(This was being filled in with brush on Saturday.) The roads were encountered in other parts of the road, but these were not large, and all could be avoided. DeMille's plans to present "The Crusades" by George Barber and decided to cash in on their family record.

In a letter to the director they enclosed an enormous blue-print tracing their descent clear back to Egein of the Franks, Charlemagne and Charles Martel of Tours. The blue-print was accompanied by a letter requesting work in "The Crusades." DeMille gave them an audience, discovered that their forebears knew his, in fact fought with the Blount knights in the Crusades. He discovered that both were good horsemen. They got jobs as knights in the picture, and will carry their own crest—the crest of Navarre, on their lance-pennons.

Mrs. J. A. Mathieson, wife of Chief Justice Mathieson, received the guests with His Honor the Governor.

The five o'clock tea given yesterday afternoon by the Abergwilt Chapter of the I.O.G.E. in honour of the Silver Jubilee of Their Majesties was a very brilliant affair. Mrs. B. W. Miss Gladys Holman gave a very graphic description of the Silver Jubilee celebrations in London, the heart of the Empire, stressing particularly the gorgeous pageantry of the occasion, the service in St. Paul's and the cheering throngs who had come from all parts of the Empire for the occasion. O Canada by Mrs. Joseph Callaghan and Mrs. E. P. Foley. A mystery break in which $200 was taken from a large modern steel safe at the office of Mr. Lloyd W. Proude, agent in Charlottetown for the Robert Simpson Co. Limited, confronted the police yesterday.

Discovery of the loss was made by Mr. Proude yesterday morning. The safe had been locked by his assistant, Miss Mary Bradley about 10 o'clock Saturday night. A thorough investigation of the premises and there is no sign of anyone forcing an entry to the building, Chief Archibald Birtwistle said. "Miss Bradley is certain that she locked the safe, and it looks as if the thief had the combination to it."

It was "neat" work, the Chief declared. The office was not disturbed. The money had been lifted out and the tray of the cash box placed back in the safe. The door was left slightly ajar.

Nowhere throughout the British Empire was there more wholehearted and enthusiastic celebration of the King's Silver Jubilee than in Charlottetown yesterday. School children and octogenarians, fraternal societies, war veterans, hospital nurses, school teachers, military units, police and fire departments, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides—It seemed that one half the citizenry of Charlottetown was on parade, in colorful dress or wearing some distinctive emblem, while the other half, most certainly, viewed the monster procession from advantageous street corners and participated in the mass demonstration in the Charlottetown Forum.

Over 1500 took part in the procession which stretched out over five blocks, more than half a mile. So great was the crowd that the Forum was unable to accommodate it all, but it is estimated that between 6,000 and 7,000 persons were packed within the building during the proceedings. The number included some 2,000 school children, each with a flag, who not only joined lustily in the mass singing but veritably made the rafters ring with their cheering.

To have played at three Jubilee ceremonies as well as two memorial services at the death of sovereigns is the unique distinction of two members of the Canadian Legion Band. Mr. Nicholas MacFarlane joined in 1883 and Mr. John MacFarlane joined the same band in 1884. They played at Queen Victoria's Golden Jubilee in 1887 and at the Diamond Jubilee in 1897, and have participated in every Royal celebration since. They played at the memorial services for Queen Victoria in 1901 and a short time later at the celebrations when King Edward was crowned. In 1910 they again took part in memorial services on the death of King Edward and at the coronation of King George V. The band was formed for the celebration which took place when King George was crowned. Yesterday they played at the 25th anniversary of his accession to the throne.

Other active members of the Canadian Legion Band have had E. H. Strong, K.C., and Mrs. Strong, Major T. H. E. Inman and Mrs. Inman, Major Victor Travers and Mrs. Travers. A short program in keeping with the day had been arranged and opened with the National Anthem. Miss Hunt then read a paper on the life of King George and paid a very touching tribute to his wonderful character not only as King but as a comrade and brother to all within his Empire.

Miss Gladys Holman gave a very graphic description of the Silver Jubilee celebrations in London, the heart of the Empire, stressing particularly the gorgeous pageantry of the occasion, the service in St. Paul's and the cheering throngs who had come from all parts of the Empire for the occasion. Mr. Lowell Hancock then sang that inspiring song "Let Us Sing Unto Their Majesties," which was composed by James Kelly and set to music by Peter Morris for the Jubilee. During the tea hour patriotic music was played.

A forest fire which for a time threatened Alberton, raged through a wide swath of timberland one mile and a half from the town yesterday.

Corporal Robert Macdonald of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who led a band of volunteer firefighters from Alberton said that it was under control but it had encroached near to the home and farm buildings of Kier Campbell before it was finally checked.

A strong westerly wind blew throughout the day fanning the fire onwards and a hot sun blazed down on the volunteer workers. At 11.30 o'clock yesterday morning fire which caught from a burning pile of leaves and grass partially destroyed a shed belonging to M. A. MacNeill, Church Street, Alberton, but it was quickly extinguished.

Five employees of the Maritime Electric Co. of this city were recently presented with pins by the Superintendent, Mr. James T. McKee in recognition of their long and faithful service with the company.

The pins bear the crest of the Associated Gas and Electric Co. and are awarded to employees serving five years and over. Silver pins are awarded each employee who has served five years, a star represents each additional five years until the twenty year mark is reached, then the emblem is of gold. The thirty-five years emblem is set with a diamond in the centre instead of a star.

The employee receiving this latter rich token of appreciation was Mr. Patrick McMahon, who has rounded out thirty-five years of service. In 1900 if Mr. Rendie Larter, with twenty years service, who received a gold pin with one star. James Sherry with fifteen years service, a silver pin with three stars. Charles Manson, with fifteen years service received a similar pin, while Mr. James Hughes with ten years to his credit, a silver pin with two stars.

The Guardian joins with numerous friends in extending congratulations to all with the wish that they may have many more stars added to their emblems.
