STRAP-HANGERS FLEE TRAM MONKEY-SHINES

Detroit's transportation received a big jolt when "Pete," a Philippine monkey shown with Sherry Spooner, his master's daughter, boarded a street car with his owner. The conductor objected to having Pete for a passenger. While the argument was under way, the monkey jumped to the nearest strap and went into his act. Screaming women made for the exit and the car was soon cleared of passengers. The tram made a fast run to the barns where Pete was removed.

ments based on the new offers they received during the recent Ottawa discussions.

Those discussions were aimed at bringing about equalization in the $15 per capita subsidies offered New Brunswick, Saskatchewan and Manitoba with the $21 per capita subsidies offered British Columbia and Prince Edward Island. The subsidies would be paid to the Provinces in return for their giving almost exclusive rights to the Dominion in the personal income, corporation and inheritance tax fields.

Mr. Abbott has indicated that he will not announce the details of the new offers until after he has met Mr. Manning Wednesday.

The nature of the offers have been outlined to Premier Macdonald of Nova Scotia who stopped off here last week on his way back to Halifax from a holiday in the Bahamas. Mr. MacDonald said he would discuss the offers with his cabinet. He may disclose during the week whether he is prepared to reopen negotiations with the Dominion.

There is a possibility as well that Premier Drew of Ontario and Premier Duplessis of Quebec may express their views on Dominion-Provincial matters in the light of recent developments.

Premier Drew has repeatedly called for a resumption of the Dominion-Provincial conference which broke up in failure last May when uniform agreements with all provinces was sought.

Premier Duplessis recently indicated that Quebec was not prepared to enter into negotiations on an individual basis with the Dominion.

Ice Pack Too Much For U. S. Submarine

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

LITTLE AMERICA, Jan. 19 — (AP) — Admiral Richard Cruzen announced Saturday night that the submarine Sennett will abandon its attempt to penetrate the ice pack guarding Little America and will start back to the United States about Feb. 1.

"There's just too much ice," Cruzen said.

After five days of battling the ice, the task proved too dangerous and the Sennett was led back to the vicinity of Scott Island by the icebreaker Northwind. The Northwind then returned and led the flagship Mt.-Olympus and the cargo ships Yancey and Merrick on to Little America.

The Sennett now is making underwater studies of temperatures, salinity and microscopic life in the vicinity of Scott Island.

Here at Little America the work of unloading 4,224 tons of cargo from the Yancey is progressing, with men working around the clock.

The wind is blowing the ice floes out of the bay where the ships are anchored, making the harbor more tenable.

Reports from the eastern and western groups on the rim of the Antarctic say the weather is still bad and they are unable to send aircraft out on photographic reconnaissance flights.

GEORGIA HAS TOO

late Eugene Talmadge still held the governor's chair, surrounded by state troopers.

Meanwhile, additional litigation loomed as Thompson supporters sought to bring the issue before the Georgia Supreme Court and Talmadge, although contending that the tribunal is without jurisdiction, said he would abide by the decision.

One suit to enjoin Talmadge from serving as governor already has been filed by attorney general Eugene Cook at Arnall's request and will be heard Feb. 7 but others may try to hold up the collection of state taxes until the issue is settled.

Talmadge was elected governor by the general assembly after a tumultuous 16-hour session. He received 675 write-in votes in the general election, which was overwhelmingly won by his father, long-time champion of white supremacy.

Arnall, the retiring governor, contended that no successor had been duly elected and said he was continuing in office until Thompson was qualified as lieutenant governor. His resignation, submitted last week, took effect at 10.50 a.m. Saturday, the moment that Thompson was sworn in by a court of appeals judge.

Attorney general Cook, who filed suit against Talmadge in Arnall's behalf, said today he would "move immediately" to have the name of Thompson substituted for Arnall.

Mining Convention Is Opening Today

OTTAWA, Jan. 19—(CP)— Canada's $500,000,000 mining industry and all its ramifications, stretching from coal-producing Nova Scotia to the rich gold fields of British Columbia and the Yukon, will come in for three days of discussion at the annual convention of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy opening Monday.

Delegates and their wives, numbering about 700, have converged on Ottawa for the convention of mining's national association which embraces the men who have developed mining from a pick-and-shovel affair to a modern industry —the engineers and metallurgists themselves.

May Hold M. P. And M. L. A. For Assault

MONTREAL, Jan. 19 — The possibility of the arrest of a Liberal member of the federal government and of a Liberal member of the opposition in the Quebec Parliament in connection with the assault on Louis Even, Social Credit candidate, and the detention of his chief lieutenant, Gerard Mercier, in a Sorel hotel on the day of the Richelieu-Vercheres by-election was reported on good authority here yesterday.

It was also stated that a complaint would most likely be lodged against the brother of the Quebec parliament man, who was alleged to have been the man who directed the proceedings and "paid off" the five Montreal men now facing charges in Criminal Court here in connection with the assaults and the sequestering of Mercier.

The report that Provincial police had obtained information which would most likely lead to the lodging of complaints against the three men was heard while police continued their investigation and two of the five men arraigned in police court on Tuesday in connection with the affair were released on bail.

The five men arraigned on Tuesday before Judge F.T. Enright were Charles Piquette, Edouard Barrette, Fernand Rouleau, Antoine Chagnon, and Albert Prieur.

When they were arraigned Chief Prosecutor Oscar Gagnon, K.C., requested, on behalf of Provincial police, a three-day verbal remand of the accused to police headquarters. Defence counsel, Raymond Noel, objected strenuously and Mr. Gagnon promised the court that the men would be returned to court for purposes of requesting bail just as soon as police could complete the work of having them identified by witnesses from Sorel.

Hearing On January 21

Charles Piquette and Edouard Barrette were returned to court yesterday. Judge T.A. Fontaine fixed bail at $1,500 bond or $1,000 cash in the case of Piquette, and $950 bond or $500 cash in the case of Barrette.

They are scheduled to appear with the other three men for preliminary hearing on January 21.

At the same time the report, which Provincial police refused to confirm or deny, was to the effect that the officers had obtained information definitely linking the Liberal member of the Quebec parliament and his brother to the attacks on Louis Even and Gerard Mercier. Even was assaulted in one room in the hotel in Sorel, and Mercier was assaulted and detained for more than seven hours in another room in the same hotel.

Deer Kill In N. S. Breaks All Records

(By The Canadian Press)

HALIFAX, Jan. 19—The number of deer killed in Nova Scotia in the 1946 hunting season broke all previous records, Lands and Forests Minister J. H. MacQuarrie said during the weekend. Reports show 26,396 deer killed, an increase of 6,000 over 1945 figures, also a record.

Mr. MacQuarrie said many hunters to whom licenses had been issued still had not made a report to the Department as required by the Lands and Forests Act. Altogether 33,812 licenses were issued.

The 1946 deer season opened Oct. 1 and ended Nov. 15. Bag limit was two deer of either sex.

GOOD DISH

This is the season for entertaining and an easy-to-prepare, yet colorful and appetizing dish for a luncheon or supper party is the jellied neopolitan loaf.

Directions: Place a layer of tomato jelly in the bottom of a mould or loaf tin which has been lightly greased or rinsed in cold water. When firm add a layer of potato salad and a layer of chicken salad. Pour the remaining tomato jelly into the mould. When firm unmould on serving place, garnish with parsley or green pepper strips and hard-cooked eggs. Serve with salad dressing, rolls or bread.

DANGEROUS TEMPERATURES

Temperatures near freezing are more dangerous for driving than zero temperatures because at near freezing the ice is wet and thus reduces braking distance and traction.

To Close Gap In Weather Reporting

TORONTO, Jan. 19 —(CP)—Canada's director-general of defence research said Saturday it is hoped that "a large gap in the system of weather stations between the Canadian mainland and the North Pole" will soon be filled and "thus complete the weather-reporting system of the northern hemisphere."

Dr. O.M. Solandt, a scientist with status equivalent to that of the chiefs of staff for the forces, said in an address prepared for delivery before the Association of Professional Engineers that "a thorough knowledge of the Arctic and its problems is essential, both to the regional defence of North America and to the normal peaceful development of the Canadian north." Such knowledge could only be obtained "by a well-planned, long-term program of research and exploration."

"It is of great importance to us and to other nations of the earth to know more of the meteorology of the Arctic, for it is there that much of the world's weather originates. The Soviet Union has already established many meteorological stations in the Arctic and is supplying the results of their observations to the world.

"There is a large gap in this system of weather stations between the Canadian mainland and the North Pole. It is hoped that this gap will soon be filled and thus complete the weather-reporting system of the northern hemisphere."

Milk Supply At Saint John To Become Normal

SAINT JOHN, N. B., Jan. 19—(CP)—Saint John's milk supply, reduced since Dec. 10 when some producers stopped shipments to the city in an effort to get a higher price, is expected to become normal gradually starting tomorrow, following announcement that the suppliers concerned have obtained an option on Geldart's dairies here and that they resumed shipments of milk to the plant Saturday afternoon.

J. V. Geldart, president of the firm, said a 30-day option on the plant had been given to the Association of Milk Producers-Suppliers for the Saint John area, with a possibility the option may be taken up within a few days. The price involved was not disclosed.

Brock Monument Is Guide To Airmen

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Jan. 18 —(CP) — For the first time, the monument to General Sir Isaac Brock, high on Niagara's escarpment, was illuminated last night. It was announced the lofty monument was a "natural" as an aviation guide and too good to waste. Illuminated, the General's figure atop the pinnacle will be a guiding light for airmen above Lake Ontario.

EVEN LINENS STYLE-WISE

Even linens are fashion-wise these days. One of the first things a girl does when she knows she is to be married and finds her home or her apartment is to rush out and see what is available in linens. She learn that she needs to select her colors and her monograms.

First, what should she know about monograms? The important thing is to select her monogram first before anything is bought and then use it on all bathroom and bedroom linen. This is the kind of ensembling that is done in the smart shops and makes bathrooms and bedrooms look as if they belong in homes worth a million. It costs little for the over-all effect.

If she can't afford to have the monograming done, the clever girl of today can learn easily to do it herself. The effect is worth the effort.

Now for colors. Select gray for the husband-to-be and monogram his towels in strong initials. She picks burgundy and monograms her towels in the gray of this towel. These two colors will become the base for the bedroom colors —gray rug, a burbundy bedspread and a gray-ground chintz with shades of light and dark burgundy and light and dark greens.

Quality and Long Wear

What about quality and price? We hear so much about quality in a general way. The towels recommended may seem expensive but they prove cheap in terms of wear.

There is a shower towel whose granddaddy was a tough he-man towel with long ribs. The salesman who sold the athletic towel showed it to the smart shop stressing its toughness, weight, fees absorbency, friction.

The owner of the shop admitted all these things but countered, "It has no style." Then and there this beautiful towel was developed. Its squares of smartly ribbed terry cloth are ribbed closely, full weight and ruddy enough to start the blood tingling after a quick plunge under a cold shower.

It's a thirsty towel. And yet it feels soft to the skin. These are all points the bride should look for when she buys bath towels. They can readily be summed up under the heading: Quality.

What colors shall be selected? White is by far the most wanted towel color. But other colors proving their popularity are sand, silver gray, beige, pearl gray, royal blue and burgundy.

This January there will be more white goods than for many a year but even so, the supply will not up with the demand. Don't buy unless you need things badly. Let those who are starting new homes or whose supply has worn out have the first chance.

BALLOTING NOT FREE

one, four and five assigned to the P.S.L.

Most of the 12,000,000 eligible voters got their numbered slips from pro-government newspapers or bloc organizers who marshalled the voters under the shadow of rifles of 100,000 volunteer militiamen, supported by regular militia, soldiers and security police.

In the polling places the voters were identified at a table. They walked a few steps to a ballot box. In most cases an official of the election commission held open a blue envelope in which voters placed the number ballot. It was then dropped unsealed into a ballot box. In some precincts the envelopes were handed to the voters, who inserted the ballot. Those who tried to seal the ballots were prevented from doing so by election officials.

FEWER UNEMPLOYED

survey said the seasonal decline "added to the chronic unemployment of the region."

Layoffs in heavy manufacturing occurred in the Pictou-New Glasgow area of Nova Scotia, but shipyards in Halifax were maintaining a high level of employment and logging was progressing well in most areas.

Quebec had 43,000 unplaced applicants and 38,000 unfilled vacancies. Transfer of unemployed Nova Scotians to the mining areas of Northern Quebec was under way but handicapped by lack of housing.

Ontario had 46,000 unplaced applicants and 34,000 vacancies at the start of the year.

Prairie workers helped ease the situation, while the mining industry was making plans for transferring young men from Nova Scotia to the gold and nickel areas.

On the prairies there were 30,000 unemployed and 11,000 jobs.

British Columbia has only 3,000 jobs against 23,000 applicants about the same as a year ago.

Unplaced applicants and unfilled vacancies (in brackets) in National Employment Service offices included:

Halifax, 2,693 (702); New Glasgow, N.S., 2152 (61); Sydney N. S., 2,169 (57); Moncton, N.B., 1,920 (h91); Saint John, N.B., 2,251 (654).

DISCUSSES WESTERN

available for human consumption, barley acreage must be increased. That if a storage of oats is to be maintained against possible short crops to assure feeding the present livestock population through our long winters, oat acreage should also be increased. That if barley and oat acreage is to be increased, it can be most effectively brought about in Western Canada by reducing wheat acreage. If this is the goal, it can only be brought about, particularly in barley, by making the return from barley comparable to the return per acre from wheat.

"The Conference was of the opinion that the return on barley could be assured and hence the increased acreage desired achieved, by making an acreage payment to farmers producing barley in the Western Provinces. The Conference was also of the opinion that if an acreage payment is made in the Western Provinces, this 15 cent premium should be removed in the West and the payment of freight to the Eastern Provinces and British Columbia continued on the same basis as in recent years.

"The Conference is of the opinion that with this increased production of barley provided for, provision should be made to encourage greater production of hogs and milk, particularly milk utilized for the production of butter and cheese.

"It was contended that to encourage the increased production of livestock products, particularly dairy products, an increase in the oil cake supply is necessary. If this is to be accomplished there must be an increase in flax seed production in the West.

"It was the opinion of the Conference this could only be brought about by increasing the return for flax.

"Mr. Gardiner made it clear these were only recommendations, and while he agreed with them in the main, he warned they would still have to be passed upon by the Government.

Maritime Opinion

"I noticed your Mr. Shaw was quite in line with the above mentioned viewpoint, as was also Mr. Walsh from Nova Scotia. Mr. Walsh made it very plain that the suggestion the East should grow more coarse grains was a bit startling. At the Conference in 1938-39 it had been felt that the best policy was to let the West grow coarse grains and the East feed them. If the Maritimes doubled their production of coarse grains it would mean very little, but if the same acreage went into forage and root crops, it would have a decidedly beneficial effect on livestock and dairy production.

"The President of the C.F.A., Mr. Hannam, in referring to the proposals for an acreage bonus on barley had this to say: 'This would eliminate the equalization fee and help out all farmers who seeded barley on the same basis of returns, whether they sold the barley or fed it.' It was desirable that the proposed bonus should be $5.00 an acre; the equalization fee had given barley growers about $3.50 an acre, and the bonus would therefore give an increased return of about $1.50 per acre.

"In Eastern Canada the bonus policy would mean:

"1. A volume of barley available for feed for Eastern feeders, which was most important.

"2. It would mean retention of the present ceiling price and stabilization of feeding costs; which is a big factor.

"3. It would mean holding the present freight assistance policy.

"In the West it would mean a better balanced barley production program.

"'On the whole,' said Mr. Hannam, 'the policy would be a good thing for Canada, as it would move in the direction of a national feed and livestock policy under which grain production would be encouraged where it was most economical, and in the East, where pastures and meadows were a natural development, a policy of improvement in these, rather than an attempt to compete in grain growing.'

"I think this outlines fairly well the Eastern and Western viewpoint as expressed and recommended by the C.F.A. and personally I feel the policy is sound and a step forward in equalizing and stabilising the national agricultural economy. It may need some encouragement from all those interested both in the East and West as these are only recommendations to the Government and no doubt you have seen some of our recommendations of the past fall by the wayside when they were not followed up with the strength of our reasoning until they became a part of the general policy of our country.

Boston Trawler Still Missing

NEW YORK, Jan. 19 — (CP)— The Navy tug Mosepelea left Bermuda Saturday to take over from the Navy tug Nipmuc in escorting the crippled Canadian steamship Tecumseh Park into port, the United States Coast Guard here announced.

The Tecumseh Park, with storm-damaged deck plates, was about 585 miles northeast of Bermuda Saturday, making six knots. The Coast Guard said it is likely she will have to be towed into port because of a fuel shortage.

The Coast Guard also said that the 113-foot trawler Belle out of Boston is still being sought by planes and surface vessels. The Belle, with 17 persons aboard, disappeared several days ago. The Coast Guard said Saturday that if the Belle was not found this weekend the search would be abandoned.

Serious Coal Shortage In St. John's, Nfld.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Jan. 19 — (Reuters)—the worst coal shortage in this city's history Saturday brought a joint appeal from six local coal dealers urging householders to conserve their supplies.

One dealer was doling out his last few hundred tons in half-ton lots. More coal was available here at any time during the war than at present, it was stated.

Many householders, facing a short supply during the entire winter, have been forced to change to oil because of shipping strikes and the shortage of other supplies from Canada and the United States.

Small size does not deter Elizabeth Rickey, San Francisco policewoman, from doing her duty. She recently saw a 150-pound man snatch a case of whiskey from a truck and gave chase. Mrs. Rickey collared the culprit, dragged him 50 feet to a call box, and held him with one hand while she telephoned with the other.
