NURSING SISTER TO BOW IN RESPONSE TO SALUTE.

TORONTO, May 1.—How should a military nurse return the salute? The controversy raging around that question for the past few days has far surpassed that around the question as to who started the war, how old is Ann, or the ancient one about the hen. There were various opinions from alleged experts. Some said: "Let her salute." That caused complications. Others said: "Let her nod," "let her return the salute by raising the hand, as the soldiers do"; "let her shout hello!" Not one of the suggestions seemed to be proper, so they went to the source of all military knowledge, The Department of Militia was written to, and henceforth the recognized response to that salute will be a bow by the fair Canadian nurse.

LEAGUE OF THE CROSS

The three games of the League of the Cross duck pin league were the most exciting of the series, and during the course of the games interest was at fever heat. The competing teams were the "Shamrocks" and a team from the Glee Club, the former winning out by one pin.

The games were followed by the largest number of spectators since the league began, and while the games were being played the scene was an animated one.

This is, without doubt, the greatest tournament in the history of the League of the Cross, which institution has the distinction of having first introduced the bowling alleys on the island.

The following were the scores last night:—

SHAMROCK.
G. Tull,	103	119	109—331

WOMEN AT THE HAGUE TALK ABOUT WAR.

THE HAGUE, May 2.—The International Congress of Women opened last night. Miss Jane Adams was appointed chairwoman.

The gathering adopted resolutions protesting against the madness of war; opposing the assumption that women can be protected under modern warfare; recognizing women's responsibility in wars, but declaring that their influence against war could be effective only with equal political rights; pledging women to promote mutual understanding and good will, and urging the necessity of directing education of children toward the ideal of constructive peace.

Other motions adopted express it as the conviction of the conference that international disputes should be referred to arbitration and urging the governments to come to an agreement to bring pressure to bear on any country resorting to arms instead of referring its case to arbitration.

There was adopted also a general resolution declaring women to be united in spite of the hatred and bloodshed now filling the world.

TITLE UNIQUE POSITION OF WOMEN.

The congress listened in the evening to addresses by leading representatives from several countries.

Mrs. Fethick Lawrence, of England, made four points in her address, first, that modern war affects non-combatants more than the soldiers in the field, second, that as the mothers of the human race, women are the natural custodians of human life, and should use their endeavors to prevent men from destroying it; third, that women will be called upon to repair the awful ravages of the war, and fourth, that women occupy the unique position of being able to protest against war without being called cowards.

Mrs. Rosika Schwimmer, president of the Hungarian Women's Suffrage Association, portrayed women and not men, as the protectors of the home. During war, she said, the men were sent away and nobody, except their decorated superior officers, were permitted to know their whereabouts. Mrs. Schwimmer appealed to the women to "thunder forth a demand for stopping the war, in such a voice as will drown the cannons' roar."

RUPERT BROOKE FORETOLD HIS DEATH IN SONNET.

Rupert Brooke, one of the most promising of the young English poets was killed during the naval operations in the Dardanelles a few days ago. He was a lieutenant in the naval reserve. His last poem was sent to a London magazine and appeared about the time the news of his death reached London. The sonnet conveys a premonition of death and is a pathetically beautiful bit of verse. It is as follows:—

If I should die, think only this of me:
That there's some corner of a foreign field
That is forever England. There shall be
In that rich earth a richer dust concealed,
A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware,
Gave once her flowers to love, her ways to roam,
A body of England's, breathing English air,
Washed by the rivers, blest by suns of home,
And think this heart, all evil washed away,
A pulse in the eternal mind, no less,
Gives somewhere back the thoughts by England given,
Her sights and sounds, dreams happy as her day,
And laughter learnt of friends, and gentleness,
In hearts of peace, under an English heaven.

LETTERS FROM FRANCE

They don't seem to care, they fire at everything they come across, women and helpless children and old people are their glory to torture.

Well, we expect to be in action again in about two or three days and I think it will be a fierce fight this time and the loss of many lives.

The trenches are about two hundred miles long and some places they are only about forty or fifty yards apart.

Well, I will close by wishing you good-bye.

From your loving son,
BRENTON.

France, April 8th, 1915.

Dear Mother and Father,—Your letter received to-day, glad to hear from you, and to know that you are all well, as this leaves me at present. Well, we have just moved to another place and it is certainly O.K. You placed me in three different places in the trenches. The engineers in a war on all at the Germans sent over four or five Jack Johnson's, that is what we call their big guns and they certainly did a dreadful lot of damage. Not very long ago we were in a certain place and on came one and hit one of the Canadian engineers. Our Red Cross men went to his assistance at once, with the stretchers, and while they were working hard to help the poor soul over came about eight or nine just as fast as they could come and hit two of the Canadian engineers. I lived about six hours. He had a fractured skull. He could not live, but the other two were not so bad, one fellow got two pieces in his side and had to be operated on and the other fellow got cut in three different places on the head. I guess they are doing fighting in this war, for it takes a long time for a wound to heal when it is caused by shrapnel. It is not at all like a bullet wound. When a wound is caused by shrapnel the piece that hits the person tears his way and sometimes burns along with it and it is quite hot when it explodes, therefore it takes longer to heal and sometimes it never heals.

It was certainly an exciting time, I was only about 20 yards away, well, in fact, I was only about 20 yards away, and two which was used for stretchers and we were only about three yards away. That was near enough for me. Another day we were in a building and they started to shell the place, they gave us a little bit of a scare, but did not kill anyone, only one man got hit and really we were never in any danger from the other. I suppose it was our luck, but for all that they killed five horses and wounded several others. They fired several guns that day but did not do much harm. The reason was their shells did not explode and they do not explode unless they do not. One little harm when they do not. One shell exploded in the field and it certainly made a big hole about 15 feet deep and about 20 feet across, but it was right round just like a bell tent.

We certainly have some fine times in this war (I don't think), but all hands go through it without a word. Of course there is someone always saying something or other, but he soon forgets it and that is the finish. We are all well fed and well looked after, what more do we want. You know

How Thin People Can Put On Flesh

A New Discovery

Thin men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner—last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food doesn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks in the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Cut out the foolish foods and funny sawdust diets, omit the flesh cream rubens. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of those a single Sargol tablet. In two weeks note the difference. "Stay there," fat should be the result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of fat making material in your food to every part of the body. Sargol, five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay there" fat should be the result. DETECTIVES PROBING "RIBBON SUICIDE."

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., May 1.—In order to clear away conflicting statements over the death of Arthur Hearn Cowl, whether it was suicide or involuntary homicide, Coroner J. J. Phelan, has decided to have an investigation, but he will wait till such time as Miss Emily Dunbar Wheeler, the affianced of the unfortunate young man, has recovered from her nervousness and grief.

Dr. W. B. Cogswell, the medical examiner of Stratford, where the tragedy occurred is very emphatic that Cowl came to his death by suicidal act. He said: "Cowl had been suffering from nervousness and melancholia. Outside of that, it is hard for me to believe that Miss Wheeler could have exploded the revolver by pulling a ribbon attached to the trigger."

Arthur Cowl arrived in Stratford from New York Monday. The statement is made that he had come to renew his engagement to Miss Wheeler, which had been broken off by her some months ago at Bermuda on account of poor health. The reconciliation had been effected when the two young people were out on the lawn in front of the Wheeler residence at Academy Hill. Walking on the porch, Mr. Cowl then handed Miss Wheeler a ring with a ribbon the last picture I sent you of the little fellow and myself. Well he got shot. I certainly felt sorry about him. He got married in London. I was best man at the wedding, we had a fine time. Little did he or she know at that time what the end would be.

Well, good-bye, dear mother. Hoping to see you soon again and all hands, good-bye, I remain,
Your loving son,
BRENTON.

attached to it, saying: "Emily, I have a new trick to show you."

"What is it?" she asked.

"Never mind. It is an odd trick, but if you are going to look I'll have to blindfold you."

Miss Wheeler turned her back and pulled at the ribbon twice. The first time Mr. Cowl laughed and said the trick did not work. When Miss Wheeler pulled the ribbon the second time there was an explosion. Miss Wheeler at that time supposed that it was some trick, till she saw Mr. Cowl fall over and down the steps of the porch and onto the graveled path.

Experts who have examined the revolver, which is in the possession of Dr. Cogswell assert that it was impossible for it to be exploded by pulling a ribbon attached to the trigger.

Comfort and Cure of Baby's Skin Troubles

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT CURED WHEN BABY'S BODY WAS COVERED WITH DISTRESSING ECZEMA.

If every mother could try Dr. Chase's Ointment for the chafing, skin irritation and resulting eczema which tortures so many babies, what a blessing it would be for the little ones.

This letter will give you an idea of what a wonderful work this Ointment is doing in the way of bringing comfort to children who are so unfortunately afflicted with this trouble. It is so easy for this trouble to develop from chafing or irritation caused by the clothing, and so difficult to get it cured, that Dr. Chase's Ointment is appreciated when once its healing qualities are known.

Mr. M. L. Duclos, Postmaster, Dugwayville, N. B., writes: "I believe it is my duty to recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for eczema. My baby was seized with eczema and his face and arms were covered with this terrible disease. After trying all sorts of ointments the disease continued to spread until it covered the entire body. When the itching became bad he would scratch himself and was sometimes found in the cradle covered with blood. Hearing about Dr. Chase's Ointment I bought two boxes, and before this was all used the child was cured. That was a year ago, and there has been no trace of eczema since. I recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to all who suffer from eczema as being the best treatment in the world for itching skin diseases."

Dr. Chase's Ointment is for sale by all dealers at 60 cents a box. It is a good idea to keep it at hand along with the bath soap to be used for roughness of the skin, chafing or irritation. Prevention is so much better than cure. Powders clog the pores, but Dr. Chase's Ointment cleanses the pores and thereby keeps the skin soft and smooth. Sample box free if you mention this paper. Edman's, Toronto.
