Why Do Wives Nag?

Dorothy Dix

Finds a Cause, but No Cure

When a Woman Nags Her Family it is Because She Has Such Great Affection for Them, Because She Has a Naturally Bossy Nature, or Because She Just Hasn't Anything Else to Think About

A poor, harassed, henpecked man asks me why wives nag and if there is any cure for it.

Well, brother, there are three reasons why women nag and, curious enough, the first and greatest of these is love. It is one of life's little ironies that the woman who tortures her husband and children by nagging, and makes them hate her and flee from her as from the stinging of a gadfly, is often inspired to her pestiferous course by affection than by any other cause.

Many a wife and mother who would die for her family, if necessary, makes them wish they were dead to be rid of her ceaseless admonitions and warnings and inquiries and remonstrances and interferences, but it is not malevolence nor a desire to irritate and make herself offensive that causes her to play upon the same theme endlessly, as upon a harp with a single string.

It is just her devotion to her husband and children. Her absorption in them. Her anxiety about them. The fact that her world centres around them. She has no other thought but about them and she must express it, no matter how much they resent it or how tired they get of hearing it, or how much it gets upon their nerves.

It is love that makes a wife warn her husband every morning when he starts to work to watch out and not get run down by an automobile; not to eat a heavy lunch; not to get his feet wet; not to fall to the doctor and see about his cough; not to sit in a draft; not to do this, not to do that, until he goes off feeling like one incarnate DAMN.

It is love that makes a wife make the same protest every time a man lights a cigarette for forty years. It is love that spoils every meal for him by her telling him how bad everything he likes to eat is for his digestion. It is love that makes her object to his sitting up at night reading, or going out to take a stroll before bedtime.

And it is love that makes a mother nag her children to extinction about everything they do and don't do. It is love that makes her put them through the same questionnaire every time they go out of the house about where they are going and who they are going to see, what they are going to say and when they are coming back. It is love that makes her nag them about their clothes and their dancing and their friends and that makes them have to fight over the same old bottle with her every day of their lives.

It isn't really that the woman wants to interfere with her husband's and her children's pleasure and happiness. It is just that she is so anxious about them that she can't let them alone. A woman has either to be very broad-minded or else have very little affection for her family to be willing to grant her husband and children any personal liberty and refrain from nagging them about everything they do.

The second reason why women nag is their determination to boss their families. They are petty domestic tyrants who are determined to rule, or ruin, and they soon find out that the most effective way to do this is by nagging. For as the constant dropping of water will wear away the hardest stone, so will the never-ending repetition of the same objection break down the stoutest resistance.

Most of us are cowards who take the love of least resistance and we find it easier to give in to the nagger than it is to fight her. And so we let the nagger nag us into joining her church and voting for her political candidate and giving up our friends and family and moving into the neighborhood she has made up her mind to live in and buying the automobile we cannot afford.

For once the bossy nagger has made up her mind to have anything or do anything she worries her family about it until they give in in sheer exhaustion.

The third reason why women nag is the narrowness and lack of outside interest in their lives. This is amply proved by the fact that nagging is almost exclusively a domestic vice. You never hear of a woman indulging in it in business, or anywhere outside of the home circle.

The nagging wives are almost always the sort of women who are ingrowing wives and mothers and housewives; the woman who boasts that they rarely go away from home, and that they devote all of their time and thought to their husbands and children. They don't read. They don't go to clubs. They don't do anything to amuse themselves.

The result is that they lose their perspective. Having little to think about, they thrash over the same old grievances until they make mountains out of molehills. Having nothing new to talk about, they talk ceaselessly about the same old things.

It is these women with nothing new to divert their thoughts into fresh channels who will nag a man for thirty years about the money he loaned an old friend, or a bad investment that he made, or the time he came home from a lodge celebration all lit up like a Christmas tree.

As for the remedy for nagging, there is, alas, none, because no woman ever admits that she is a nagger. The nagger only says what she does say to her family for their own good and she never can understand why they don't appreciate it and enjoy staying at home and hearing her repeat herself.

LETTER OF SYMPATHY

Mrs. A. B. MacLeod:

Bonshaw, P. E. I.

Dear Friend:-The members of Bonshaw Women's Institute wish to extend to you our sincere sympathy in your recent bereavement--the loss of your dear mother.

It is always sad to bid farewell to our dearest friends who have enriched our lives and born with us the encouragements and discouragements as we journey through this life, and who are always ready to help in time of need.

Although we do not always understand the sad circumstances of this life, yet we must bow in submission to the Divine Will for we do know that our Heavenly Father overrules all things for his own glory and our ultimate good.

May the blessed memories of her noble consecrated life be a means of comfort and blessing to you, is our prayer to Him who has said, "Come unto Me all ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Signed on behalf of the Bonshaw Women's Institute. Mrs. L. D. BEATON, Secy.

CONCENTRATE ON EGGS

Now that meat is away up--even those famous cheaper cuts that we urge everybody to use--and eggs are away 'way down' the wise woman, "who looketh well to the ways of her household," will concentrate on the latter. I found a number of delicious recipes the other day and pass them on. There is the dish called...

Savoury Eggs To make it take six eggs, cook them hard, cut them in two lengthwise and take out the yolks. Mash these and add to them some chopped parsley, a quarter of a cup of hot cream, a little anchovy paste, salt pepper and fill the white with the mixture. Lay these on slices of hot toast and pour over them a smooth white sauce.

Baked Eggs (Spanish) This is a dish with a flavour! Fry three tablespoons of chopped onions and three tablespoons chopped green pepper, in four tablespoons of butter. Fill they are slightly brown. Break six eggs carefully into a cup or saucer, and slide them into the baking dish so carefully that the yolks will not break. Mix a quarter of a cup of breadcrumbs and half a cup of grated cheese and sprinkle them over the eggs, and bake in a slow oven till the eggs are set, but do not let them get hard. Cook this in a dish that can go to table.

Spanish Eggs--Another Style Take a slice of onion and rub it over the inside of a frying pan, then peel a tomato and cut it into small pieces (pieces of canned tomato will do) and cook these in a tablespoon, or melted butter for five minutes. Then beat six eggs well, add to the tomato, add salt and pepper and cook slowly stirring constantly till the eggs thicken up like scrambled eggs. Pour this into a hot dish and send it once to table.

SOME WOMEN SUFFER FROM SCARE OF ESCALATORS Despite the increasing number of moving stairways in the tube stations of London. There are many people who prefer to use the fixed staircase provided at every station.

Recently two smartly dressed women who admitted that they were Londoners and regular users of the tubes were observed, avoiding the escalators at Piccadilly.

Asked by a Daily Mail reporter why they did so, one admitted having a...

IT CLEANS .. where the toothbrush cannot reach

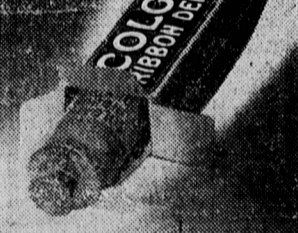

The test of a toothpaste, say dentists, is "How well does it clean?"

And when a dentist says "clean" he means not only the outer tooth surfaces but the tiny crevices where, experience has taught him, food particles lodge and where decay starts.

He knows that no toothbrush can reach these hard-to-clean places. They must be cleansed by the dentifrice.

Hence the real test of your toothpaste is its ability to get down into these crevices and cleanse them thoroughly. A recent scientific test proved that Colgate's has a greater penetrating power than any of the leading toothpastes on the market today. This is the secret of Colgate's superior cleansing power. It cleans where the toothbrush cannot reach.

When brushed, Colgate's breaks into an active, sparkling foam. This foam pos-esses a remarkable property (low "surface-tension") which enables it to get deep down into every minute pit and fissure. There it softens and dislodges the impurities, sweeping them away in a detergent wave.

In this foam is carried a fine chalk powder... a polishing material prescribed by dentists... which polishes the enamel safely, brilliantly.

Think what this means to you... By using Colgate's you can clean your teeth thoroughly, scientifically, exactly as your dentist would have you clean them... restoring the natural loveliness of teeth and gums.

If you have never used Colgate's you will be surprised and delighted with its wonderful cleansing action. Send for an interesting booklet on the care of the teeth and mouth.

How Colgate's Cleans Where the Toothbrush Cannot Reach

Greatly magnified picture of tiny tooth crevice. Note how ordinary, sluggish toothpaste (having high "surface-tension") fails to penetrate deep down where causes of decay may lurk.

This diagram shows how Colgate's active foam (having low "surface-tension") penetrates deep down into the crevice, cleansing it completely where the toothbrush cannot reach.
