LAVISH SCENES IN

Cecil B. DeMille's Production

'MANSLAUGHTER'

At the Prince Edward Wednesday and Thursday.

"The most lavish scene since Joan the Woman!" That's what is said of the Roman bacchanal recently staged by Cecil B. DeMille for his latest Paramount production of "Manslaughter." Several years ago the same producer gave to the screen his classic tale of the Maid of Orleans. At that time thousands of "extras," clad in the picturesque costumes of the period, were to be seen daily around the studio and on the massive sets created for that picture. Since that date there have been many huge scenes filmed at the West Coast home of Paramount Pictures. Hundreds and even thousands of people have worked untirelessly before the cameras. But it remained for Cecil B. DeMille to again set a new mark for sheer, spectacular splendor. And he did it with the Roman scenes in "Manslaughter."

Fifty Years On The American Turf

At the instance of the New York Jockey Club, Mr. W.S. Vosburgh has written an outline of horse racing in the United States in the past fifty years. For more than half that period Mr. Vosburgh has served as a racing official and has first hand knowledge of practically all the horses he writes about. No man in America is better qualified for the task than Mr. Vosburgh, for he has been a lover and student of horses all his life, besides being an accomplished wielder of a pen. He is no mere dispassionate chronicler of events, either, but does not hesitate to express his own views or even his own prejudices when discussing individual horses. For instance, he is not quite so enthusiastic about "Man o' War" as most present-day writers. The Riddle horse was undoubtedly a great one, but he was given his present position as a record money earner through the kindness of our fellow citizen, Mr. Abe Orpen, who offered a $75,000 purse for the race between Man o' War and Sir Barton. The latter horse was not fit to race the day he did, and perhaps there were a dozen other colts that could have beaten him besides Man o' War.

Mr. Vosburgh is probably of opinion that the greatest race horse in the past half century was Sysonby, owned by the late James R. Keene, sired in England, but born in the United States. Sysonby, like Man o' War, lost one race, and that as a two-year-old, but Artful who beat him then could never be induced to start against him again. It was said of Sysonby by experts at the time, that he could beat any horse in America at any distance from a hundred yards to a hundred miles. When he died suddenly, it is related that his stern owner shed tears. Sysonby's skeleton now stands in the American Museum of Natural History. Mr. Vosburgh does not think so highly of Colin, another of Mr. Keene's champions, though he had a remarkable record and is of opinion that Celt, a stable companion was a better animal.

The book is full of stories of the romances of the turf. It tells once more the remarkable story of Morvich, the despised little selling plater that came out of the West in the Spring of 1921, and won a fortune for a novice who had never owned a race horse before, ending his two-year-old career as the unbeaten hero of a decade. He was hailed by some enthusiasts as a greater horse than Man o' War. This year, however, he was a bitter disappointment. In 1921 his owner, Benjamin Block, scored thirteen victories to one defeat. This year he had one victory and thirteen defeats. Some twenty-five years ago Morello was the hero of the turf. He was bought for $110, won fourteen out of seventeen races his first year and earned $80,000. Then there was Yorkville Belle, thought for $1,200, a winner of $79,000 in two years and sold for $24,000 at auction. Another tremendous bargain was Hamburg, bought for $1,200, a winner of $40,000 as a two-year-old and sold for another $40,000. He subsequently proved one of the best sires in the United States.

Johren. As a colt it was said that he was clumsy and loose jointed and could neither gallop, canter or walk. He was named in derision after a German saloonkeeper on Long Island, who was noted for his curious appearance. Johren's trainer, one of the most astute in the business, said that the colt was not worth training, but he had the most important thing a race horse can have—speed. He almost forced the trainer to work on him. Then it seemed as though the original opinion about him was correct, for Johren lost nine races. Suddenly he struck his stride and in one season captured the Suburban, the Belmont, the Latonia Derby, the Belmont Handicap, the Saratoga Cup and the Realization. These, of course, are the high spots of racing and for every Morvich of 1921, there are three Morviches of 1922. For a horse that costs a hundred dollars and wins $50,000 in purses, there are half a dozen horses that cost $20,000 and never win a race.

Two of the great horses of the early period covered by Mr. Vosburgh were Virgil and Eolus, both discovered while hauling buggies and both destined to establish mighty lines of racers. In 1822 and Eolus, fought a historic duel for the Brighton Cup at two and a quarter miles. It was Hindoo's last race and he won. After the owner of the beaten horse said to Dwyer brothers, owners of Hindoo:

"Come over to the Union Club, and I will match Eole against Hindoo for $5,000 a side to run the race over." To this the democratic Dwyers replied. "Come over to our butcher shop. We will match Hindoo against Eole for $10,000 a side to run the race over." Hindoo was never the same horse again, and such was the influence of these Brooklyn butchers on the turf a generation ago that when they announced they would never again run a horse over a Cup distance, the once famous long distance races were abandoned.

MAKING MORE MOISTURE. In addition to adding plant food to the soil and improving its texture, organic matter, supplied by green manure crops, stable manure, or in any other form, adds greatly to the moisture-holding capacity. It has been shown that while 100 pounds of sand can hold only 25 pounds of water and 100 pounds of clay 50 pounds, the same weight of humus or decaying organic matter will hold 190 pounds. Clay soil containing organic matter is more friable than similar soil without organic matter. The organic matter is entirely removed the clay remains compact during freezing and thawing. When the organic matter is returned the soil crumbles after freezing, just as the organic soil. Not only do the higher plants grow better in a soil rich in organic matter, but the activities of the soil bacteria are largely dependent on the supp of decaying vegetable matter. These bacteria need food and air. Their food is the dead vegetables matter, which break down and make available to the higher plants. Most beneficial bacteria use air, and this they find more abundantly in a soil supplied with organic matter than in stiff clays poor in it. In sandy soils there is air enough, but the addition of humus helps to hold moisture and so benefits the bacteria as well as the higher plant.

LOOSE HAY HARD TO HANDLE. Loose hay is a bulky product and extremely difficult to handle in large quantities. Before the practice of pressing hay into bales became common it was difficult and expensive to transport this feed except to the extent of leading it on wagons and hauling it to a nearby town or city. As a result the matter of supply and demand was quiet largely local, and frequent there was wide variation in prices offered in different localities. With the coming of the hay press, it was possible to put hay into bales which were easily handled, greatly reducing the space required for a given amount of hay, and making it possible to transport hay for long distances at costs which were not prohibitive. Nothing To Equal. MINARD'S "KING OF PAIN" LINIMENT. For Sprains and Bruises. The first thing to do when you have an injury is to apply Minard's famous Liniment. It is antiseptic. Eye Strain. When the first message that glasses are needed is flashed from the optic nerve, too many people ignore the warning. They fail to see an optometrist at once, and go on using their eyes as formerly, suffering from acute headaches and pain round the eyes. They do not realize that they require the aid of spectacles if they are to avoid very serious eye trouble. Be prepared to encounter defective eyesight as you grow older, and visit a good optometrist periodically, whether your eyes are hurting you or not. That is the only advice that can be given to people who have good eyesight and wish to preserve it. Consult DR. E. C. HARRIS, Optometrist. Office Hours: 9.30 to 12.30, 1.30 to 5.00. J. W.
