

THE REAL SUZANNE

Queen of Lawn Tennis, Most Remarkable of all Women who Have Taken to Sport

WIMBLEDON, April 11.—A strong, dark, rather brooding face, with a powerful, curving nose, eyes any color you care to imagine, a fairly large mouth well acquainted with the lip-stick—that is Suzanne Lenglen, the most remarkable of all women who have taken to sport.

Her face, possibly because it is so strong to be ideally feminine, does not appeal to all. There can, however, be no possible doubt about the grace of her form. Perfectly proportioned, perfectly poised, there is a savage fascination about this wonderful French girl when she steps on the tennis court, swaying delicately from the hips, and suggestive somehow of a panther.

In repose Suzanne is not remarkable; but in action she is the apotheosis of feminine grace. She has a curiously baffling dual personality, and is no more affected than we, in our insular prejudice, expect a Frenchwoman to be. Off the court she is modest and frankly bored if you try to discuss her own prowess.

But on the court Suzanne is another person. For five years she has reigned supreme as queen of lawn tennis, and she is royally jealous of her position. She feels that pre-eminence such as hers inevitably entails uncharitableness, envy, and even malice. Slight actions, and she bitterly resents what she considers the unkind things

Summerside Horse Notes

The following shows that light harness racing is still surviving and flourishing in the "Western Capital." At a meeting of the Summerside horsemens, held recently, it was decided to take over the Summerside Driving Park for the summer, and to hold matinee races every Wednesday afternoon. The books, on being audited, showed a nice balance carried forward from the past winter. We understand that several nice fast horses have been purchased, and it is expected that this year's racing under the energetic management of the Pres. Dr. Church and Vice-Pres. H. Silliphant, will reach the pinnacle of perfection as shown in interest is already being great in this year's meet.

The Thing To Do
"You should meet trouble bravely."
"I never meet trouble, it always seems to be going my way."
"Better change your ways, then."

that have been said and written about her.

Consequently, in her public capacity, she is now nearly always on the defensive, and in addition to being the queen of lawn tennis, she has become the queen of gestures. Perhaps she believes that she can do no wrong. She is convinced, for instance, that she does not foot-fault, and if a linesman dares to say that she does she makes a removal gesture and suggests his removal.

She has, however, made so many gestures of late that people are getting a little tired of them, and it is surprising that so astute a person as her father—the real power behind the throne—does not advise her to moderate them.

Suzanne is not a woman's woman, and many women do not like her. Probably the majority of the thousands who flock to see her at Wimbledon go with the unspoken hope that she will be defeated. Suzanne, who, like nearly all French people, is essentially a realist, knows that, sooner or later, she must vacate her throne. And when that day comes this queen of gestures may be trusted to make the most magnificent gesture of all.

Canada a Land of Opportunity

(Canadian Press)

LONDON, April 11.—Captain A. J. Thomas, son of Hon. J. H. Thomas, British Colonial Secretary, is an employee of the Canadian National Railway in Canada. After a year's residence in the Dominion, he has written an enthusiastic article for the Daily Herald, urging British young men to emigrate to the only country offering real opportunity for a career. He gives fair warning, however, that hard work is necessary, but points out the splendid educational opportunities, emphasizing the chance of energetic young men to work themselves through the universities, and draws a vivid contrast between chances for success in Canada and in England.

"Well, sir, 'bout that time we began to hear about a new an' terrible explosive they call nitroglycerin: how she's so techy you don't dare sneeze in front of a can of it. None of us pocket miners favors its use but Hank. He says if he can get somethin' what'll bite through that lava rock quicker'n black powder he's goin' to take a chance. So he rents a wagon and team and he drives down to San Francisco to buy him ten gallons of this here hell fire."

Old Steve hunched his shoulders at this juncture for all the world on the bench outside old Steve's shack and smoked lazy hours away while he spun yarns of the old mining days thereabouts when Sam Clemens and he came over the mountains from Virginia City to buy themselves into the mad scramble that was life in California's Southern Mines. Albert Bigelow Paine, Mark Twain's biographer has collected from the same source 'all of Steve's anecdotes of the great humorist; but I don't think Paine has the story of the nitroglycerin.

"Lyn' Hank got his name from his story of how he couldn't make it his bread rise," was Steve's introduction, "an' how he put a dynamite ca'tridge in the pan of dough. But that's neither here nor there. We folks remember Hank most by we see him stop to light his pipe now he brung nitroglycerin to these diggings.

"Hank, y'see, was a most contrary an' cantankerous gzaabo. Onct he got his mind set on somethin'; nothin' short of hell an' high water could turn him from his object. That's the reason why he kept dingin' an' dingin' into the face of Table Mountain over you-berin' in Hank's tunnel, took an' sold him he'd never find no gold in under that lava sheet.

"But this Hank Gale kept on sin- an' stoppin' the town clock over to sle-jacking his way through hard rock, using his blasts of black powder like the rest of us an' never gettin' no smell of yellow gold. He he's going to bust right pay gravel of an old river bed under Table Mountain.

"But ding me fer a mack'el, if it didn't bust right through the last ten feet of lava dike right into the bed. Hank took out $25,000 in nuggets the first hour he panned."

Yankee Stadium May Be Scene of Carp-Tunney Bout

NEW YORK, April 11.—Jimmy Johnston, matchmaker for the Cromwell A. C. plans to confer with Billy Gibson, manager of Gene Tunney, this afternoon in regard to having the proposed bout between the American light heavyweight and Georges Carpentier, French boxer held in the Yankee Stadium this summer. Johnston announced yesterday that he has submitted a bid for this contest, which has been signed by Gibson, to the French light heavyweight and is prepared to hold the match either on June 5 or June 11 or 12, dates on which the Yankees will be playing away from home.

Johnston would not disclose the terms he has offered Gibson for the match, but expressed confidence that his proposition would prove acceptable. "I have an appointment to see Gibson tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock," said Johnston yesterday. "I expect we will come to some agreement on the Tunney-Carpentier match. I think the Yankee Stadium is the most appropriate place for the scrap because the immense seating capacity will permit me to stage the show at popular prices. It is my intention to adopt a reasonable scale of admission if I land the match because I think the public is eager to see Carpentier in a bout against a man of Tunney's ability.

BILLIARDS

At Lambros Bros. last night the final game in the billiard tournament was played. Frank Nicholson and Charlie Stewart playing off for second place, Nicholson coming out the winner after a close game by a margin of 26 points.

The beautiful cup donated by Lambros Bros. for first prize was won by Bill Nicholson.

The second prize a gold medal was won by Frank Nicholson, and the third prize a silver medal was won by Charlie Stewart.

The medal for the highest run in the tournament was won by Charlie Stewart who made a run of 54.

The winners will receive their prizes this evening.

Man o'War Still Greatest of All

NEW YORK, April 11.—There is a chance that the greatest thoroughbred contest ever held in this or any other country will be seen here this year. Samuel D. Riddle, the Philadelphia sportsman, is considering bringing Man o'War back to the races. If he does he will match the immortal son of Fair Play against Epinard, the French champion, which is coming to America in August.

Such a race would not only furnish a great equine struggle, but it undoubtedly would be one of the most popular sporting events ever held in this country. Besides being the greatest thoroughbred ever foaled in this country Man o'War was the most popular. To see him race against a worthy opponent, such as Epinard, would attract a crowd that would tax the capacity of Belmont Park, where 60,000 persons saw Zev defeat Papyrus last September.

HANK GALES
BIG BLAST

The Indian summer of little Steve Gillis' life was spent sweetly atop Jackass Hill, where perpetual sunshine distills a drowsy perfume from the pines and manzanitas all about, and the Sierras tumble up and up in the far distance to the faint white line of eternal snow. There Steve Gillis lived along with his most prized possession; a complete set of Mark Twain, each volume autographed with some special message of affection from the man who once was Steve's partner at gold digging right there on the Hill.

Many the fine afternoon I've sat on the bench outside old Steve's shack and smoked lazy hours away while he spun yarns of the old mining days thereabouts when Sam Clemens and he came over the mountains from Virginia City to buy themselves into the mad scramble that was life in California's Southern Mines.
