RED ROSE KETA SALMON
High in Food value
Low in Cost...

Without doubt, "RED ROSE" Keta is today's bargain in Canned Salmon.

This popular Pacific Coast Salmon, while lighter in color and somewhat larger in flake, is nevertheless equal in food value to more expensive salmons. It is delicious when used in sandwiches and cooked dishes such as fish cakes, souffles and hot dinners.

Because all Salmon is under government allocation, the supply of Red Rose Keta is limited... watch for it at your grocer's.

TALL GIRLS' CLOTHES MADE BY ONE
NEW YORK—When a gal measures more than five feet seven in her stocking feet, that's a problem, says a designer who measures 7-foot-10, but not for camouflage. Hold up your heads, this designer tells her customers, straighten up your shoulders, and make up the smallest clothes of the season—just so they're cut to fit. She is cutting them that way for her New York store, but she makes few designing concessions to height. Her skirts are slim with the waist. She makes good use—as do other designers this spring—of hip drapery and contrasting color, both of which are diminishing to the tall figure. Outstanding in the spring collection she presents this week are: A gray gabardine coat dress with a Cosack flavor. It closes invisibly at the side, is buttoned on one shoulder, has an inset belt either side of its controlled gathers, and shirtwaist sleeves. Gray again—in gunmetal gabardine striped in pearl gray—for a handsome tailored suit. Stripes go around the jacket, up and down the skirt.

Miss Marion Saunders Speaks At Valois

(Lake Shore News, Quebec, March 8) Taking the same point of view as the famous Professor Blatz, distinguished child psychologist of the University of Toronto, Miss Marion Saunders saw vast opportunities for child development in nursery and kindergarten schools during the week end for Charlottetown, called home by illness of his father, Dr. Stevenson—Amherst News.

Miss Saunders, who was head of a successful kindergarten at Charlottetown, P. E. I., before coming to McGill University, spoke under the auspices of the Valois Nursery School and Kindergarten Committee, which she had organized. The speaker was introduced by D.B. Macfarlane, honorary advisor to the committee, and was thanked by Mrs. Douglas Shand, chairman of the Valois nursery school and kindergarten.

The evening was highlighted by two musical features. The speaker brought her daughter, Miss Margorie Cruikshank, (daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W.E. Cruikshank, Charlottetown), who, like Miss Saunders, is a member of the St. James United Church Choir, Montreal. Miss Cruikshank sang three numbers and was given hearty applause for her fine performance.

Miss Saunders (who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I.W. Saunders, Charlottetown), played recordings of a child broadcast made by her kindergarten in the Charlottetown radio station. A cast of 30 made the recordings under the direction of Miss Saunders, who is an accomplished musician. The children, from two and a half to six years of age, made the recordings only three months in kindergarten. The youthful singers and reciters were a sensation.

In emphasizing points of her address, the speaker paid tribute to Valois mothers who had been instrumental in forming the local nursery school and kindergarten. Such institutions were the mark of a progressive community, she pointed out.

The emotional development of the child was fostered in the healthful give-and-take atmosphere of a well conducted nursery school. Patients, she noted, too often had a tendency to give in to childish tantrums or themselves had become so emotionally involved that their parental function was made ineffective in adjusting the child to the larger world which he entered at school age.

A nursery school and kindergarten, she stated, made for an easy transition from the home to the routine of school life, which often bore heavily upon childish dispositions. The nursery school, whose activities centered around emotional development and play life, was a delight to children and they naturally progressed to the formalized type of curriculum.

Refreshments were served at the close of the program by Mrs. John Dale, social convener; Mrs. H. Bunt, secretary-treasurer, and other members of the committee.

Lenten Meditations

From The Times, London

DIVINE INTERVENTION

Divine intervention in the world's affairs has always been one of the root ideas of religion, peculiar to no age, and the core of Christianity. In man's present condition the conviction that only a new invasion of life by Eternal God and a human movement of response to meet it can deliver him from the dangers that beset him grows apace and is frequently expressed in quite unlikely quarters.

Faith in a living God, contemporary with all life and activity intervening in history, is given ardent expression in a great passage in Jeremiah: "Behold the days come, saith the Lord, that they shall no more say, The Lord liveth which brought up Israel out of Egypt, but the Lord liveth which leaveth Israel out of all the countries whither I have driven them; they will no more rely only upon national liberation in the remote past, but also and more directly upon God's intervention then and there in their own time. Piety is often prone to miss the significance of the past for the present.

Our fathers have told us what thou hast done in their time of old; but God is always the same God, purposing now as then to bring help to his people. The living God is timeless; never obsolete, eternally true to himself, he can infallibly be trusted to guide and aid those who seek him.

It is this changelessness of God, "who was and is and is to come," which even when things are at their worst makes Christ's Incarnation, Death, and Resurrection the foundation of Christian hopefulness. The God once revealed in Jesus is the same today, when civilization faces mortal perils, as he will be in any conceivable developments of the world's future. Creative activities vital to progress, such as science, education, and economic reform, become self-defeating when they ignore human dependence upon God and rely only upon human resources in handling the world's problems.

The enduring hold of the Bible upon mankind is due first and chiefly to its picture of a God who loves and intervenes. The popular conception of an absentee deity remote from the common things of earth is as futile for all practical purposes as it is unsatisfying to thought.

But the Lord God who loves his people becomes their very present hope and strength.

General Freight Traffic Manager For C.N.R. Named

MONTREAL, March 10 — John Pullen has been appointed general freight traffic manager of the Canadian National Railways, succeeding Geo. R. Fairhead who retired last week. The appointment was announced here today by Alistair Fraser, vice-president in charge of traffic for the system.

Mr. Pullen, who graduated from McGill University, class 1912, the new head of the freight traffic branch of the National System served with the railway between college terms. His interest and study of freight transportation, however, dates back to his early youth when he accompanied his father, a former C.N.R. assistant freight traffic manager and president of the Canadian Express Co., on extensive official travels in the summer of 1911. He began his active railway career as a general clerk in the office of the general manager of the National System in the summer of 1911, he began his active railway career as a general clerk in the office of the general manager of the National System in the summer of 1911.

Following graduation, with honours in science, Mr. Pullen entered the freight service of the Grand Trunk Railway in 1913 as a clerk in the office of the general manager. After three years of training in tariff matters, he moved into the field of traffic solicitation as freight agent at Montreal. He was appointed to the staff of the vice-president of traffic in August, 1923, and served as assistant to three vice-presidents, the late J.E. Dalrymple, A.T. Weldon and R.L. Bursan. From 1928 to the outbreak of the second great war, as regional general freight agent and, later, as freight traffic manager, he had jurisdiction over freight traffic activities on the Central Region, the heaviest in point of traffic density of the C.N.R. He was promoted to the post of assistant general freight traffic manager for the entire system in 1940, and two years later became head of the foreign freight traffic department in that capacity he was in direct charge of the import and export of all war materials moving over Canadian and American ports to and from the various theatres of war. He had charge, also of the company's operations in Australia and New Zealand and last year re-opened the traffic office at Hong Kong and a new office at Calcutta, India.

It is from the position of traffic manager of the foreign freight department that Mr. Pullen has been promoted to his new responsibilities. Mr. Pullen has travelled extensively throughout Canada and the United States, the United Kingdom and France, during his railway career. He served with the Black Watch during the First World War. He is married and has two sons, John and Gordon, both farming in Ontario. His recreational interests include golfing and fishing, and he is a member of the Chapleau Fish and Game Club.
