A confession allegedly extorted by the City Police from Clyde Lauson, Ontario bandit suspect, was declared to be without basis of fact by Chief of Police Bert Watkins on Saturday. No statement or confession, he maintained, had been made so far as he was aware. Bert Watkins said "only police constables should be there." Somebody, however, "might have been using the toilet and overheard something." He had not questioned his men on the matter, but thought it might be a good idea if he did so.

More outspoken was Attorney-General P. A. Large who said he intended to probe the mystery of an alleged confession to the City Police to the bottom.
