

To The Electors of Ward One

Two years ago you elected me to the City Council. During these years I have tried, in co-operation with the other members of the Council to give you sound, economic government.

I am again offering my name for re-election, and as it will be impossible for me to call on all the electors personally, I am using this means of soliciting your support, and if re-elected I shall continue to serve you to the best of my ability, Ward One in particular and the City in general.

D. E. NOONAN.

To The Electors Of Ward Two

Having consented to nominate for City Councillor in Ward Two where I have lived and practised for many years, I respectfully solicit your support in the forthcoming Civic Election.

If elected I will do all in my power to improve the City in general and Ward Two in particular.

LESTER O'DONNELL.

WARD THREE ELECTORS

For the past two years as Councillor of Ward Three I have endeavoured to look after the welfare of Ward Three citizens, and to act in the best interests of the City.

Time will not permit me to personally call upon you. May I take this opportunity of soliciting your support in Ward Three in the coming Civic Election, thereby showing your approval of my endeavours of the past two years.

J. GORDON McDONALD.

To The Electors Of Ward Four

Having served on the City Council I intend to again nominate as a candidate in Ward 4. It is my intention to see as many voters as possible during the next few weeks. In case I do not get around to see you—I ask for your kind support.

If elected I will do all in my power to advance civic improvement.

GEORGE R. KEEFE

To The Electors Of Ward 4 :

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:— Two years ago you elected me to represent you on the City Council. During that time I have served you to the best of my ability.

I have again nominated as your candidate in the forthcoming election. Should you do me the honor of electing me for another term I will continue to work in the best interests of Ward 4, and to what I believe to be the greatest benefit for all the citizens of Charlottetown.

It will be impossible for me to visit you all, furthermore it might not be convenient for you. So I am taking this means of soliciting your support.

The ballot is yours to vote for the candidates you consider best qualified to represent you.

Should you wish to be driven to your poll, ring 584 or 2478 and a car will call.

C. M. COX.

To The Electors Of Ward Five

Two years ago you elected me to the City Council. During these two years I have attempted to serve the citizens of Ward Five to the best of my ability, and in keeping with a planned programme of sensible economy.

The record of the present Council is available to all voters but I would point out the substantial amount of permanent work that was performed in our Ward during the past two years.

I am offering my name for re-election. It will be impossible for me to make a personal canvas and I am using this method of soliciting your support on February 11th.

J. DAVID STEWART.

To The Electors Of Ward Five

I am again offering for election to the City Council. Two years ago you favoured me with your confidence in electing me to the Council. The record of these two years is submitted for your consideration. Substantial improvement has been effected in our City finances. Careful and efficient management has been exercised. I respectfully solicit your continued support and if elected again will continue to promote efficient administration and an increase in services to the citizens.

With Canada's Naturalists

By The Canadian Press

The courtship flight of owls — a phenomenon very few bird lovers have the good fortune to observe — has been seen by a man who lives in Credit Valley, just west of Toronto, and reported to a neighbor, Mrs. Cornell Mitchell, naturalist and author.

A pair of snowy owls — the male an immaculate white, the female a larger and darker bird — had been wintering in the fields near his house. They spent the chilly months in well-defined territories about half a mile apart.

On a late March evening however, they approached each other in the same field. At dusk, but while the sky was still clear, the two owls suddenly took wing and "rose gradually... up the clear stair of external sky." As they ascended they "fought," that is, they came together, grappling and tumbling in mid-air. Then, when they reached a great height, though in excellent view of the watcher in the field, they set their course northward toward the semi-polar tundra, and, flying side by side, vanished from sight.

They have not been seen since and there can be no doubt that this was a "courtship flight" culminating in migration. This takes place hundreds of times every season among species of birds; but it is seldom that the birds, at the time, the place and the intelligent watcher are on hand with such happy coincidence.

Five thousand acres in extent, the Royal Forest at Windsor, England, during the war supplied about 300 tons of timber every month for the construction of military camps, airfields, air-raid shelters and the thousands of bunks which furnished them.

Altogether, there are about 3,000,000 acres of woodlands in the British Isles, and the Canadian Forestry Corps handled a substantial share of woodcutting therein when importations from Scandinavian and other sources were cut off.

But the Canucks did more than tree-felling. They planted literally millions of seedlings and saplings to replace the trees sacrificed to the needs of warfare.

Even in peacetime Canada was taking the lead in helping to reforest Britain. Over a 10-year period, for instance, 32,000,000 Douglas firs, one of the Dominion's finest timber trees, were planted on suitable sites throughout Britain. All the seeds for the transplants were furnished by the government extraction plant at New Westminster, British Columbia.

Sika spruce from the Queen Charlotte Islands and other coniferous trees from Canada's sunset coast thrive in Britain because of similarity in climate and soil. Needless to say, the sight of vast acres of flourishing "Christmas trees" gives delight to British children.

One of the most fascinating alpine specimens ever preserved has been added to the collection of the Royal Ontario Museum. It is a snow-white peacock — every graceful feather on its body and outspread tail is immaculately white.

Consider Plans For Wildlife

OTTAWA, Feb. 4 — (CP) — Plans for enlarging Canada's wildlife resources and extending their utilization were announced today by Resources Minister Glen.

Mr. Glen said "much attention" was being given to the caribou herds, staple source of meat in vast areas of the north and also supplying natives with hides for clothing.

In co-operation with the Prairie Provinces and Ontario, the department was undertaking large-scale investigation of the herds, to include census work from the air and studies of food, reproduction, diseases and losses.

Special scientific investigations were being undertaken on the muskrat, Canada's leading producer of wild fur, in the northwest.

Other studies dealt with cranes and waterfowl. In wild furs generally, Mr. Glen said, the establishment of a system of registered trapping grounds had passed the experimental stage. These had proven their value, and their use was rapidly spreading over new areas.

Dealing with conditions among other wildlife, Mr. Glen said last year deer and moose showed a tendency to increase but were held down in some areas by heavy hunting. Moose were extending their range northwards into new territory.

Rabbits were increasing in many places but the cycle of wolf population was trending downward.

The North American stock of wild ducks, which decreased sharply in 1946, met adverse breeding conditions last year but reproduction generally was fairly good.

Wild geese did not decrease with the ducks, but a cold summer interfered with hatching of young in some of the Arctic nesting areas.

Mr. Glen said reports indicated geese were increasing in the Maritime Provinces, but that in many parts of Western Canada the population of upland game birds was below normal.

DEVELOPED PORCELAIN The tea drinking habit was largely responsible for the development of fine English porcelain.

"WHEN PRICES ARE HIGH Get More Food Values for Less Money"

—advices GRADUATE DIETITIAN ELLEN COURTNEY, who planned nourishing, well-balanced meals for children, as Cafeteria Manager in a big city school. Now, with a husband and two children, her food knowledge and experience is given the final test of keeping within a family budget.

"YOU CAN ADD more food values to meals by serving plainer, more wholesome foods. And my experience in managing a School Cafeteria shows that when nourishing foods are served in an appetizing way—even youngsters soon learn to like foods they really need.

"Right now, getting such necessary foods as vegetables for less money—is quite a problem. But you can get around this by serving more Aylmer Vegetable Soup. And this means a big saving on your budget!

"Your ingenuity will help supply variety. For instance, you can sprinkle grated cheese over Aylmer Vegetable Soup while heating, to add new flavor and more protein to the meal. Or use this nourishing Aylmer soup to make stews go further—add it to pot roasts and meat loaf for more vegetables and flavor at a budget price. Here are some ways I use Aylmer Soups myself—for variety, good nourishment and economy!"

To The Electors Of The City Of Charlottetown

Having been a member of the Board of Water Commissioners for the past eight years, I offer my name for re-election.

As I am not making a personal canvas, I solicit your support on February 11th, and if elected will do my best to maintain the high standard of this Department.

W. D. GILLIS.

TO THE ELECTORS OF CHARLOTTETOWN

I have decided to offer as candidate for election as a Commissioner of Sewers and Water Supply for our City.

It appears possible that my experience in certain practical directions may be useful to the Board, and if your approval results in my election I undertake to do my best to keep up the standard of management now existing.
