Peat Superstitions
In the Highlands of Scotland the coal strike led to unusual activity along the line of peat cutting. Stacks of peat are to be seen bigger and higher than ever seen before.

Stacks of peat clods are commonly seen near the heather-bordered marshes so frequently met with, on the Scottish moors. They may be anything from six to twelve feet high, and are very often picturesquely built round a tree.

Where trees are numerous the larger the colony of peat stacks is likely to be, for a trunk considerably strengthens the pile of clods and leaves protect it from rain and wind. When the clods are thoroughly dry (they require long exposure to the open air, or they are often saturated with the brown water of the peat-gaie) carts and barrows are used to bring them to their destination.

Sometimes, when the roads are bad, women carry the fuel home in huge baskets strapped on their backs. This is particularly the case in Shetland, where the women industriously knit on their journeys to and from the peat-gaies.

Many are the superstitions connected with peat-burning, in the life of the true Celt the peat-fire was, and to a lesser degree still is, a hallowed relic. On his birth he was perhaps handed over the fire to avert the influence of the evil eye, in accordance with a time-honored Celtic custom.

A hazing peat carried in the tons round the bed where mother and child lay was another ritual seldom neglected in a superstitious household. Here again the object was to avert the evil eye. Any friends who were present at the time used to eat some "blithe meat," a mixture of meal and water, which was supposed to be a sacrifice to propitiate the powers of evil. This, however, was held to be useless, unless the meat had been previously passed over the smoldering fire.

"Smoking" the fire was another ritual connected with the blithe. Its observance shows the absurd reverence paid to the peat fire. The embers were first spread out in a circle on the hearth, and the circle was then divided into three parts representing the God of Life, the God of Peace, and the God of Grace. With due regard to the profound sanctity of the ceremony, ashes were piled on the whole and the following incantation pronounced softly:—

"The sacred three, to save, to shield, to surround
The hearth, the house, the household;
This eve, this night, oh, this eve,
And every night, this single night,
Amen."
How sacred the fire was held to be may be judged from the fact that tramping out a neighbor's hearth flame was a crime equal to murder in Celtic eyes. At least as late as the 17th century, it was held to be a crime to trample on the peat fire, because he trampled "his neighbor's hearth flame out." This idea of wronging a neighbor by interfering with his fire is a very persistent one; many a Highlander still says sarcastically to a person who is saying a brief visit, "Was it to grow your fire you came?" When a death occurs in a Celtic home it is the custom to leave the ashes of the dead one should be injured on his journey. This belief persists in one of the best-known of the many Gaelic proverbs connected with peat burning: "Who steals the fire steals the blessing."

Prohibition Law Declared Failure
LONDON, Oct. 21.—The defeat of prohibition in Norway's plebiscite of Monday, elicits varied editorial comments from some London newspapers.

The Dally Mail says that the Norwegian prohibition law, "like that of America," has been a failure and has led to "increased drunkenness, evasion and law-breaking."
He refers to "attempts to change human nature by means of legislation," and asserts that, in no country where prohibition has been tried had it been "even reasonably efficacious."

The Dally Chronicle says Norway's prohibition "challenged the sporting spirit of the opposition" and resulted in hard drinking.
The Westminster Gazette thinks Sweden's experiment of rationing spirits is the most promising of the schemes for drink control yet tried.

25th Anniversary Royal Aero Club
LONDON, Oct. 21.—The Royal Aero Club, which recently celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary, came into being in a balloon. F. Hedges Butler, speaking at the celebration, said that with his daughter Vera, and the Hon. C. S. Rolls, he made a balloon ascent from the Crystal Palace, September 24, 1901 in the balloon "City of York" piloted by Stanley Spencer. While in the air it was suggested and decided that an aero club be formed.

This small club in the course of time became the parent of the Flying Corps, afterwards the Royal Flying Corps and now the Royal Air Force. At the early pioneers in the army and navy learned to fly in machines belonging to members of the club, because the army and navy at that period did not own a single aeroplane.

F. Hedges Butler won the first three Royal Aero Club balloon races, 1906-07, and has made more than a hundred free balloon ascents.

OTTAWA TORIERS LABEL GUTHRIE "JUST STOPGAP"
OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 20.—The aftermath of the Conservative caucus held here last Monday would appear to be a feeling that the party are in a sorry state, and not by any means conducive toward an early resuscitation of the party's fortunes which at the present time it is realized are fairly low.

Conservative members who lingered at Ottawa, following the caucus, while not so outspoken as T. L. Church of Toronto, who declared in Toronto last night that a "True Blue Conservative" and not a party cast-off should lead the party, are in agreement that Mr. Guthrie is in a stop gap.

"Mr. Meighen needs a rest," said one of these. "I predict that he will be back again in harness within five months. It will not take the party long to realize that in spite of the reverses he encountered he is the one best man to lead the Conservative party. What is needed is a True Blue Conservative policy and less catering to Quebec."

By another member the opinion was expressed that R. B. Bennett, while declining the temporary leadership, "will also be a most formidable contender for the convention. Strangely enough, however, western men are not inclined to favor Mr. Bennett as leader. They claim that out there his well known connection with big interests would be highly prejudicial to him and the party. On the other hand, his former stand on the Alberta school question, it is thought, would weaken him in Quebec, where there appears to be a growing feeling among members of the party that less attention in the future should be paid to that province."

Sir Henry Drayton was not a serious candidate for the position of temporary leader. Sir Henry is leaving for purposes of health recuperation, his destination, it is said, being Algiers, where French is spoken fluently. Sir Henry has many claims for the position of leader and it is regarded as certain that he will be a serious contender for the position of leader.

American Politicians
WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 21.—Close and doubtful is the verdict of most competent judges here to date concerning the campaign now on for the control of the Senate and House which will end with the elections early in November. Both Republicans and Democrats are claiming victory in advance but the fact is the outcome is highly uncertain.

On the fact of things, the Republicans stand a better show to retain control of the House than of the Senate. Their chances to more than even. As to the Senate, the fight thus stands about one-fifty.

Senator Borah of Idaho, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, and a keen politician, just back from the west, says the Republicans have a hard fight to keep control of the Senate but he thinks they will be able to keep that control. He bases this view largely on what he knows of the election prospects in the far west.

The Democrats in order to gain the Senate will have to make a net gain of nine seats. This will not be easy to do. The Republicans will undergo some losses. That is conceded. But a net gain of nine seats would be a heavy blow and a democratic triumph of unusual proportions. Impartial political observers find difficulty in figuring just where the Democrats will get the net gain of nine.

The Republican senators who are having the hardest fights are in Massachusetts, where the Maryland, Ernest in Kentucky, Willis in Ohio, Williams in Missouri, Harold in Oklahoma, Oddie in Nevada, Cameron in Arizona and Gooding in Idaho. The Republican nominee, Steiwer, in Oregon, also faces trouble. It is not inconceivable that the Republicans will lose none of these candidates, but what is more likely to happen is that they will lose six or seven of them. This would leave the Senate closely divided among the old parties, with the insurgent Republicans holding the balance of power.

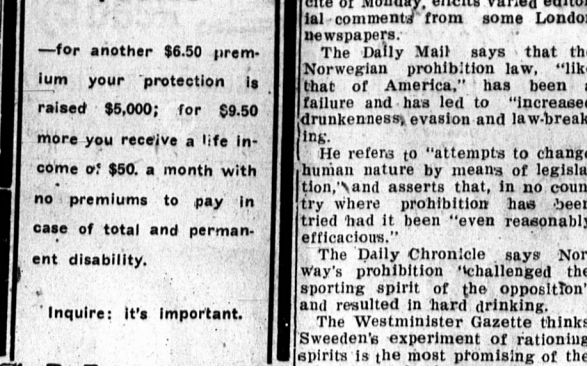

Harvard Freshmen Are Photographed
CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 21.—Harvard has a new kind of Rogues' Gallery. If it may be assumed that freshmen are rogues. For every freshman this year is being carefully photographed, not in such a way that his facial characteristics may be on record for a future generation to see, but that his heart and lungs and the general contour of his body may be on record for the physical director to examine.

The heart and lungs pictures are taken by x-ray, while the general contour pictures are silhouettes. The pictures are taken as a part of the strict physical examination required of every student entering Harvard, although this is the first year that this part of the examination has been made. It is planned to continue it in the future.

The x-ray photographs of the freshmen's chests have been made. It is expected that they will give information about the hearts and lungs of the students that will prove invaluable aids to the regular physical examinations. The silhouettes are calculated to show the defects of posture, and start its benefits today. Every drug store has it for only 50c. French Writer Not Impressed With N. Y.
PARIS, Oct. 21.—Jacques Deval, a French writer who has just returned from the United States, describes New York in Le Journal as a "mass of banality, incapable of being complimented, describable in figures only, and a city of abstinence and desolation."

"Outside Central Park," he informed his stay-at-home countrymen, "all the trees and verdure of this city of six million souls could be put in a florist shop. There are no birds on the roofs, no dogs in the streets, no cats in the doorways, no flowers in the windows, no smiles on the faces of inhabitants."

"New York is the saddest, and most exhausting city in the world. There is no way to live happily there. Each morning I opened my newspaper, as heavy as a telephone directory, tearing to read a notice: 'In broad daylight a man smiled in the street; the police intervened.'"

Condition Unchanged
OTTAWA, Oct. 21.—Although confined to his bed the condition of Right Hon. W. S. Fielding, veteran Canadian statesman, has not changed in the past six weeks and there is no cause for alarm. His daughter, Miss Fielding interviewed at the Fielding home this afternoon, said that her father felt brighter on some days than on others, but was not more ill than he has been for a considerable time.

The following reference will be of interest here as Mr. Askin referred to is a son of the late Mr. John Askin of Kelly's Cross and a brother of Mrs. Allan MacDonald of Klinkora, formerly of Charlottetown, and also of Mrs. Rose Munn of this city. He is another successful islander.

WEST NEWBURY, Oct. 8.—The coronation of blessing the foundation in accord with the ritual of the church took place yesterday afternoon at the property of the House of Angel Guardian on Pipe-stave Hill, where the new three-story building is to be erected at a cost of $250,000 for the accommodation of 250 boys between the ages of 8 and 12.

After the blessing which was in charge of Rev. Fr. Alman, Superior, Rev. Fr. Cleophas, secretary, and the ground was broken with a steam shovel for the foundation of the building, which will be 209 feet long and 85 feet, 9 inches wide, of colonial style and made of water struck brick with stone thinning and slate roof.

The architect is Edward T. P. Graham of Boston who designed the annex to the Boston City Hall, the Forsyth Dental Infirmary of Boston, Saint Elizabeth Hospital and many churches in this state and elsewhere. The contract for the building is in the hands of Askin & Sullivan of Boston, while James E. Watkins of Amesbury has the contract for the excavating for the foundation.

Mersey's Mammoth Tunnel
The great tunnel about to be built under the great Mersey, linking Liverpool with Birkenhead and adjacent towns on the south bank of the river will be the largest in existence. It will have an internal diameter of forty-four feet, and will be built of cast iron with a lining of concrete, the space between the cast iron and the sandstone rock being filled with a mixture of cement and lime forced in under pressure.

The main roadway on the upper deck will be thirty-six feet wide, and will accommodate two lines of traffic going in either direction. In the lower deck there will be a double set of tram-lines, says Answell.

The narrowest part of the river where the tunnel is to be built, varies in breadth from 3,000 to 3,600 feet, but the approaches to the tunnel will be the greater part of a mile in length.

The estimated cost of the tunnel is 27,000,000 pounds or about 6,000,000 pounds less than that of a bridge, the plans for which were rejected. Apart from the excessive cost, a bridge possesses several drawbacks not met with in a headroom required to allow present day mammoth liners to pass underneath. This great weight would have involved longer or steeper gradients, in which respect the approaches would have had to be a mile in length on either side.

MYSTERY LADY HELPS WESTERN ANGLICANS
REGINA, Sask., Oct. 20.—Anglicans in Saskatchewan are to-day paying honor to a "good fairy." After providing $140,000 for the purpose of erecting a home for Canadian and British normal students in training, completing the construction of St. Matthew's church here and building a home for the Bishop of Qu'Appelle, the benefactress has now turned to helping the far flung northern diocese of Saskatchewan.

Although the donor has given a fortune to church work in Regina, all that is known of the person is that she is a woman and that she lives in England. She has expressly stipulated in making her gifts that she remains anonymous. The woman's solicitor, S. J. Attenborough, came all the way to Regina from London, England, to hand over the keys to the latest building erected by his client.

Mr. Attenborough was in Prince Albert last week end and discussed with Rev. G. Exton Lloyd, Bishop of Saskatchewan, the needs of the far Saskatchewan diocese. No intimation was given concerning any proposals, but Mr. Attenborough will return to England with concrete ideas as to the needs of the northern headquarters.

It was almost two years ago when the benefactress made it known that she wished to advance financial aid to the projects contemplated by the Qu'Appelle diocese. Through Mr. Attenborough, the means were despatched to commence the first building, the Maple Leaf Hostel, a home for normal students.

When here one year ago, the solicitor made it known that his client wished to further help the diocese and thus commenced the construction of the handsome bishop's court and St. Matthew's church. Mr. Attenborough leaves to-day
