Discuss S'side Harbor Waters Contamination

Mr. R.E. Pequegnat of Ottawa, senior sanitary engineer of the Dept. of Health and Welfare met a group of interested officials in the Town Hall, Summerside, yesterday afternoon to discuss the contamination of the water of the harbour and its effects on crabs and fish.

Mr. John E. Campbell explained that a great financial loss was suffered by the fishermen of the Town every year as a result of the harbor being a contaminated area.

Mayor J.P. Arcey explained that the Town was discussing the question of installing a sewage disposal plant but he stated that it would be a useless expenditure of money unless some assurance could be given that after this installation the water would be free of bacteria.

Mr. Pequegnat explained the pollution of water can be caused by sewage disposal, dumping of garbage along the waterfront, the street run-off, dumping from boats and other causes. He stated that for that reason no assurance that the installation of a sewage disposal system would solve the problem, could be given. The proper thing would be to have a proper analysis made to determine the cause of the pollution and then he promised, he would endeavor to have made as soon as possible.

Mr. Vaughan Groom told the gathering that he recently had talked to Mr. W.S. Lee, consultant engineer of the City of Montreal, who had suggested that the installation of storage tanks at each end of the Town which would dump automatically twice a day with the outflowing water would cost approximately $50,000.00 and if it was desired to chlorinate the water also, that could be done at a cost of $20,000.00 a year.

Mr. Pequegnat was introduced by Mr. Morley M. Bell, M.L.A. Also present were Messrs. J. G. Delaney, John Y. Phillips, Leigh Stewart of the Water and Sewage Commission, Stanley Waugh, Town engineer and W.B. McNoll.

New Light On McNaughton Incident Bared

TORONTO, April 26. (CP)—Permission to visit Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton by Sir Harold Alexander, now Viscount Alexander, Governor-General of Canada, according to a version of the incident related by an aide to Gen. Dwight Eisenhower in a personal diary just published in book form.

The author, Capt. Harry C. Butcher, U.S.N.R., in his volume "My Three Years with Eisenhower," says that in Tunisia on July 17, 1943, Gen. McNaughton spoke to Gen. Eisenhower about the refusal, but that the latter told Gen. Alexander "adamantly" taking the view that the Canadian Commander-in-Chief "had no business coming here during an operation."

It had been known that Gen. McNaughton was refused permission to land in Sicily at that time but the reasons generally been attributed to Gen. Montgomery, then commanding the Eighth Army, to which the Canadian First Division under Maj.-Gen. Guy Simmonds was attached.

Confirmed by McNaughton. The Toronto Star says that Gen. McNaughton confirmed this by long-distance telephone, saying "What is past is past and I have a feeling that questions that may have caused ill-feeling once, but are now forgotten, are best left at rest."

The newspaper quoted Gen. McNaughton further: "I have not read Captain Butcher's book. If after studying the text I find comment would be clarifying, I will probably prepare a statement, but I think it likely history will deal properly with it."

Butcher's diary entry dated at Amilcar, Tunisia, July 18, 1943—eight days after the invasion of Sicily—says that on the previous evening Gen. McNaughton "spoke" to Ike about the refusal of Gen. Alexander to permit him and his immediate staff to visit the Canadian Division in Sicily. Ike had already arranged for McNaughton to go as far as Malta but had told him he would have to get permission of the 15th Army Group to proceed to Sicily. When this permission was firmly declined by Alexander, McNaughton's pride obviously was hurt and he claimed that no matter how quiet he kept about the affair it was bound eventually to come out and had already reached the importance of support his subordinate commander, who with Montgomery has the final say-so on entry into Eighth Army area.

(On July 15, 1943, Mr. Mackenzie King told the House of Commons that President Roosevelt, at his request, had instructed that Canadian troops be mentioned in early communications on the Allied attack on Sicily. He said it had been the opinion of military authorities in Great Britain that no reference should be made to Canadians participating in the assault.)

The situation had later been discussed with Gen. J. C. M. Whiteley, deputy chief of staff, who sided with Alexander.

According to Butcher, Eisenhower felt Alexander was not giving sufficient weight to the problem of a democracy conducting a war. "It is obvious," he said, "that the Canadian public needs inspiration and some means should be worked out for accommodating McNaughton. Said he might be told that we would put him ashore with rations in Sicily on the Canadian beach and let him thumb a ride to the divisional headquarters, arrival this month."

Butcher continues: "He found Alexander adamant. Gen. McNaughton had no business coming here during an operation and that while he had treated McNaughton politely, if he had been a senior officer he would have placed him under arrest. Said that when he was ashore in Sicily there was no transportation, that he had thumbed a ride on a lorry carrying rations, and that he knew Montgomery's 8th Army Headquarters had only one car. In view of the critical shortage of transportation, he had the nuisance to busy staff officers to look after the Canadian Commander-in-Chief, he positively would not grant McNaughton's request."

"He pointed out the danger involved, the importance of Canada in the war, and cited the incident of Premier Mackenzie King making a public statement in the House of Commons in Ottawa, claiming the British Government and Ike had intended to prevent release of the fact the Canadians were in the Sicilian invasion, indicative of a chin-on-the-shoulder attitude. But since Alexander was so insistent, he felt constrained to

Government-General's Position Difficult

OTTAWA, April 26. (CP)—Field Marshal Viscount Alexander's position as Governor-General was seen today as making it difficult for him to answer a statement that he refused Gen. McNaughton permission to visit Canadian troops in Sicily in 1943.

A government official said it would not be constitutional for a Governor-General to make any replying statement in the press. Any inference of lingering effects of any such Alexander-McNaughton incident seemed to be set aside by the new Governor-General's action in inviting Gen. McNaughton to a Government House dinner within the first few days of his arrival in 1943.
