Doctor Now Demands Damages

(British United Press)
PARIS, July 22—A claim that has no precedent in French legal history has been made by a doctor. He is suing an electric light company for $20 damages on the ground that they caused him to lose a patient—and a good one, too. This particular patient came regularly to his surgery for electric treatment, but on his last visit the current suddenly was turned off, and so annoyed was he by the interruption of the treatment that he abruptly left, never to return.

The electric light company, however, passed on the blame of the accident on a distributing company, who in turn denied all responsibility, on the ground that it received its current from another company who generated the power. This latter company referred the irate doctor to the Mayor, alleging that he had caused the interruption of the current by authorizing a gun to be fired, but the mayor declared that the fault lay with Garde Champetre, who in turn blamed the gunner.

The gunner, they said, had placed his piece in a position so badly chosen that the shock of the explosion wrecked a cable standard, but as he was electrocuted on the spot and is beyond the reach of early justice, the doctor was advised to look for another patient.

SMILES

"This is a queer world."
"What's the matter now?"
"Every time a man is broke he sees an item telling how much a dollar will amount to if put at interest at 6 per cent."

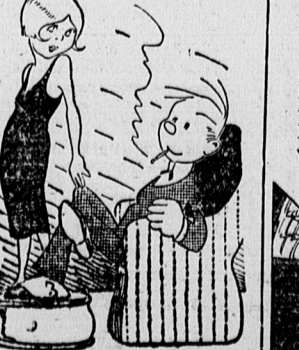

"I roomed with Skinner, president of the Hide & Seek Trust Co., last night and he sure did talk in his sleep."
"What did he say?"
"Not guilty, most of the times."

Cholly: So she threw you over!
Willie: Yes. Said she though I wouldn't be the kind that would stick.
Cholly: Why didn't she recommend you to some other girl who wanted that kind?

A WAIL
"Was ever thus; since childhood I've never worn a nice new hat. But that there came a sudden shower and left it limp and stained as flat."

Wife: Henry, I will have to have some new clothes this spring.
Hubby: Good heavens, how long is this thing going to go on! That's just what you've had for years!

What the Gray House Hid
The Mystery of a Haunted Mansion

"Get rid of that man the first thing tomorrow. He is evil, and hates you."
"All right, Salome," said Hanby. "His head will be on a charger for you any time you care to call for it after ten o'clock tomorrow morning."
As she went back to her guests, she asked him why he laughed at Smucker's story.

"Because Reggie Brophy and Bill Pelham have put up a joke on me. Reggie is mad as a hornet because this cuts out our Wednesday and Sunday forenoon. Pelham said he'd prevent me from going there by hook or crook. If that wasn't Reggie feeding old Smucker with that haunted house stuff, I'll drink the lake dry!"
"It might be Reggie," she admitted. "It would be just like him. What about Bill Pelham?"
"Bill is Selina, the patron saint of Pokes and toy Poms. Listen to the story of Miss Seleno, who hates and despises men, particularly me. Bill is about the best actor in our crowd, and he made up pretty well—well enough to fool me for a time."
"But would they do it?" she asked.
"It will be a long wet drink for me if I'm wrong," he laughed.
"Wanted on the long distance, sir," said Mary Sloan.
"Ask Junior to go," said his father. "I want to tell the rest about Reggie and Bill," he explained to his wife.
Before he could commence his recital, Junior, usually impassive to the point of irritation, burst in. "It's from the police at Pine Plains," he cried. "Dad, your caretaker at the Gray house has been murdered!"
Hilton Hanby came back to his rooms after ten minutes at the telephone.
"A very unfortunate thing," he told them. "A man named Kerr, whom I engaged through my lawyers only yesterday, has been killed. I must go up tomorrow and see about it."
"I'll go with you, dad," Junior said promptly. "Tell us the details."
"There are none. Kerr was an unmarried man of good character, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, who had been living at Kingston. I wanted a caretaker, because we shan't be living there for a time, and I've been warned that thieves make a specialty of new plumbing fixtures, if there's nobody to guard them."
"But you haven't had time to put any in," said Dina.
"That's the mysterious part of it—there's nothing to steal. Kerr moved a bed and a few household belongings into a ground-floor room, and they have not been disturbed."
"Was he killed inside the house?" Celia demanded.
"No—outside. His body was found in the lake."
Hanby replied. "It seems a silly, wife as she said this. From the little frown she gave he saw that the memory of what Smucker had said lingered with her and assumed a new importance at this tragedy."
"Was he drowned?" Dina asked.
"No—his head was battered in with the handle of a pick. Why they threw him in the lake I can't imagine."
"They did it to conceal the body," suggested Junior. "The weights probably slipped off and the corpse came to the surface again."
"Lakes are always dragged," Hanby replied. "It seems a silly, meaningless crime."
"There's always motivation, if you know where to look for it," Junior answered wisely. "On the whole, it's rather fortunate that I'm going up with you tomorrow."
"The police will be delighted," his father said.
Hanby was annoyed to think that this crime had obtruded itself on his birthday. It was a bad beginning for his ownership of the Gray house.
"The police!" sneered Junior. "What do the police know of the psychology of crime?"
"Pity them, don't chide them," Celia mocked. "Poor policemen, they haven't been to Mercersburg and New Haven."
"There's probably a whole lot more in this than you think," Junior went on, unshaken. "On the face of it, it's a crazy, motiveless crime. We may run into all sorts of amazing things—wheels within wheels. Kerr may not have been a caretaker. He may have been sent there to spy on us."
"Then who killed him?" Hanby snapped. He could see that Dina was disturbed more than he liked.
"And why?"
"That we shall find out," replied Junior. "When first you spoke of the Gray house, I thought there was something mysterious about it. Why did it stand empty so long? Haunted, probably. Oh, these things happen! In your generation they scoffed, but we are wiser. In my psychology class—"
"Tell me about it tomorrow," interrupted his father. "Come on, people—let's dance! This is my birthday. Away with gloom!"
He seized Dina, and they began elaborate improvisations on a fox-trot motif.

"You don't think there's anything in it, do you?" Dina asked him. "I mean, anything to do with that awful little man was saying?"
"Of course not," he answered. "We shall find at the inquest that some roving tramp killed Kerr to steal his savings."
"Tramps!" she said. She was city-bred, and distrusted remote places. "There are always tramps, aren't there?"
"They won't worry us. We shall have a house filled with people, and there'll be gardeners and workers. Also—this is my great surprise—I'm taking a year off from business. I can afford it."
"Oh, Hil, how lovely!" she cried. "I've hated your business because it has kept you away from us so much. Can you really afford it?"
"I'm rolling in money," he said gayly. "I bought acreage and sold by the front foot. I'm a boy again!"
"That's nothing new, Housatonie," she laughed. "Ada Bishop really believes that's your absurd name. You'll be a boy when you die!"
"Darling Dina, don't worry about Smucker and his drunken dream. I'll have it out with old Bill to-

Slump Spurs Silver Camps

IMPORTANT STRIKES MADE IN ABANDONED WORKINGS OF STATE
(By Earl I. Lelf, United Press Staff Correspondent)
RENO, Nev., July 22.—(U.P.)—The business depression and the low price of silver have stimulated the gold mining industry in Nevada, with new important discoveries of high-grade and shipping ore being made in scattered sections.
Many of the famous old silver camps, such as Virginia City, Tonopah and Goldfield, have responded to the world-wide cry for gold and mine operators are shipping the yellow metal from camps formerly thought to be only silver producers.
Unemployed persons have taken to the Nevada wastelands, some with a small grubstake and visions of a strike, others merely in the hope of finding steady employment at a daily wage.

New Anaesthetic Is Effective

(British United Press)
LONDON, July 22—A new anaesthetic called avertin, which puts a patient gently to sleep for several days, allowing him to completely recover from the shock of an operation, is being used extensively in Germany.
According to a London medical authority, often two or three days elapse before a patient realizes that he has undergone an operation.
Only thoroughly experienced anaesthetists who have made a study of the drug, are permitted to administer it. The patient is weighed and the dose made up strictly in accordance with the weight. Half an hour before the time of the operation the drug is administered, and the patient gradually falls asleep. During the important period after the operation, when his progress might otherwise be seriously retarded by the thoughts of what has been happening to him, he is sleeping like a child. It is said to be a wonderful anaesthetic for nervous people.
Avertin has been the subject of intensive research and experiment in the laboratories of Germany for the past few years.

Could Hardly Sleep on Account of Eczema. Healed by Cuticura.

"In the fall of 1928 eczema broke out on my face, hands and chest. It first appeared in blisters which later scathed over. It itched and burned so that I could hardly keep from scratching, and later it developed into sore eruptions. I could hardly sleep at night on account of it.
"A friend advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent for a free sample and got relief at once. I purchased more and after using three and a half boxes of Cuticura Ointment and four cakes of Cuticura Soap I was completely healed." (Signed) Alex. Ewastuk, Shortdale, Man.

Zeebrugge Hero Active

(British United Press)
LONDON, July 22—Sir Roger Keyes, hero of Zeebrugge and famous commander of the Dover patrol, has relinquished his last command. He has lowered his flag from the mast of the Victoria, where another flag, and that of his successor, Admiral Sir A. K. Wastell.
Some of the most spectacular and important work of the war was performed by Sir Roger Keyes. On the eve of St. George's Day, 1918, he attacked the Flanders coast and achieved what was hailed as the only successful blockship operation in history. For this he was made K. C. B. and in the war honours list he was created baronet and awarded a grant of $50,000. Early in his career he distinguished himself in the Boxer rebellion.
Barrimore and his wife spent hours personally planning the remodeling of their daughter's quarters. It is so constructed that the infant Dolores will receive the maximum sunshine all the year around. This necessitated the building of the nursery toward Tower Road from which tourists view the picturesque home. In the future it will be possible for Barrimore and Costello fans to see the daughter of their favorites at play in her nursery.
Karen Morley, an M. G. M. player, has been borrowed by Howards Hughes to play the feminine lead in "Scarface," the much-discussed gangster melodrama, in which the gangster "gets it in the neck," as per a promise from Hughes to Will Hays.

(By Ronald W. Wagoner, United Press Staff Correspondent)
HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 23.—(U.P.)—When Dolores Ethel Mae Barrymore, daughter of John Barrymore and Dolores Costello, returns with her parents next fall from an Alaskan yacht trip, she will find one of the most elaborate nurseries in the world awaiting her.
While the yacht Infanta cruises northern waters with the Barrymore family aboard, scores of carpenters, painters and paperhangers swarm the hillside home, getting things in shape for the return of Dolores Ethel Mae.
Before the yacht trip started, Christian Advocate.
