PROPERTY SAVED FROM HOLY GHOSTERS

MAITLAND, April 9.—The district of Maitland has been a recruiting ground, more or less, for the Holy Ghosts. They have recruited several members there and some money. The society realized on one good property and there is another piece of real estate in the place which they would gladly turn into money at the present time, but which they have been unable to realize up to now. The society cannot be given and consequently the property cannot be sold by the Ghosters. The real estate that the society has turned into money was a place belonging to the heirs of the late Captain MacKenzie, some of whose children became active members of the society at Shiloh. The MacKenzie property was some trouble, was last autumn sold by the Ghosters and turned into cash.

The property that the Shiloh people have not been able to realize up to now belongs to the Macbougans and is on a farm near Shiloh. Mr. Macbougan, who has been in the influence of the Shilohites, has all along been anxious to convey the property to the Ghosters, but so far has been unable to carry out his desires because all the heirs would be given the consent required. Several times Vitozzi appeared about to faint but he was restrained by the president, who finally adjourned the sitting.

CANADIAN CADET TEAM GOING TO ENGLAND

OTTAWA, April 9.—An invitation having been received from the Imperial Cadets' Association of London, England, for Canadian cadets to participate in the "boys' biely" on the 24th of May, it has been decided to send twelve cadets from organized cadet corps accompanied by an officer to take part in the competition. The department of militia and defence will provide transportation to and from the cadets' homes and subsistence during their stay in England. They will sail from Montreal for London early in July. The cadets will be selected from those participating in the miniature and gallery competitions of Canadian rifle league, 1911, and be chosen according to the places taken by them in a special competition to be held with single loading rifles, 22 bore, on local miniature ranges from the 11th and 19th of April. The competition will consist of a series of 21 shots, being three targets of seven shots each, fired consecutively, without sighting shots, and with but one first target. The distance will be 25 yards. The targets will be as used in the miniature series of the Canadian rifle league. The team will be composed of eight senior and four junior representatives. To be eligible the former cadets must be under 18 years old on July 1, 1911, and for the latter under 16 on the date, all representatives shot before shooting on the times to be regularly enrolled members of a gazetted cadet corps.

The captain of the schooner said that he had been off his course for forty-three days. The Philadelphia supplied the half starved crew with food.

GREAT STRIKE IN AUSTRALIA

VETO BILL IS BEING FOUGHT

Special to The Guardian. LONDON, April 11.—Although many proposed amendments have been passed over and the Government has adopted the closure in others, very slow progress is being made on the Veto Bill in the Commons. The discussion of the bill in the committee stage has been going on for three days and the first clause has not yet been passed.

BALFOUR ON HOME RULE

LONDON, April 7.—Hon. A. J. Balfour, speaking at Lambeth, said: "I believe that Gladstonian home rule is dead and the question is what is going to replace it. The present supporters of the government say why do you object to giving the United Kingdom a constitution not fundamentally dissimilar to the constitution now enjoyed by the great democracies of Canada, Australia and Cape Colony? Do they not all consist of separate provinces, each managing what is called its own affairs, yet governed by a central parliament? I think it a very plausible argument. At the first blush it seems natural that some change of that sort, whether for good or bad, is not at all events hostile to the spirit of freedom or British institutions. In my judgment they entirely forget to consider the mode in which these great colonial democracies have developed into their present state. Canada, Africa, Australia—I might quote the United States but that would only perhaps complicate the argument without adding to it—those great democracies have all started by being separate provinces and gradually feeling the increasing necessity of having a strong central government, and the whole movement in their case has been from separation to union, from disintegration to integration. One of the great difficulties which in respects they still have to contend with, and of the kind which partly caused the great civil war in the United States, is the difficulty of maintaining separate powers and arranging the relative strength of the central government.

MILLIONS TO BE INVESTED IN WESTERN CANADA

LONDON, April 8.—Mr. Droogleever Portuyn, Managing Director of the Netherlands Transatlantic Mortgage Company, is going to Canada to issue loans on farm mortgages in Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan. This Company is reorganized from the formerly proposed Netherlands Mortgage Loan Co., that has been a subject of enquiry in the Canadian Parliament incident to information from Canada that destroyed confidence in that financial enterprise several months ago. The new Company does not contain all the financiers interested in the original Netherlands Mortgage Loan Co., Judge Lochman of the Hague, being one of those whose confidence is not yet re-established. The Canadian Associated Press learns that the Netherlands Transatlantic Mortgage Company has been organized through the efforts of the Canadian Government representative in Amsterdam. With the support of two of the strongest banks in Holland the Company has made arrangements to invest a million dollars or more annually in farm mortgages. The Canadian head office of the company will be at Winnipeg and important branches will be opened at the principal centres in the West. The Union Bank of Canada has secured the banking business of the Company. Minard's Liniment cures Burns, Etc.

PREMIER AND ALLIANCE

Yesterday morning in the old Assembly hall in the Colonial building a large delegation was received by Premier Hazard and members of the Government and the Legislature, which delegation asked for the passing of the new prohibitory bill, subject to the vote of the people. The delegation was led by Rev. H. E. Thomas, City, who made a strong plea in the interests of the temperance people of this province for the passing of the bill. He outlined the position of the people who had sought supplementary measures regarding the suppression of the importation, telling of the visit to Ottawa and then coming back to the P. E. I. Government when it was found power to pass legislation to this effect. However, the Province had passed over liquor once landed and he thought the present bill was a fair proposition to which the there could be no legal objection.

MELBOURNE, April 11.—A great industrial struggle is about to be witnessed in Victoria.

The Trades Council has issued an edict offering a compulsory levy of one shilling a week on every unionist in Victoria in aid of the strike.

RELIGION AND SCIENCE APART

BOSTON, Mass., April 10.—That there is still a wide breach between science and religion was the opinion of President MacLaurin, L. L. D., of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, expressed last night at the Old South Church, at the fourth of a series of lectures given during Lent, on "Religion in Literature, Law, Science and Education." The topic of Dr. MacLaurin's address last evening was "Links Between Religion and Science."

"Scientific knowledge is still partial and incomplete, and in religion the problems to be solved are vastly more difficult and perplexing," said President MacLaurin. "It is too early to determine whether there is to be ultimate conflict or reconciliation between science and religion."

Dr. MacLaurin said in part: "The relation between science and religion is not yet really intimate, but the question has been raised and hotly debated as to whether there is to be peace or war between the two. There has been antagonism and even violent contest between the devotees of each for long, but not to go back too far in history, things came to a head half a century ago, partly because of the attacks made in the name of religion on the scientific doctrine of evolution.

"After all, the chief end of science is to enable man to understand nature, and by understanding to master her. Science exists for action and has achieved wonders without solving the perplexing problems that are so disquieting to the philosopher. Religion also exists for action, and millions profit by it, without troubling much about the perplexing questions that it raises in other minds, and just as the practical science of many men is to be preferred to their philosophy, so the practical faith of countries, sincere souls is to be preferred to the creed that they profess."

PIETY WANTED

TORONTO, April 7.—"Do not take your groupings and crude speculations into the pulpit. The place for them is the study. It is not learning, but divine piety that reaches and wins the heart of man," preaches and wins in such was the counsel given to the graduating class of Knox college last night by Rev. Dr. James Barclay of Montreal, in the course of a scholarly address on "The Christian Ministry." It was the annual convocation of the college, closing its sixty-seventh session. Sir Mortimer Clark, in a brief address, spoke of the scarcity of students for the ministry, declaring that in his opinion the church in Canada was proceeding along wrong lines in "importing a number of uneducated men from Britain for the west." The effect, he said, would be to lessen the influence of the minister there because the imported men were not qualified by education to maintain the present standing of the Presbyterian ministry there.

MINARD'S LINIMENT CURES BURNS, ETC.

One objection made to it was that it was a very radical measure, permitting no one to have liquor on their premises except for medicinal or mechanical purposes. He gave examples of places where more radical bills were in force and said that the bill was not so radical, as appeared on the surface. He commented on the effect which the new bill would have, viz, the prevention of traffic in liquor in the Charlottetown Club. Another objection was the search warrant clause. He compared this new clause to a similar clause in the new N. S. act and thought it was as reasonable as the N. S. act. Nevertheless the speaker said that the temperance people would not object to any amendment which would not sacrifice the principles of the act. He concluded by making reference to the powers entrusted to the doctors and spoke of the great benefit. (Continued on page 6.)
