"THE TEST OF HONOR"

A PARAMOUNT PICTURE

Founded on "The Malefactor" by E. Phillips Oppenheim. The wife had used all the wiles of her beautiful personality to make this man love her and then—

When this man struck down her husband and he died because of his wife's neglect—she denied the man she professed to love and saw him sent to jail, found guilty of a crime of which he was guiltless. Did he forgive? Could he forgive?

MUTT and JEEF Comedy Cartoon

Adopted By Society

"Seven Days' Leave," which is to crash its noisy way into the Prince Edward for two nights and matinee beginning Wednesday, August 27th, owes much of its popularity to the fact that the novelty of hissing and booing the spies and villains has caught the popular fancy, wherever it has appeared. In fact there is no small clientele of "repeaters," who see the show a second and third time to enjoy the unique experience. The outbreak comes at the end of the third act, after the turret guns of a British cruiser have barked and sent a German U-boat to perpetual quiet, leaving the heroine and the female German spy clinging to a bobbing buoy on the choppy waters of the English Channel. When the members of the cast come before the curtain to acknowledge the applause that the strenuous situations inspire, uproars invariably follows the appearance of the spies. The conflicting cheers for the heroes and the heroine and the protecting boos directed against the enemy characters are reminiscent of the more demonstrative days of the theatre of years ago, when the gallery at least, if not the rest of the house, expressed its verdict in noisy fashion. Throughout the American career of "Seven Days' Leave" society has adopted the popular demonstration idea as a fad until it has grown to be almost a feature of the show. Seats now on sale at the Theatre Box Office.

Do not suffer another day with itching, bleeding, or protruding Piles. No surgical operation required. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once and as a certain cure you see a box of all dealers, or Edman, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Sample box free if you mention this paper and enclose 2c stamp to pay postage.
