party to make terms with Republican Independents and insurgents or with third members to furnish enough votes to that end.

The outcome in the Senate is a stalemate. In the next Senate there will be 48 Republicans including a-bout a dozen insurgents, or exactly one-half the total membership, and 47 Democrats and one Farmer-Laborite.

To retain their present organization, the Republican regulars must have the aid of their insurgent contingent with Vice-President Curtis having the deciding vote.

It is probable however, that should the Republicans decide to take the responsibility of organizing a Senate which they cannot control, Senator Henrik Shipstead, of Minnesota, the Farmer-Labor member, will join with them, thus providing a majority of one for purposes of organization only. He did the same thing once before.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. A. C. Vincent preached two excellent and impressive sermons to large congregations yesterday. His morning theme, suitable to the season, was "Thanksgiving by thanksgiving." At the evening service he delivered the seventh of a series on the "Bible Studies, 'The Disciples'."

The music of the day was of a high order and included a ladies' chorus "Earth does not hold" male quartette "The Redeemed" anthems, "While the earth remaineth," and "Sing ye merrily." Mrs. H. S. Anderson's soprano solo "Thanks be to God," (Stanley Dickson) was very feelingly rendered.

LIBERAL ELECTION LIQUOR

The accused, also a member of the Liberal Committee, in his evidence said that he could not be really said to have possession of the liquor as it was given to him by the Committee for a certain party and that he had hidden it under some boards in his yard until such time as he could give it to his man. There the prohibition officers found it. He told the Judge that he had an interesting story to tell, but the Magistrate said that had nothing to do with the case and did not want to hear it.

Other witnesses questioned, as to whether the bottle in Court was the bottle that was given to the accused in the committee room, said that they could not swear to it as there were all kinds of bottles handed out. One witness on being asked by Mr. Haywood whether it was a "long necker" or quart beer bottle that was given to the accused for this other party, Mr. Haywood taking the trouble to draw an illustration of a quart beer bottle for the benefit of the Court, answered that he really would not like to say, as there were dozens of bottles in the Committee Room.

The witnesses were stopped several times by the Court, in giving their evidence, the Magistrate stating that he considered it had no bearing in the case.

The Judge maintained that election liquor was no different from other liquor and that as it was found in the man's yard, it was in his possession, whether he had it there for another party or not.

The accused was fined $200 and costs.

gregation. "Eternal rest grant them O Lord, and let light perpetual shine on them."

Rev. Canon Malone was celebrant, and preached from the 9th verse of the 19th chapter of 1st Book of Kings. What doest thou here Elijah?

When Elijah was tired and doing nothing God called to him, so today God calls and demands us to rise and do something. We must remember the sacrifice of those who fell, as we are in danger of forgetting it all. We must look back. God asks today, what doest thou here? Life is given to us for doing. What are we doing for our holy religion? Religion is a necessity and not something to engage us for an hour a week. We may try to forget but we cannot blot out from our conscience the voice of God. Let us not be weighed in the balance and found wanting.

After the offertory was received one verse of the National Anthem was sung. After the celebration the beautiful Russian anthem for the departed was sung. During the service Canon Malone reminded those present that Tuesday next was the Festival of St. Martin, Armistice Day and urged that the two minutes of silence be observed in memory of those who fell. (It is rather significant that the Festival of the Soldier Saint Martin falls on the same day as the Armistice was signed. St. Martin who saw much service was born about A. D. 316, and was noted for his benevolent acts, one of which took place at the gates of Amiens. At Armistice season let us remember this spirit of benevolence by buying Poppies for the help of the disabled and the dependents of those who fell.)

Inspiring Service at St. James

The Legion paraded in force to the service at St. James Church last evening where the minister Rev. Comrade R. Moorhead Legate welcomed them very heartily in his own name as a Comrade and in the name of his people.

A truly impressive and eloquent address was given from the text, "Call to remembrance the days in which ye endured a great flight of afflictions," Hebrew 10:32.

At each Armistice season the Book of Memories falls open, memories which fittingly belong to the house of God, as there never was a war into which religion entered so fully as the Great War. Our first thought is one of thankfulness to God for the Victory. Not that we wish to boast or brag of having beaten a great foe but because we are thankful for a great deliverance, for the saving of great ideals, and we cherish proud memories of those

Armistice Message From The Canadian Legion

"If ye break faith, with us who die, We shall not sleep, though poppies blow In Flanders' Fields."

On this twelfth anniversary of Armistice, the Legion again appeals to all loyal citizens of the community to join with them in the fitting observance of this sacred season of remembrance. The Legion stands for peace—and we feel that one of the best guarantees against war is the ever fresh and poignant memory of our heroic dead. Let us never allow ourselves to forget, or to think lightly of those legions of heroes who made the supreme sacrifice; let us keep the awful cost of human lives and suffering of the Great War ever before us, and before the generation who are following us; let us give the highest honour within our power to the memory of those who paid that price, and we shall be doing a great deal to banish war and to promote a universal desire for peace.

In thinking of our dead comrades, we should remember the words of Rupert Brooke, himself one of that glorious company, who wrote of "The Dead":

"These laid the world away, poured out the red Sweet wine of youth; gave up the years to be Of work and joy, and that unhoped serene That men call age; and those who would have been, Their sons, they gave, their immortality."

For these two great reasons,—because of what the dead have given for us, and because we desire Peace so that they may not have died in vain, the Canadian Legion urges that greater attention than ever be paid to the strict and impressive observance of this year's Memorial Services.

We cannot stand beside those hallowed graves in Flanders' Fields, we cannot do anything to enhance their immortal glory, but we can see that those who depended upon them are cared for as a sacred charge upon us. The accepted way of fulfilling these obligations during Armistice season is to purchase wreaths and wear the Poppy—the Flower of Remembrance. Let there be no "breaking faith" on anyone's part on this twelfth anniversary. Let us wear our poppy on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday of next week; let us attend the Memorial Service at the Monument on Tuesday morning; and let us see that the two minutes' silence is kept sacred and inviolate.

Comrades! Citizens! our King, His Gracious Majesty George V., calls upon us to join with him and all the governments and people of our Empire in honouring our glorious dead who sleep in Flanders' Fields! So may they sleep on in peace and honour, and we, to whom they flung the torch, live on in peace, "bearing it high."

Thanksgiving Day In Canada

To Newfoundland, the oldest colony of the British Empire, belongs the honor of having the first Thanksgiving celebration on this continent. This was in 1578 and it was conducted by a clergyman who accompanied the explorer, which under Sir Martin Frobisher brought the first British immigrants to the New World. It must have been a stirring and picturesque ceremony and they had much to be thankful for after their voyage.

Canada was somewhat slow to take up the idea. It is true that the churches observed the harvest festival, but Thanksgiving does not seem to have been a national day of celebration until October 9, 1879, when it was ordained that a day of general Thanksgiving should be held and this was duly observed on November 6th following.

There had been days of observance of Thanksgiving for special occasions before this. Upper Canada proclaimed a day of Thanksgiving in June, 1816, to mark the close of the Napoleonic wars while a Day of Thanksgiving for the whole of Canada was proclaimed on March 1, 1872, for the restoration to health of the then Prince of Wales who was afterwards King Edward VII.

who made victory possible. Next comes the memory of our losses, of the immeasurable sacrifices which have so greatly enriched the world. More and more we are coming to a true conception of what victory means and to put thoughts of our losses second to thoughts of victory.

But when we ask "What has the war done for the world?" we should not try to measure the results by looking at the world as it is today. Let us remember that for four terrible years we poured out a great wealth of lives and service and money for a cause which we believed to be a good and a just one. God will not let it go for naught. Let this be our chief thought when coming over the memories of that awful period,—God does and will bring good out of evil, and as time goes on we shall see more of the good results of the war, more of the harvest from that great sowing of the 1914-1918. During the service Comrade A. G. Bruce sang "Are We Forgotten? He Who Saved the World"—a very appropriate and much appreciated solo. During the offertory the choir sang Kipling's "Recessional," Mr. C. J. Gallagher taking the solo part.

The hymns were "All people that on earth do dwell," "Lord of the lands, make Canada Thine own," "Fight the good fight," and the National Anthem.

Not Enough.

Prohibition Issue In United States

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Where the Prohibition question held the spotlight in the congressional elections wet sentiment predominated save for one notable exception. This was in Pennsylvania. There Gifford Pinchot, conceded election to the Governorship over John M. Hemphill, his wet Democratic opponent, may one day be the leader of the dry forces in the United States. Rhode Island in a referendum declared itself three to one against the 18th Amendment. Illinois and Massachusetts expressed themselves similarly, though not so strongly. In the latter State William J. Butler, candidate of a dry administration for election to the Senate, lost to a wet Democrat, Marcus A. Coolidge. In Ohio, Robert M. Buckley, wet Democrat, took the senatorial seat. Ohio is the birthplace and death place of Wayne B. Wheeler, once superintendent of the anti-Saloon League, and traditionally a dry State. Anti-Prohibitionists claimed a gain of 32 seats in the House of Representatives. The balance in the Senate was maintained, with the result that the position of Congress upon prohibition is not greatly altered. The drys in the House have still a predominance over the wets of 2 to 1. Of 96 Senators only a score could be counted upon to openly support the wets. One acquisition to the wet ranks is James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, whose triumph over Ruth
