CAPITOL

SUMMERSIDE

U.S. President

insert in the congressional record the recent speech of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh urging a position of strict neutrality in the present crisis.

Chairman Pittman (Dem-Newada) of the foreign relations committee, objected. Later, when the senate voted against Mr. Roosevelt's amendment, the Lindbergh text was inserted. Pittman explained his purpose was merely to preserve the first place in the record for Mr. Roosevelt's address.

The senators encountered an unexpected curbs of anti-repeal opinion on their way to the house chamber. A crowd of Philadelphia had gathered under the capital rotunda.

Energetically waving small American flags they shouted at the passing senators: "no cash and carry" "don't touch the embargo" "we want no more of that kind of thing." The group was closely watched by an augmented detail of capital police.

Unusual precautions were taken to insure the president's safety, to the point of searching nearby shrubbery to be certain it contained nobody.

ROOSEVELT TURNS TO FIGHT

Returning to the White House, Mr. Roosevelt turned at once to the task of his neutrality program.

He talked to Senator Glass, a veteran opponent of the president on most other issues, but his firm supporter on this one. Then, Senator Barkley (Dem-Kentucky), Senator Minton (Dem-Indiana), and Senator Brynes (Dem-South Carolina) entered the presidential office.

They discussed the president's democratic leader and assistant leader and Brynes is to join them in carrying the brunt of the battle.

Almost simultaneously the foes of the president's policies were meeting at the capitol. Twenty-four senators, two Farmer-Laborists, Democrats, two Farmer-Laborists, and one Progressive. They discussed strategy, but all they would say affirmatively was "we would be no filibuster—a thorough debate and I will take some time"—but "no filibuster."

WILL CONTINUE TODAY

Tomorrow, it was announced, Mr. Roosevelt's conferences will continue with the senators. McNary (Rep-Oregon) and Austin (Rep-Oregon) and the Republican leader and assistant leader, and a third from Senator Connally (Dem-Texas) who supports the president's position. Austin is for the president's program, McNary against it.

Their scheduled conference was in line with the president's recent call for an "adjustment" of politics, a point which he stressed again in today's message.

These perilous days demand cooperation between us without trace of partisanship. Our acts must be guided by one single headed thought—keeping America out of this war."

REFERENCES TO WAR

The address included many references to the war abroad, without a single mention of any country participating in it. The speech reminded many hearers, however, of a fundamental point in the controversy which will be thoroughly and probably more explicitly explored in the coming debate.

France: The repeal of the embargo would permit Great Britain and France to buy arms, ammunition and airplanes in the United States. At the same time British supremacy at sea would prevent German purchases. Administration spokesmen contend that the embargo unethically deprives Great Britain of the advantage of buying arms at sea, and by act of congress provides France with the equivalent of an Atlantic fleet. The opposition contends that, nevertheless, to make a change at this time would be considered an unethical act by Germany involving retaliations which might invite the United States in the war.

Hitler's Idea

Hitler, Sir Neville continued, said "It was England who was fighting for lesser races whereas he (Hitler) was fighting only for Germany." He said that when he was in the last man; it would have been different in 1914 if he had been Chancellor then.

During the interview, Sir Neville reported Hitler observed that Britain had forced him into an agreement with Russia. Sir Neville said Hitler "did not seem enthusiastic over it but added that when he made an agreement it would be for a long period. The text of the agreement signed confirms this and I shall be surprised if it is anything more than mere non-aggression."

Sidelights

O'her sidelights on Hitler given in Sir Neville's reports:—"Among various points mentioned by Hitler was the fact that the winner of another European War would be Japan; that he was by nature an artist and once the Polish question was settled he would regard his life as an artist and not as a warmonger."

Hitler said: "His army was ready and eager for battle" and the final communication from the German Government—"The German Government had declared war—said the German Government and the German people refused to receive, secret, let alone to fulfil demands in the nature of ultimatums made by the British Government."

If the planet Jupiter was reduced to the size of an orange, the earth, reduced to the same scale, would be the size of a pea.

House Of Lords

Told Canada "Determined"

LONDON, Sept. 21.—(CP Cable)—Viscount Maughan, who was in Canada when the crisis broke, told the House of Lords today he had found people in all parts of the Dominion "absolutely fixed in their determination to stand by this country if the crisis which then existed should lead to war."

The peer, who was Lord Chancellor prior to the cabinet reorganization at the outbreak of war, said he came to certain conclusions which "might have surprised Herr Hitler."

There was no doubt whatever of the determination of the Canadian people, Lord Maughan added.

So far as I know there is no example in all history so striking and so moving as the example set by those Dominions overseas, unless in 1914.

Cheers greeted Lord Snell, Labor, when he referred to the "truly to the cause of freedom of the great free peoples of the British Commonwealth."

"Apart from the material and physical help they have given, their recognition that they can do no other thing sustains and comforts us far more than they know."

Lord Snell said: "The Old Mother of free peoples cannot be either wrong or friendless when she is so valiantly supported by her free children."

Ottawa Will Handle Sale Of Canadian Cheese

OTTAWA, Sept. 21.—It is the intention of the Dominion Government to set up machinery to handle the sale of Canadian cheese to the United Kingdom, Agriculture Minister Gardiner announced tonight.

"Negotiations have already been limited and arrangements will be made to make sure that the additional shipping and insurance charges due to war conditions will not recoup upon the producer," the Minister said.

Mr. Gardiner urged that farmers should not shift from cheese production to butter production or vice-versa at this time in the hope of making great profit. Increased butter production, he said, "can only result in a reduced price for butter because of a glut on the home market." Practically all Canadian butter is consumed in Canada, while 66 per cent of Canadian cheese is exported, mostly to Great Britain.

At the last regular session of Parliament, the Government placed a premium on cheese to encourage production of cheese rather than divert butter fat to butter production.

Cover the dish in the usual way and decorate with pastry leaves. Bake in a fairly hot oven for 20-25 minutes. Serve with salad.

Other headache causes noted were: Loud voices, the presence of unpleasant tastes, dislike of other people, depression, worry, insomnia and insults.

Succession Duty Act Under Fire In Ontario

TORONTO, Sept. 21.—(CP)—Matters are waiting by Premier Hepburn against any opposition attempt at filibuster, the Ontario legislature moved towards prorogation today. Adjournments was made with indications a conservative attack on the highly contentious Succession duty act would be conducted without delay, paving the way for prorogation of the special wartime session tomorrow.

Conservative leader George Drew, maintaining his right to criticize the tax measure, announced that after his followers finished their clause-by-clause criticism they would debate the measure on third reading.

With this assurance, Premier Hepburn said it appeared likely the bill would be introduced in any British parliament. Under his leadership, the Conservatives began individual criticism of each of the bill's sections, but at adjournment had dealt with about half of them.

Col. Drew termed the government bill "one of the most vicious and open handed schemes introduced in any British parliament." Under his leadership, the Conservatives began individual criticism of each of the bill's sections, but at adjournment had dealt with about half of them.
