Tribute To Late Dr. Robertson From Prof. Shaw

The following eloquent tribute to the late Dr. Robertson has been received by the Guardian: The Island papers have just arrived. What a shock to learn that Dr. Robertson has been called away.

We need great buildings for great schools. Walls that will stand till time is old. Made of such stone, laid with such tools.

We need great souls to make great schools. Or all our walls were laid in vain. Youth asks for reasons, not for rules; There's more than Latin to make plain.

We need great hearts to make great schools. Who speak the truth with voice and pen. Not doubting cynics, shouting fools.

But noble women and clean men. We must have teachers who will teach. But law and justice, right, not rules. However high our roofs may reach.

I am sure that the many thousands of former students who bear the impress of Dr. Robertson's life and teaching will agree that he was one of these great souls referred to in these stanzas.
