LAMOthe DEAD IN NEW YORK
KILLED BY REVOLVER SHOT.

He Was a French-Canadian and College Graduate—Evidently Not the Man Seen at Waterville.

New York, July 5.—Joseph A Lamothe, the French Canadian who was wanted in Winchester (Mass.) on suspicion of murdering Georgianna Goddu, died in St. Luke's Hospital this morning. From the revolver shot wound in the abdomen, which he received during a struggle with Detective Becker in the reception room of the hospital Saturday morning. From the time he was shot Lamothe sank gradually and was unconscious until a few moments before death, when he regained consciousness and asked for a priest, who was summoned a day or two after the last sacrament. In reply to the questions of the priest as to his relatives, he turned his face away and was silent. A few minutes after he died.

Attendants at the hospital say that the dying man did not utter a word which could in any way be taken as a statement. It is said that when the injured man was being taken to the ward of the hospital he murmured: "I want to die."

After an examination the coroner's physician gave it as his opinion that Lamothe had killed himself, probably intentionally.

Lamothe, it is stated, has a brother, a clergyman, attached to St. Francis Xavier church, Little Falls, Minn. Boston, July 4.—Joseph Lamothe was a college man and stood at the head of his classes in St. Marie's College, Mariville, (Quebec) from 1890 to 1893, when he graduated with high honors.

At that time he wore no mustache and was so quiet and distant with his colleagues that he was called "Sissy." This nickname was given him when in his first year, and from that time it held to Lamothe, who was at times angered by it. Lamothe declared that he did not care for women. He became greatly annoyed at times when some of his schoolmates would persist in calling him "Sissy."

Lamothe was also a fine singer and used to make the dreary evenings in college bright by his songs and piano playing.

He had a peculiar way of keeping to himself and refusing to engage in the pranks of the other students. The time he spent reading aided him greatly, enabling him to reach the head of his class. He paid special attention to chemistry.

A college chum of Lamothe called at the Post yesterday to see a picture of the much-wanted man. He said he was surprised when he saw the pictures of Lamothe in the papers, figuring that Lamothe would never have gotten into such trouble.

"He was a quiet fellow," said the friend 'when in college, and spent his time reading. He was taking a regular course.

Many Nervous Breakdowns.
Their Rapid Increase is Attracting the Attention of Scientists.

Late statistics show an alarming increase in diseases of the nervous system. Fortunately, many noted physicians have been carefully studying the causes of such frequent nervous collapses, and find that a poorly nourished body is responsible for most of the trouble.

The blood becomes so thin it no longer furnishes nutriment for the nerves, and the welfare of the entire system suffers in consequence.

To impart vigor to the nervous organization no remedy gives such prompt and lasting results as Ferrozone. It contains in very concentrated form all the elements needed to purify and strengthen the blood. With its blood-making properties are skillfully combined the best nerve-nourishing principles known to science.
