A P. E. ISLANDER WHO WORKS FOR THE LORD IN THE NORTHWEST.

Whenever I want to hear the Scriptures expounded in a manner conformable to sound sense and right reason I go to hear a sermon in St. Mary's Church, on Williams Avenue and Stanton Street, in the district of Albina, where Rev. W. A. Daly is pastor. Father Daly is a native of Sturgeon, P. E. I. He did his first missionary work in this State, in its capital, Salem, and his efforts for the spiritual advancement of his flock while there are themes upon which his old parishioners still love to dwell. During the seven years in which he has labored in the parish of which he has now charge he has labored so indefatigably for the spiritual and temporal betterment of his people that his name is held in veneration in every household within its confines.

Father Daly's parish, as it is called, is spoken of as being among the best organized in the city of Portland. It has a school taught by Sisters who are amongst the best educators in the State and an athletic club of about 350 members. The club is known as the Young Men's Catholic Club, and it compares favorably in numbers and efficiency with the two leading clubs of this city, the Y. M. C. A. and the Multnomah Athletic Club. Here the young men of the Albina district are furnished with amusements and exercises which build up the physical man while the spiritual suffers no detriment. Did such an organization do no more than keep the rising generation away from the evil influence of saloons it would be a source of incalculable good in any community.

Father Daly has already made two trips to his native heath since his exile commenced, each of which did him much good and gave him a great deal of pleasure. He says that he hopes that when the end comes his soul shall pass through Saint John's Isle on its way to the realm of bliss.—Oakland Maple Leaf, Calif.

HALIFAX, May 29—Mackerel have struck in along the coast in fairly large quantities and at some of the fishing towns good catches have been reported. About 2,000 fish were stopped at Prospect, Dover and Terrace Bay on Saturday with small catches at Arichat, West Arichat and Spry Bay. The American sealing fleet of some 30 sail or more left Liverpool Saturday morning in pursuit of the mackerel, with the cruiser Petrel watching their movements.

DEATH FOR GHOULS.

HONG KONG, May 29—In view of the fact that there has lately been wholesale desecration of graves in order to obtain human hair for export, mainly to Paris, a decree has been issued by the Viceroy of Canton providing that in order to put a stop to this form of vandalism, any of the ghouls who are caught in the act of robbing a grave shall at once be put to death. It is expected that this will have the desired effect.

GERMANY AND ENGLAND.

The army is an absolute necessity to Germany. She has no natural boundaries, as has England, which take the place of men—Russia on the East and France on the west are watchful and armed and agreed for defence and offence. She would be foolish to sleep on her laurels. But, of course, there is no hiding the fact that such a standing army of non-producers is a terrible drain on the financial resources of the country. There is, without doubt, a great menace in the presence of such a large body of men, whose trade it is to think out means to destroy their fellows and to scheme for national aggrandisement. Probably the thought of this menace got on the nerves of some neurotic English politician with the result that that absurd story of the toast to "The Day" took form in his disordered imagination.

But far greater in peace than in war have been the conquests of Germany. As a result of the war of 1870-71, there was poured into the lap of Germany riches unheard of before. Immediately there began, first of all, an era of speculation, but after that a period of solid development, slow at first, but from 1880 increasing rapidly, which has had one tremendous result, that of removing Germany from the ranks of the agricultural nations and of placing her in the list of the industrial States. Some sixty per cent of her population now depend upon industries for their livelihood. Naturally enough, Germany produces more than her own 60,000,000 of people require, and she is forced to seek other markets. She came upon the scene only to find the best parts of the earth already in the hands of the English. Therefore, not having colonies of her own, she must seek foreign markets. And that she has done with such success, sending out her scientifically produced wares in her own ships, and splendid ships they are, into every part of the world, that "Made in Germany" has rightly become a "brand," a trademark to imitate. And all this would have been impossible but for the encouragement given to scientific progress in all departments of study, whether technical or industrial, medical or theological, and but for the honour and defence, paid, willingly and ungrudgingly, to the investigator in every walk of life.—Professor L. E. Horning, of Victoria College, in the June Canadian Magazine.
