Ashamed to Go Out. Lasted a Year. Cuticura Healed.

"My face was badly affected with pimples. When they first started they looked red and were hard. Later they became larger and soon began to pester me by itching. I scratched them which only caused more pimples. They disfigured my face so that I was ashamed to go out. The trouble lasted about a year. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment so purchased some, and within two weeks there was a great improvement. I continued using them and within a month my face was completely healed." ### SMILES

GABBY GERTIE

"Did that bootlegger succeed in getting a cellar to work in?" "He was only partly successful—he got a cell to work in."

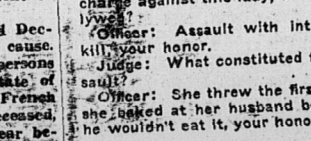

"So, in your quarrel with Smith you've decided to bury the hatchet?" "Yes, I've decided an ax would give better results."

PARADOXICAL Quick speech itself to trouble links, because so often you will find the man who says just what he thinks is rather thoughtlessly inclined.

WITH INTENT TO KILL Judge: Officer, what is the charge against this lady, Mrs. New. Officer: Assault with intent to kill your honor. Judge: What constituted the assault? Officer: She threw the first cake she baked at her husband because he wouldn't eat it, your honor.

"Ready, So-so?" "One minute more, Fred." So-so was standing in front of her mirror trying to decide on rouge or no rouge for her cheeks. She rubbed some on and surveyed the effect. Then she rubbed it off. "It's better without," she decided. "Especially with this dress." She had brushed her hair until it shone, dressing it low on the nape of her neck. Father Harper had never permitted her to cut it. "You look more like your mother with it long, my dear," he had decided when So-so wanted to have it bobbed. Now So-so was glad, for surely short hair would have spoiled the effect of the black peasant dress.

"Shut your eyes!" she called down to Fred. She ran down the little staircase and found him standing obediently in front of his chair, eyes tight shut. She put her two hands on his shoulders. "Now open them," she commanded. Fred obeyed. "Oh, So-so, you're a knockout, isn't she, Mr. Harper?" So-so's father looked at the two young people indignantly. "She is nearly as beautiful as her mother tonight," he admitted. So-so ran to kiss him, then caught up an old coat from a chair.

"I'll have to hide my beauty for the present in this," she said laughing, pulling his shabby length around her. "It's a regular eclipse of the sun, isn't it?" she asked. A look of pain passed over her father's face. "You should have a long fur coat, Solange. Wait until I get this last link out of my new plans, and you shall have the finest fur coat to be had."

So-so kissed him again. "Of course I shall," she declared. "Don't wait up for me father; I have an idea we'll be quite late." Fred took her arm as they went down the steps. "I could buy you a fur coat, So-so."

"Oh, Fred, don't begin that now. Let's have fun tonight. I feel like Cinderella going to the ball. Wait till I lay aside my ragged coat and reveal the royal raiment hidden beneath it."

They followed her up the wide steps of the most beautiful house So-so had ever seen, and old Colonial farmhouse made modern by the Terry millions. At the end of the long entrance hall a huge log snapped and crackled. Handsome old Mr. Terry greeted his guests, making them welcome and directing the men toward the library where they were
