WEDDING BELLS—A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized at York parsonage on Wednesday morning, October 23rd, at 5:30 a. m., when Janet Helen Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Scott, Marshfield, was united in marriage to John Campbell Cooke of the railway mail service, Charlottetown, and son of Mr. W. H. P. Cooke and the late Mrs. Cooke, of York, by the Rev. F. E. Boothroyd. They were attended by Miss Emma Scott, sister of the bride, and Mr. Leith Brown. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Cooke left on a motor trip through the Maritime Provinces. On their return they will reside in Charlottetown. A large number of valuable gifts testify to the popularity of the bride and groom. Included among them was a substantial cheque from the firm of Bruce Stewart & Co., Ltd., of which the bride was a valued employee for some years, also a gift of gold from the employees. Their many friends wish them a prosperous and happy voyage over the sea of life.

DOUBLE WEDDING—An event not common to the ordinary routine of life occurred yesterday morning at Cornwall when Amy Hood, only daughter of Wesley Hood, Cornwall, became the bride of Mr. Milton Wheatley, of Charlottetown and Mildred Warren, only daughter of Surgeon Warren, North River, was united in marriage with Russell Wheatley, also of North River. The ceremony besides being a dual one was unique in that the two grooms are brothers and both brides are only daughters. A crowded church attended the services which were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Aitken, of Cornwall, and the Rev. Mr. McWalker, of North River. Floral decorations were especially pleasing. Autumn leaves and flowers made the interior of the church appropriately beautiful. Mr. G. Elmer Ritchie, of Charlottetown, sang "Oh Promise Me," with fine effect during the signing of the register. Mrs. Milton Wheatley wore a brown transparent velvet dress with hat and shoes to match and Mrs. Russell Wheatley was attired in beige lace with hat and shoes in keeping. After the ceremony which took place at 8 a. m., both couples who were unattended left by motor for Borden enroute to Portland, Maine, for the first stop of a lengthy honeymoon. The Guardian joins in happiest congratulations.

THE 7 DIALS

Continued from page 2 "What are you getting at?" "Well," said Jimmy, "somehow or other—it's not like old Gerry." He found it hard to put into words just what he meant to say. He didn't want to say too much, and yet—He saw Ronny looking at him. Ronny was suddenly alert.

TREDWEL REPORTS

It was at that moment Tredwell came into the room and looked round him hesitatingly. "I thought Mr. Bateman was here," he explained apologetically. "Just gone out this minute through the window," said Ronny. "Can I do anything?" Tredwell's eyes wandered from him to Jimmy Thesiger and then back again. As though singled out, the two young men left the room with him. Tredwell closed the dining-room door care fully behind him. "Well," said Ronny. "What's up?" "Mr. Wade not having yet come down sir, I took the liberty of sending Williams up to his rooms." "Yes." "Williams has just come running down in a great state of agitation, sir." Tredwell paused—a pause of preparation. "I am afraid, sir, the poor young gentleman must have died in his sleep." Jimmy and Ronny stared at him. "Nonsense," cried Ronny at last. "It's—It's impossible. Gerry—" His face worked suddenly. "I'll—I'll run up and see. That fool Williams may have made a mistake."

Before going to battle, the Iroquois Indians pick out a rotten log to represent the enemy they are about to attack. They put it in a hole in the ground, and, dancing about it and jeering, they hurl their lances into it, crying, "Where is your power now? My lance is in you to the hilt." Their actions and their jeers insure a similar victory over the real enemy. Imitative magic is equally popular as an agent for realizing happier and more gracious desires. Young Ojibway men and women carried about with them little images of the person whose love they wished to win. These were regularly pierced through the heart and magical powders were rubbed into the hole. A common practice of ancient witches was to melt a heart of wax in order that the heart of the loved one might also melt. Numberless are the imitative devices to secure success in hunting.
