A TRAMP called at the house of Widow Henderson of Bluefield the other day and asked for some dinner. The widow immediately began to prepare it and went to the yard for some chips for the fire. On her return to the house she found the miserable scamp had opened her cupboard, stolen the poor widow's purse containing $4, all the money she had and had fled. People would do well to be on their guard against this fellow. He is about 5 feet 6 inches in height, dark eyes and complexion, and with a cut on his face. He appeared to be a halloo.

From all parts of the Island we are receiving expressions of commendation, and wonder at the quality and prices of our Exhibition Suites. Mark Wright & Co, Ltd. Oct. 8-31

THE slaughter dry goods sales have created quite a commotion, and even before breakfast excited bargain hunters may be seen trudging off to ransack the counters. Yesterday several stores had to close their doors for a time, owing to the crowds.

PRINCE COUNTY THIS TIME.—Tyne Valley Heard From: "I have concluded to order the Suite of Parlor Furniture and Table, at the price mentioned, viz, fifty-nine dollars." The above is from a letter received from a lady who saw our Exhibition Suites. We lead in this line. Mark Wright & Co, Ltd. Oct. 8-31

THERE was a big fight near North River Bridge on the evening of the last day of the exhibition. Three brothers, belonging somewhere near Crabbe's corner, were returning home from the city badly intoxicated, when they got into a row. The three got out of the wagon and hammered each other for some time until the crowd which gathered separated them, put one in the wagon and sent him off home, leaving the other two to walk a distance of some fourteen miles. They started off hatless and coatless, arm in arm. People from the country say the drunkenness on the roads leaving from the city is worse than it has been for many years.

THE Rev. Allan B. MacNeill, a native of Charlottetown, P. E. Island, who by diligence and prudence, is a self-educated young man, has attained to the position of an orator of no mean order. On the 4th of July, 1892, at the grand celebration at the town of Elizabeth, Colorado, Mr. MacNeill was chosen the orator of the day. Trains from Denver, Melvin and Parker brought hundreds of passengers to the celebration. The Declaration of Independence was read by county school superintendent Lindaley—after which the Rev. Allen B. MacNeill, of New York, was introduced as the speaker for the occasion. His address was a splendid effort of oratorical power, full of patriotic sentiment and love of country, which made every person present feel cheerful, happy and proud that he was an American citizen. The Rev. gentleman was frequently cheered during his address, and many declared that it was the best 4th of July oration they had ever heard.—Elizabeth Banner. The Rev. Mr. MacNeill is son of the late Luchlin MacNeill, of Tryon. His many friends on the Island will be glad to hear of his success. He is stationed in the city of New York laboring as a missionary of the Presbyterian church.

bite of sorrow, is there no herb growing by all the brooks to heal the poison? Blessed be God that in the Gospel we find the antidote? Christ has bottled an ocean of tears. How many thorns He hath plucked out of human agony! Oh! He knows too well what it is to carry a cross, not to help us carry ours. Blessed Jesus, Thou knowest it all. Seeing Thy wounded side, and Thy wounded hand, and Thy wounded feet, and Thy wounded brow, we are sure Thou knowest it all. Oh! when those into whose bosom we used to breathe sorrows are snatched from us, blessed be God the heart of Jesus still beats; and when all other lights go out and the world gets dark, then we see coming out from behind a cloud something so bright and cheering, we know it to be the morning star of the soul's deliverance. The hand of care may make you stagger, or the hand of persecution may beat you down, or the hand of disappointment may beat you back; but there is a Hand, and it is so kind and it is so gentle, that it wipe all tears from all faces.

LETTERS TO EDITOR.

Fall Poetry.

Sir,—I notice by the Examiner that a new rival has sprung up to dispute Swinburne's claim to the post laureateship. As his poetry is somewhat beyond the average conception, however, will he condescend to explain to inferior mortals how his voice could be choked with tears,—how he could watch a ship's reeding keel, and how his strained eyes could "wonder when we'll meet again."
