Where events of minor importance are described in superlatives, and proclaimed by loud announcers, and names of lesser lights kept perpetually in the lime light it is well to pause at times, and recall the achievements of such men as Alock and Brown, not the less notable because more quietly and unostentatiously done.

FALCONWOOD CREAM

Sir—A civil question deserves a civil answer. Whoever answers civility with abuse cannot expect to be considered refined or courteous.

A writer in The Guardian asked two questions regarding matters of importance to taxpayers and electors.

The "Department," instead of answering civilly, flew into a passion and called names of a ribald nature!

Now, the first question asked by The Guardian's writer, is an important one to the taxpayers, viz. Did those cows milk at a profit, considering the amount of government feed they consumed?

Has the "Department" answered that question?

All dairymen know that cows can be fed and forced to give a large quantity of milk—but at a loss.

Is it not important to the taxpayers to know if those cows are paying for their feed? If not, wherein is the profit in selling cream?

The "Department's" statement regarding the amount of whole milk supplied the patients is sadly at variance with those of former employees as well as patients.

The Holstein hobby is evidently very strong with the "Department," inasmuch that it gets its "back up" when any one questions whether the black and white breed pay for everything and anything they eat.

Stung in such a tender part, it is not much wonder that the department comes so near saying "cuss" words.

HONOR THE BRAVE

Sir,—Your very appropriate article in Wednesday's Guardian, recalls the great achievement now ten years past of Sir John Alock and Lieut. Brown, British airmen, in making the first non-stop flight across the Atlantic. So many events in aviation have been crowded into recent years, that we are in danger of forgetting this outstanding performance by aviators of our own race.

FORMERLY OF CRAFAUD—Bishop Hackett, visited the Parish of Holy Trinity, Middleton on Tuesday. His visit was for a three-fold purpose; the induction of the Rev. Charles C. Rand as rector of the parish, the dedication of the new choir vestry and the confirmation of 14 candidates. The church of the church has been recaptured and the new choir vestry has added greatly to the appearance and the usefulness of the church. It was decorated with white lilacs for this occasion. The service in the evening began with the dedication of the choir room, after which the bishop proceeded with the induction of the rector. The letters of institution and license were read, after which the keys of the church were presented by the wardens, H. W. Evans and Chas. Shafrner. This was followed with the service of confirmation after which the bishop gave an address dealing with the different ceremonies of the evening. The visiting clergy were Rural Dean Smith, Rev. S. J. thods employed by aviation in its present stage of advancement.

The personnel of the Interprovincial Airways, Ltd., and its subsidiary companies, from Major-General MacBrien down to the lowest mechanic are the finest obtainable in the Dominion, covering so many divisions of operations such as, Air Mails, Schools of Flying Instruction, Aerial Surveys, Transportation, Passenger Lines, etc., one can readily see the necessity for specialized personnel in the various divisions.

"With the rapid growth of aviation, young men have found their way to important executive positions which probably would not have been obtainable for them in any other form or vocation by service of many years. Such a record as displayed in this organization should be an incentive for young men in contemplating the study of aviation in its various forms," says Mr. Selar.

While trees of all sizes are subject to attack young pines are killed much more quickly than mature trees. The disease has taken a number of years to establish itself but it is now showing up to a serious degree on white pines. Owners of pines are urged to examine their trees now to determine whether or not they are diseased, as it is only at this time of year that the symptoms of disease are at all conspicuous. There is but one effective means to protect the white pines and that is by removing all currants and gooseberries in the immediate vicinity of the trees.

The Dominion Department of Agriculture has issued an illustrated circular dealing with blister rust and this can be obtained free upon application to the Publications Branch, Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa, Ont.

MONCTON, June 15.—Arrangements are going ahead satisfactorily in connection with the air pageant to be held in Moncton, July first and second. Ample parking space and refreshments are being arranged for by the committee in charge. The matter of accommodation for out of town visitors is also receiving attention and lists are being prepared of places where accommodation can be obtained, which will be available to visitors. A large number from the Maritimes is expected, and the committee in formulating their plans are making preparations for a huge crowd.

The Moncton Air Pageant being the first in the Maritimes, is receiving attention from all over Canada and the United States. With the entries now received, and with those who are expected to take part, it will be one of the biggest events of the kind and real thrills are looked for. Already the Maritimes have received visits from planes carrying passengers from Boston and other points in the United States and it is felt that the publicity received through the air meet being held in Moncton will result in these provinces being placed prominently before the people of Canada and the United States. The Maritimes, due to their strategic position, will, according to these qualified to judge, become of increasing importance in the matter of air travel and the air pageant is receiving country wide support.

Among the features listed are parachute jumping, formation flying, aerobatics, war tactics, aerial relay races, bombing competitions, passenger flights, and monster street parade. Planes from Detroit, Montreal, Ottawa, and Quebec are participating.

It is expected that there will be upwards of twenty planes or more. Everything is being done by the committee to make this programme a success, and those who attend are assured of seeing something of real interest in the way of aerial exhibitions.

Reds, and is making her living here by dancing, but doesn't want to be known."

"Can't any one find out where she lives? It would be quite simple, I should think." Mrs. Ogden dropped this remark into the conversation.

"Tommy's been sending her a lot of so flowers every day for a week, the first speaker broke in. "Wants me call on her; he's really pathetic, he's so gone on her, and it's too silly when you think he's never even spoken to her."

"Perhaps that accounts for the attraction," Yvonne said with a little laugh. "If he saw her, she might be quite ordinary. It is wonderful what make-up and costuming can do."

"Very wonderful," drawled a woman who had not spoken before. "One can easily remove fifteen or even twenty years from one's appearance, isn't that true, Mrs. Robertson?"

"Add them on, or take them off, either way," Yvonne agreed daintily.

"If Tommy doesn't recover in a week, I'll have to help him out, I supposed," sighed Tommy's sister. "You know Tommy's usually womanproof. But this time he really is gone. You may be right, Mrs. Robertson, the cure may be for him to meet her, I'll have to see what I can arrange."

There was a subdued air in the hallway. A maid entered with the tea service. Yvonne heard Mrs. Ogden murmur a greeting to some one and then heard a high-pitched voice, strangely familiar, say: "Of course we came, Edith, I wouldn't think of staying away from tea at your house, and I simply stopped at his club and dragged Bob along too. There are going to be some men, aren't they?"

Yvonne's heart throbbed! She hoped no one present would notice her agitation. Somehow she forced herself to raise her eyes and place a hand in Anne's and Mrs. Ogden said, "Mrs. Robertson, Miss Lovelace. And this is my good friend Mr. West."

Yvonne transferred her hand to Bob's. He shook it warmly, said something about beastly weather, and sat in the chair next to her. Anne was talking animatedly with some friend. Just as Yvonne began to feel a little at ease, Anne said: "Oh, let me tell you something. I had a letter from old Dick Ross today—he's out West, you know—says he's coming home soon."

Columbines For All Situations

More and more use of the handsome and graceful columbine is being made in garden arrangements particularly with reference to color. There are few plants which include the red, blue and yellow scales in one genus but the columbine is one of them. Owing to the great variety of coloring it fits into almost any possible color plan.

Starting in mid-May the columbine display continues until well into July and if seed pods are kept snipped off the plant will give extra crop of bloom. There have been many developments and new varieties are being offered each year. It is a plant that does not come true from seed except by segregating the seed plants with great care and it is usually grown from mixed seed. For color scheme purposes it is necessary to grow columbines in quantity in a reserve bed and then mark the colors when they bloom and transplant.

They have been used in combination with irises in handsome effect, whether matching the color of the iris with columbines or planting a harmonious or pleasingly contrasting color.

The long spurred hybrids are the most beautiful and popular sorts. There are a number of strains and the Mrs. Scott Elliott strain is as fine as any, giving huge flowers with long spurs in a great variety of colors. It is not of as tall growth as some of the strains but the more robust types seem to lose in size and grace of bloom to pay for their extra stature.

There are columbines for the rock garden such as glandulosa, a deep blue and white species which is a poor grower and a tax on the rock gardener's skill and the dwarf white fibellata nana. A hybrid of glandulosa, carrying its fine color but of robust constitution is Helena.

Plant columbine seeds now and hammer the soil down hard over the seeds. This seems to speed their germination.

The columbine, botanically, belongs to the ranunculaceae family, literally, little frog derived from the semi-aquatic habits of some of the family. Seeds of perennials—Columbines and the like—may still be planted.

Southern Notes

Notwithstanding the proximity of certain of the planets of our solar system, the weather is as per usual.

Seeding operations are now almost completed. The grass gives promise of a fine hay crop. The grain is showing a vigorous growth, gardens are greening, while the root crops are nicely spreading roots.

A car passed here the other day whose speed Col. Seagrave would be glad to emulate and on its meteoric course, it collided with a cow, broke its leg and passed on ecstatically.

Car drivers may be conveniently divided into two classes: Those who are wise and those who are otherwise, and it is easy to distinguish them. The great ambition in life of the latter class, is not to see where they are going, but to see how fast they can make the wheels turn round regardless of consequences.

Whether it is a mistake or not, farmers, contrary to predictions, sold a great number of calves this spring, many of which at the age of from five to seven weeks brought as great prices as two year olds would have brought a couple of years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Livingstone, of Charlottetown, have been motoring through this, and adjoining districts.

Mr. John Jardine, of Charlottetown, is a visitor at present to Port Wood, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Keenan.

Rev. Duncan MacDonald, formerly of Little Sands is now stationed at Pictou Island.

Mr. Alexander MacPherson, of Wood Island East had the misfortune of losing a cow which died as the result of being struck by a car.

The lobster season is rapidly coming to a close. The fishing was the best in this line for many years.

Mr. Duncan MacCannell of Dover, who was sick the greater part of the winter, and for a time not expected to live, seems now, greatly to the surprise and delight of his numerous friends to be completely recovered. He has lately been visiting friends in Port Wood.

Mr. Will Robin of Guernsey Cove, has been visiting lately in Wood Island.

Mr. Alexander MacGregor, Sr., of Wood Island North, a retired farmer of considerable means, has now an opportunity of enjoying his declining years in comfort and independence. One of his greatest pastimes is taking walks here and there among his neighbors far and near whom he always greets with a smile and cheering word.—H.
