Opportunity knocks.

NOTICE

Mr. Jeffrey's of New York Laboratories has arranged with me to accept orders for their new Tracheal Syringe, an instrument invented for curing lungworms in foxes. Among the users of this outfit are the U. S. Experimental Fur Farm and many large ranchers who have found it a valuable aid in the control of lungworms. Any average rancher can administer this treatment efficiently, and if interested may receive full information by applying to M. E. McLENNAN, R. R. No. 7, Charlottetown, P. E. I. 7920-9-21-31

A SUITOR TOO MANY

MILDRED BARBOUR

CHAPTER 68
THE MEMORABLE NIGHT
An all-afternoon session in Dorothy's studio followed Farquhar's promise not to go to Herbert, if Lila married him the next day.

Dorothy abandoned work, and the two girls sat facing each other soberly. Lila was limp with despair. Dorothy unusually grave.
"It's the end!" moaned Lila.
"I believe it is," Dorothy agreed. "As I understand that young man, he's not one to back down. If he's actually delivered this ultimatum, he'll stick to it."
"Then I might as well go and say good-by to Herbert."
"At least," said Dorothy, "it would be better if you yourself confessed, rather than to have him find out the truth through Captain Farquhar."
Lila began to laugh hysterically. "Can't you fancy the scene, Dot, if those two men come together? Can't you fairly hear the fireworks?"
"Dorothy's warning brought her back to sanity."
"Honestly, Lila, you'd better give up and go to Herbert sensibly. He might forgive—you never can tell. It isn't as though you'd deliberately meant to deceive him. Unfortunately cases like yours do happen, and if Herbert is broad enough—"
Lila's bleak smile stopped her.
"He isn't, and it's no use trying to be optimistic, Dot. Herbert will see the whole business in just one light—he'll contend that I deceived him, in the first place, when I told him I'd never loved another man. All the rest of the deceptions have simply been to cover that first one. I've had to lie like a trooper, and Herbert, who is the soul of honesty, would cast me into outer darkness for that alone, even if the question of our love were not involved."
"Well," said Dorothy sensibly, "what else can you do now, except confess and take your punishment? You can't marry your captain tomorrow, so the bargain is all off, and he's bound to see Herbert."
Lila rose wearily.
"I'm going to let tomorrow dawn and see what happens. Yes, I love Herbert so. Maybe Fate will have some respite for me."
Dorothy put her arms around Lila's shoulders.
"Dear Lila, I'm so sorry for you. I'd do anything in my power to help you."
"I know you would, angel." Lila kissed her fondly. "Do you know, Dot, I was afraid, a little while ago, that even you were turning against me."
"Nonsense!" said Dorothy, but she colored. "I had something on my mind, something that troubled me. It—it's over now."
Lila dragged herself home. As she entered the house, she noticed a man loitering on the opposite sidewalk. He seemed to look at her sharply. Or was it that, after learning about the detective, she was jumpy and overly suspicious?
Siddons opened the door for her, the perfect butler, but, as she was mounting the stairs, he stopped her: "Madam!"
"Yes, Siddons," she answered wearily.
"About the little matter of a raise—"
"Tomorrow, Siddons," she promised desperately, and hurried up to her room.
Herbert came home early with tickets for a play.
"We'll have a theater party all by ourselves," he told Lila, as he kissed her.
It almost broke her heart. She clung to him desperately.
"The last time!" she thought. "Oh, my darling, if you only guessed what is in store for us both tomorrow!"
She determined to make the evening flawless, memorable; to be gay and sweet. Herbert, in the year of his come, when he had only a faint memory of her as his wife, and she was alone somewhere in a bleak world, should recall that evening.
But, even while she strove to put every apprehension out of her mind for this one last evening, a new fear crept in, for Herbert, during dinner, seemed vaguely preoccupied. Finally he confessed:
"I'm worried, Lila, about Varney. He's acting very queerly of late. He seems to be no longer friendly, and, aside from his friendship, which I value, our business interests are so closely involved that, if he drew out, I'd stand to lose a great deal."
Lila knew only too well what Varney's attitude meant. He and Varney were rowing over that absurd story of her romance with a Frenchman, and Varney had linked the Herbert Wars with it. It might be typical of Varney to break with Herbert entirely, unless the horrid affair were cleared up. May, angry at Lila, but still sporting enough not to give the show away, would egg him on, out of spite.
"Don't worry, darling," said Lila, with a wan smile. "Everything will work out all right shortly."
"Yes," she told herself, "everything will work out, because I'll be out of the picture."
The car was at the door, and Lila, in her evening wrap, was waiting in the hall for Herbert, who had gone back to the library to fetch cigar-

Had No Appetite Weak And Dizzy

This New Brunswick Woman Restored by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. James Belyea, Brown's Flat, N. B., says:—"I am writing to tell you the great good I had through the timely use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My health had failed and I was troubled with great weakness. I had no appetite and frequently had dizzy spells. The least exertion would make my heart palpitate violently and I felt tired at all times. I had doctored a great deal without getting much relief, and was feeling greatly discouraged when I finally decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The happy results following the use of this medicine can best be summed up by saying that I am again perfectly well, able to do my household work and enjoy life once more. I feel it a duty to recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all weak people."
If you have any, or all of the symptoms above noted, do not delay, begin treatment at once with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You will be surprised to note the improvement in your condition after a few weeks. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. If you will send your name and address a little booklet, "Building Up the Blood," will be sent free.

DOUBT POSTMASTER GENERAL'S SINCERITY

WINDSOR, Ont., Sept. 20.—"The Postmaster-General knew very well that the Civil Service Commission would not give us the raises, when he recommended increases to the commission." The government lies when it says it can't give us the money without the approval of the commission," charged delegate Bull, of Ottawa, in the National Convention here today of the Federated Association of Letter-Carriers of Canada.
Supporting the statement, delegate Hull, of Toronto, declared: "No government elected by the people to legislate for them, has the power to renege its authority by any commission by way of passing the buck. Although the commission refused to give us the money, if the Postmaster-General had introduced a resolution into the House of Commons and the government had voted for it, we would have got our increases, despite the commission."

ettes, when the door-bell thrilled. Siddons answered it, and Lila, glancing up, caught sight of a man who, she thought, was the same man she'd seen loitering before the house that afternoon.
There was a murmured conversation with Siddons, and then the man turned away and descended the steps.
"Who was that, Siddons? What did he want?" demanded Lila.
"A mistake, Madam," replied the butler. "He was looking for some people named Smith."
Lila laughed sharply, and then stopped. It occurred to her that there was an uneasy expression on Siddons's face.
The play Herbert had chosen was one of the light and airy summer farces. It was uproariously amusing. Lila forgot her troubles momentarily. Her heart slipped into Herbert's, and he held it close.
And then, at the end of the play, when the audience surged toward the lobby, she saw Farquhar in the crowd. His eyes were fixed steadily on Herbert.
Her heart fairly stopped. He was coming toward them! They would meet at the door!

NO MEDICINE LIKE Baby's Own Tablets

For Either the Newborn Babe or the Growing Child.
There is no other medicine to equal Baby's Own Tablets for little ones—whether it be for the newborn babe or the growing child the Tablets always do good. They are absorbed free from opiates or other harmful drugs and the mother can always feel safe in using them.
Concerning the Tablets, Mrs. John Armour, R. R. 1, South Monaghan, Ont., says:—"We have three fine, healthy children, to whom, when a medicine is needed, we have given only Baby's Own Tablets. The Tablets are the best medicine you can keep in any home where there are young children."
Baby's Own Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the stomach and bowels; banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simmers and make teething easy. They are sold by medicine dealers or direct by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HUGE EAGLE ATTACKS DOG

GLACE BAY, Sept. 20.—At five o'clock yesterday morning, Thomas McLeod, Homeville, C. B., was aroused by a terrific battle being waged in his back yard between his thoroughbred Airdale dog and a huge eagle attacking the dog savagely, while the animal fought the bird desperately, notwithstanding the fact that the cruel talons of the eagle were tearing the dog literally to pieces. Mr. McLeod ran back to the house and got his shot gun. It was some moments before he could get a range on the bird, so viciously was the fight being waged between the dog and the terror of the skies. Finally Mr. McLeod shot it dead. After caring for his dog, Mr. McLeod went to see the dead bird, and getting out his tape measure, found that the bird measured four feet eleven inches from the tip of his head to the tip of his tail and he had a wing spread of ten feet, four inches. Weighed some time later in the day the huge bird weighed slightly over nineteen pounds. This is one of the biggest eagles known in the world. It is a rare thing for one of those birds to be found here now. It had likely made a descent on Mr. McLeod's hen coop when it was fought off by the game dog, who, while used up considerably, will survive the battle with the eagle.
