CHAPTER VI

Welby was still unconscious. Veronique reached the hospital; but she insisted on going directly to his room, without waiting to hear a general account of what had happened before doing so. She seated herself calmly beside her husband's bed and listened unflinchingly to the account of the accident.

Welby had gone riding alone, Dr. Foster said, so there were no witnesses. He was not found near a hedge or a hurdle of any sort, so it was evident he had not been jumping. Therefore it was hard to explain the fall as one of the "jackknife" variety. Apparently the horse had shied—

"Which horse was it?"

"Butterfly. She is his favorite, isn't she?"

"Yes, and she's very sensitive. If Welby was upset, Butterfly would react to it. Even if he wasn't consciously cruel to her. And he might have been, because he was upset. And it was my fault, Dr. Foster. Did you think—had Welby been drinking?"

"Well, I think he may have had a few drinks. I can't say for sure, but he may have taken out his own irritation on Butterfly. She may have responded by getting skittish."

"It was my fault. Even if she only shied, it was my fault. Did he gallop back to the stables?"

"Yes, Uncle Tad saw her first. So he went and got Susie. They went out to look for Welby together. They didn't say anything to your mother-in-law until they found him. But of course a lot of time had passed. Because, because she didn't telephone me until after twelve o'clock. And by the time we could get the ambulance down to the river—"

The doctor saw that Veronique was not listening to him any more. Her mind, like her eyes, was fixed on Welby. She leaned over him, grasping both his hands. She had hardly taken them in when he opened his eyes. "Ronnie," he muttered. "Ronnie—where am I?"

"You're with me, Welby."

"Ronnie, I'm cold. And— and numb."

"Well, when you're cold, you're likely to be numb too, aren't you? I'll pass off when you're warmer. Let's go to sleep, Welby. Aren't you sleepy? I am."

He drifted off, the discomfit and discomfort of the moment forgotten. The doctor looked at Veronique with increasing attention. "How did you know that there was a sensation of cold and numbness after an accident of this sort?"

of the report, drafting this legislation. The bill is likely to be introduced sometime within the next few months.

The influential British Medical Association does not want state control of medicine in the same sweeping manner. Sir William's report suggests. The B.M.A. centres that there should be a health council in areas which have a big enough population, and exercise practices with communal surgeons, but insisted that patients should have a free choice of doctors and that doctors should not come under state control.

Celling Prices Fixed For Apples

OTTAWA, Sept. 27 (CP)—The Prices Board announced today that ceiling prices on apples when sold by growers in the main producing areas of Canada, and on apples sold at wholesale and retail have been established under an order effective at once.

Three "producing zones" have been designated and ceiling prices at all levels specified for each zone.

Zone 1 includes Ontario and Quebec. For apples sold in this zone the ceiling prices are based on a delivered price at the island of Montreal and at distribution points on or south of the main line of Canadian Pacific Railway west to Sudbury, Ont. For other distributing points in the zone the ceiling prices are based on Toronto prices plus transportation costs from point of shipment, less 25 cents a hundredweight.

Zone 2 in the Maritime Provinces. The ceiling prices in this zone are F. O. B. Kentville, N. S., plus transportation to other distributing centres.

Zone 3 in British Columbia. The ceiling prices are F. O. B. Kelowna. Ceiling prices for British Columbia apples in other parts of Canada will be based on Kelowna ceiling plus transportation costs.

For Zone 2, the Maritime Provinces, the ceiling prices F. O. B. Kentville are $5.85 a barrel, and $4.85 a barrel in group 2. For domestic grade apples the corresponding ceilings are $4.95 and $3.95 a barrel.

In all zones, apples of other grades or packed in other types of containers than those mentioned are "correspondingly priced", the Board said.

For loose packed apples a discount of 1 cent a barrel or 25 cents a crate or hamper is provided. For windfalls, where they are permitted to be sold, a discount of 1.50 a barrel or 50 cents a hamper or crate below the domestic grade ceiling price is provided.

The order provides for addition of storage and shrinkage costs after Dec. 1 at a rate of 10 cents a barrel, 10 cents a hamper box or crate, or quarter cent a pound on any other package, for each month.

On the above ceiling prices for growers, wholesale distributors are permitted to add transportation costs from F. O. B. points, and a mark up not to exceed 12 1/2 per cent of their selling price.

Retailers are limited to a mark-up of not more than 20 per cent of the retail selling price on unbroken barrels, boxes or hampers or other packages, or 25 per cent of the selling price on broken lots of apples.

St. Charles Auxiliary

The members of St. Charles Auxiliary met at the Charlottetown Hospital Monday evening September 25th to wish Rev. L. Ayer, "At Rest" and present him with a token of appreciation. Mrs. J. J. Duffy presided. All the ladies present expressed their regrets at losing such an efficient Chaplain. An address was read by the Secretary, The Reverend Father, who has been appointed Pastor of Kelly's Cross Parish thanked the members for their expressions and for the valuable gift.

Lunch was served by the Sisters of the Hospital after which all joined in singing "God Save the King."

THE ADDRESS

Reverend Father—

The Sacred Writers and other noted authors have used many figures and comparisons to impress upon us the swiftness of the flight of time so quickly have the months passed since you were appointed our Chaplain, Reverend Father, that we seem to be saying, "Hail and farewell all in the same breath." In these brief days we have learned your sterling worth and appreciated your inspiring leadership and your devotion to duty. These are days of partings and sacrifices and so reluctantly we bow our heads to the call which transfers you to a field of labor outside of Charlottetown. In cities there are many demands upon the services of our Father Priest but the best rural parishes tell us that the good rural priest is the foundation of our hopes for the future of the Nation and the Church. While we shall miss you in many ways, we look forward with expectancy to the good you will accomplish in your new sphere of activity. Your Sacred family is your foundation and your spiritual life of your people noted for their vital faith. Your interest and initiative will be exerted for their temporal welfare. With this token of remembrance, which we ask you to accept, go our prayers and good wishes with you. Follow you Reverend Father, as we think gratefully of the help you gave us.

Signed on behalf of St. Charles Auxiliary,
Mrs. J. J. Duffy, President,
Miss Margaret Wisner, Sec'y.

Marsh Plan Criticised In Whitton Report

TORONTO, Sept. 27 (CP)—Criticism of the Marsh report on social security for Canada is expressed by Dr. Charles Whitton in "The Dawn of an Ampler Life", prepared at the request of John Bracken, leader of the Progressive Conservative Party.

Conclusions reached in the book were made public today in a summary written by Dr. Whitton in which he explained the book dealt only with individual income maintenance — "A limited area of the whole great sphere of social security."

Mr. Bracken announced last night at Ottawa that he had commissioned Dr. Whitton to prepare an analysis of the Marsh report and the Beveridge report as well as other reports on social security. He added that the analysis will be published on a commercial basis and "should not be considered as a political party document, but one standing on its own merits."

Dr. Whitton's summary said that the essence of the book's comment was that "the basic criticism of the proposals offered by Dr. Marsh for Canada is that they attempt to direct the Dominion along the blueprint of the Beveridge plan and introduce certain suggestions emerging from a different social background when all the elements of the Canadian situation demand the evolution of realistic measures grounded deep in the character of this country and its people."

Corn involves hundreds of agricultural varieties that may be classified into seven principal groups, namely, pop, pop flint, den, soft, sweet, and starchysweet.

Ban Lifted on Two-pant Suits, Trouser Cuffs

OTTAWA, Sept. 27 (CP)—The Canadian male got this news from the prices board today, he can again buy trousers with cuffs and get two-pant suits.

These things were banned in March last year because developments in the Pacific indicated the entire Australian wool supply might be cut off and because the rapidly-expanding Canadian armed forces created vast demands for uniforms.

"Recent developments in the Pacific seem to ensure continued availability of Australian wool and the demands of the armed forces are less of a burden," the board said today.

"Anyone who prefers a cuffed trouser or wants an extra pair of pants when he buys a suit now will be able to satisfy his wish and his clothes can be suitably accommodated."

Other restrictions made in March, 1942, eliminate style features like pleats and patch pockets.

"These will continue because the fabric supply and labor shortages and cost of production still require that unnecessary frills be eliminated in order that the supply of suits may be maintained under the price ceiling."

"No increase in price will be permitted for cuffs on trousers and pricing for two-pant suits must conform with ceiling regulations."

SAVE YEARNING HENS EVERY EGG NEEDED

Egg production is a vital war effort, and all the eggs that can be produced will be required next year for domestic use and for export to Great Britain. In order to bring increased egg production to the highest pitch, the Dominion Department of Agriculture urges upon poultrymen the importance of retaining all suitable yearling hens.

When the number of good pullets is not sufficient to fill the laying pens, production can be maintained by keeping over the best yearlings. It is necessary that all laying houses should be filled to capacity this year.

Fullest and yearling should not be housed in the same pen, nor should yearlings be mixed with the young pullets with older pullets. The older birds drive the younger ones away from the feed. Yearlings that moult early are usually slow moulters and poor producers, but active, alert yearlings in good flesh with skin and fat soft and pliable

12,000 MILES IN JEEP

SUSSEX, N. B., Sept. 26 (CP)—Flt. Lt. T. B. Senex, Halifax, aircraft detection corps officer for the Maritimes, thinks this is some kind of a record. During the last six months he has covered 12,000 miles in the Maritimes in an army jeep. He arrived here today to spend a week in the Sussex district.
