WELL DONE!—Mr. J. L. McGregor, formerly of Montague, and now of Winnipeg, Manitoba, has recently proved himself to be among the best sportsmen in his city. At the annual field day of the Winnipeg Christian Endeavor Union held at the City Park some days ago he won first prize in one of the most keenly contested events, the high jump, and was second in every other event in which he entered, though he competed with a large number of the best athletes of Manitoba. Some of the events in which he took part were the hundred yards dash, the 880 yards, the 440 yards, the standing broad jump and putting the 12 lb. shot. Mr. McGregor secured the individual honours of the day, as will be seen by the following paragraph which appeared in the Manitoba Free Press in reference to the sports:—"Miss Anna Kennedy, of Broadway Baptist, almost landed the individual honours of the day, which went to J. L. McGregor, of First Baptist. Miss Kennedy was handicapped in this respect by the fact that there were three events less in the ladies' series than in the men's. As it was, she came within two points of the lead, McGregor making 11 points."

WEDDING BELLS.—Miss Marion S. Crafer, daughter of Mr Robert Crafer, Malpeque, P.E.I., and C. F. Cline, a San Diego motor cycle officer, were married at the home of the bride's cousin, Mrs James Sinclair, 2439 J Street, Thursday noon by Mr. H. R. W. E. Crabtree. The single ring service was used, says San Diego Union. Mr Elwin Ely was best man, and Miss Thursie Goble attended the bride. After a wedding breakfast, the couple left by automobile for ten days at Palomar. They will be at Palomar Maroon street after October 3. The bride wore a gown of white embroidery and carried a large bride's bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid was dressed in pale yellow. Mrs Cline is a native of Prince Edward Island, Canada. She came to San Diego about a year ago, and was just about to return when she met with an injury in an automobile accident, and has been here ever since. It was at the time of the accident that she first met her husband, although the romance did not begin in earnest until long afterward. Mr Cline is one of the best liked members of San Diego's "finest." His brother policemen at headquarters were surprised to hear of his marriage last night when told by a Union reporter.

A SOCIALIST PROPHET

and at drill, in barracks and at play, the soldiers learn comradeship and acquire the spirit of collectivism. This is the great moral value of military training; this gives power and coherence to the people of Germany. The German nation is an army. The British nation is a mob of antagonistic, helpless atoms.

Compulsory military training would absorb a large percentage of the unemployed. It would find work for thousands who now have no work.

The building of warships and the making of docks and harbours would find work for the workers; and those who would pay who ought to pay, because they have the money.

Compulsory military service accustoms men to clean skins, clean clothing, clean beds, good food, proper lodgings. A nation of soldiers would not endure the slums. I saw no slums in Germany.

I think it would be well in this country first of all to pass compulsory serving Act for a limited number of years, say six. Two years' training would be enough, and all young men over twenty should be liable. But at first, in order to get a large force quickly, it would be advisable to take as many young men between the ages of eighteen and thirty as could be spared without disorganizing trade too much.

Such questions as that of sleeping in or out of barracks could be arranged very quickly. The military law should be entirely overhauled and much of it wiped out. Soldiers need not be treated like naughty children.

It would be advisable, also, to impose a code of moral restraints and safeguards, of which it is not necessary to speak here and now.

This army should be put under the direction of one man, and the man is Lord Kitchener. To him should be left also the arrangement of the plans of organization and mobilization. That is what Lord Kitchener was born for, and it would be a pity to waste him.

I believe, and I think most military men will agree, that in our often unsuccessful looking youth we have a material for the making of soldiers such as no nation could excel. I believe that, properly handled, our youth would train into one of the finest armies the world has seen.

The German Army is very good; the French Army is very good; but I hold to the belief that both are capable of much improvement. I believe we could make the best army in the world in a couple of years. But anything I know, or think I know, as to these matters is not for publication.

This much I will say: our Army should, as far as possible, live through the summer in cantonments: it be engaged in continual field training, under conditions as closely as possible approximated to the conditions of actual war. They should be scientifically and thoroughly taught the use of the rifle, and they should be trained to think and act for themselves.

On the day the King of Prussia was declared Emperor of Germany Britain ought to have adopted compulsory military service. Had we raised a proper army at that time, I think it is not too much to say that there would have been no Boer war, no Afghan war, no Russo-Turkish war, and no prospect of any war with Germany.

It is essential to the maintenance of the world's peace that Britain should be strong. Compulsory military training would make Britain strong: it would make for peace. Besides—the alternative is slavery.
